FORMER MAYOR STEWART TELLS OF WORK AT PLATTSBURG CAMP

Speaker Urges More Men to Take Advantage of Excellent Opportunities Offered to Form An Acquaintance in Military Matters—Tells of Personal Experiences—Boy Scouts in Charge of Meeting—Mayor Leighton Calkins Presided.

Many Plainfielders were last night given their first opportunity to become intimately acquainted with the much discussed purposes and accomplishments of the military training camp conducted at Plattsburg, N. Y., last summer, former Mayor Percy H. Stewart imparting the information in an interesting lecture in the Plainfield High School auditorium. The speaker, having spent two weeks at the experimental encampment, was well qualified to handle his subject and he gave many "inside" facts concerning the training of civilians.

During the course of his talk Mayor Stewart took occasion to commend briefly on America's preparedness for war, declaring that the military strength of this nation is inferior to that of any of the European belligerents. He said in part:

"The American naval aeroplane, one of the essentials of modern warfare, consists of twenty ships, while each of the nations engaged in the conflict across the water has within sands of them. On the other hand this country leads in the manufacture of airships and is shipping them to the belligerents at the rate of forty a day. We haven't any reserve supply of shells and it would take two and one-half years for American shops to turn out sufficient ammunition to enable us to cope with any one of the Allies. The work at Plattsburg strikingly brought out the need for military training and the development of the policy of preparedness."

Relative to his stay at the training camp Mayor Stewart said:

"The main object of the camp to the United States was simply the city of Plattsburg providing many needed facilities, while the equipment was that used by the regular army and borrowed for the summer. When he enters the camp each man made a deposit of $30, which went toward defraying expenses and the two weeks at Plattsburg did not cost any individual more than $40. We had regular detachments of cavalry, artillery and the signal corps from the United States army and the instruction given us was dispersed by experts in specific lines. We lived in six-men tents and our 'grub' house was similar in construction to that used in the regular army, containing long lines of tables and wooden

FLAG DROPPED ON Y. M. C. A. RACERS

Twenty-six Got Underway in Membership Contest Today.

200 ATTEND BANQUET

Enthusiastic Workers Promise to Go Over Limit of 800 New Members—First Report Will Be Made at Dinner Tonight—"Men, Not Money."

The big race is on. Twenty-four cars started in the event launched from the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. last night, and all are out on the tracks this morning to come in at the end of the first lap ahead of the field.

It will be an exciting six-day contest, and observers will have a daily opportunity of getting a line on the standing of the cars, as reports are to be posted each evening at the association building. No prophesy can be made as to the speed that will be attained by the drivers, but if enthusiasm and determination shown at last night's meeting, just before the checkered flag of Starter MacArt was dropped, can be counted, a world record for Y. M. C. A. memberships will be broken.

The automobile race, as most everyone in Plainfield knows by this time, and all will understand within a few short hours, is a contest for new members for the local Young Men's Christian Association. The twenty-

COMPLETING DETAILS FOR POLICE "EXAMS"

Councilmanic Board Plans to Fill Vacancies in Force at Once.

Chief of Police Kiely is completing details for the examinations to be held in the near future for department vacancies. A number of applications have already been received, but it is hoped that a number of others will participate in the tests. Several patrolmen will be added to the force at once, and the names of those who successfully pass the examinations and are not appointed for duty now will be kept on file, and will be given vacancies as they occur.

City Physician Norman W. Currie will have charge of the physical and mental tests, which will be held again in the gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A., and City Clerk James T. MacMurray will conduct the written examinations. The preliminary requirements this year will be similar to those of the past, and the men passing with the highest averages will be recommended by Mayor Calkins to the Council for appointment.

OYSTER SUPPER ADDS TO CHURCH BUILDING FUND

LADIES' AID SOCIETY HOLD ALL-DAY MEETING

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church held an interesting all-day meeting in the parlors of the church yesterday about fifty women attending. After the sewing session the missionary meeting took place, followed by a social time, during which Mrs. Frank Vail proved a charming hostess. Papers were read by the following: Mrs. John Groendyke, "The Mighty Task;" Mrs. John Abbott, "The Master Workman," and Mrs. Benjamin Hadley, "The Task of Our Church."

During the meeting a duet was beautifully rendered by the Misse Marion Louise and Lucille Casner. Their number was entitled "Sweeter As the Years Go By." Tea was served in conclusion.

One of the features of the missionary meeting was the reading of a letter by Mrs. D. N. Runyon from Mr. and Mrs. Frederickson, who recently talked at the Park Avenue church upon their mission work in Africa. The couple left here a number of weeks ago to resume their work, and the epistle was written while they were on board the Rochambeau, and when she was pursued by submarines. The Ladies' Aid Society supports the mission in Africa each year by sending a substantial sum to Mr and Mrs. Frederickson.

POLICE BELIEVE YOUTH A BURGLAR

Captain John J. Flynn Nabs Bradford Blauvelt for Assault on Wm. Grier.

ARRESTED IN NEW YORK

Said to Have Made Full Confession—Will Apply for Extradition Papers—Well Known Here as a Chauffeur.

Clever sleuthing on the part of Captain John J. Flynn in running down evidence secured by himself and Lieut. Maurice Higgins, of the local police force, last night resulted in the arrest of Bradford Blauvelt, twenty years old, formerly of this city, who confessed to committing an assault on William T. Grier, at the latter's home on West Seventh street on the night of November 3, he having gone to the house for the purpose of burglarizing it. Flynn followed a clue to New York city Wednesday morning and obtained evidence that warranted the apprehension of the former Plainfielder late yesterday afternoon. After being taken to a metropolitan police precinct the prisoner was put through a grilling by Flynn and broke down, admitting that he came to Plainfield election day to rob the home of his former employe, Andrew McCardell, who formerly lived in the house now occupied by Grier.

WELLESLY CLUB TO GIVE LOVING CUP

Prize Will Be Awarded Senior Girl at P. H. S. Who Makes Best Record.

Announcement was made at the Plainfield High School this morning that the Wellesley College Club, of Plainfield, has offered a loving cup to be awarded to the girl in the graduating class who makes the best record in scholarship, womanliness and athletics. The conditions will be similar to those under which the Plainfield Yale Club awards a cup each year to the boy making the best all-round record.

Miss Helen Fox, a Wellesley graduate, Class '15, who made the announcement at school this morning, made special mention of the fact that the idea had been developed with the one idea of providing an incentive for a girl to greater effort in all branches of school life. The club hopes that it will not only spur the girls to greater effort in studies, but also on leadership and athletics.

The winner each year is to be chosen by the faculty from the five girls of the senior class having the best qualifications necessary to compete for the cup. Only the records during the senior year are to count unless a tie results, when the junior year record will be considered.

ARTHUR MORELAND, WELL KNOWN ELK, SERIOUSLY ILL

It will be with sincere regret that local Elks, in common with those in all parts of the country, will learn of the serious illness of Arthur C. Moreland, editor and publisher of the Elks-Antler, leading organ of the order. Mr. Moreland in 1912 delivered the memorial address at the annual lodge of sorrows of Plainfield Lodge, B. P. O. E., and formed many warm personal friendships while here.

He is widely known in Elkdom throughout the United States as an orator and editor. He was stricken with gangrene a few weeks ago, which grew rapidly worse. He was removed to a hospital for an operation, but this has been deferred on account of his weakened condition.

TWO DAYS' BAZAAR.

The bazaar will be held in the Sunday school rooms at Grove street and Mercer avenue. A large assortment of fancy articles and aprons will be on sale as well as potted plants and home-made cakes. Coffee and cake will be served throughout the afternoon and evening.

LOCAL ELKS ENTERTAINED IN THEIR HEADQUARTERS

Members of Plainfield Lodge, No 885, B. P. O. E., enjoyed a social evening and dance in the Watchung avenue clubhouse last night, the evening being passed in a pleasant manner by about eighty couples. A program of music was furnished for the terpsichore exponents, and refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

This event was a forerunner of the usual winter series of entertainments, and its success assures the members of an active winter program of socials.

MISS MARGARET BUTLER'S FUNERAL HELD TODAY

The funeral of Miss Margaret Butler, the fifteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Butler, of West Third street, whose death occurred yesterday afternoon, was held from the mortuary parlors of J. J. and C. A. Higgins this morning, and the body was later shipped to Washington, D. C., where a funeral service will be held tomorrow morning in a Catholic church, of that place. The interment will take place in the Mt Olivet cemetery, at Washington.

Miss Butler was taken ill a week ago with an attack of meningitis which resulted in her death. She was a pupil in St. Mary's school and was unusually popular among the younger set of that institution. The news of her death has cast a gloom in the community in which she lived and all who knew the bright little girl mourn the fact of her untimely death.

BARN BURNS TO GROUND ON MENDELSOHN PROPERTY

A burning barn on the Mendelsohn property on Randolph road about 10 o'clock last night called out the engine company of the Plainfield fire department. The firemen were unable to be of assistance after they reached the fire because there was no fire hydrant near enough to work from. The barn burned to the ground but no other buildings were damaged.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

During its run of sixteen weeks in Los Angeles, California, D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," broke every record ever known in that section of the country. It was the longest run ever recorded by any stage attraction. During its stay at the Auditorium, the largest theatre in the city, the attendance ran over 250,000, which is more than two-thirds of the total population of the city. It is doubted if ever in the history of American theatricals a stage offering ever played to such a percentage of the total population. This picture will be shown at Proctor's Theatre, November 22, 23 and 24.

HEAD OF TRAINING SCHOOL RESIGNS

H. L. Hall is Succeeded by Arthur M. Harris in Muhlenberg Hospital Service.

Henry L. Hall resigned as chairman of the training school committee of Muhlenberg Hospital at a meeting of the board of governors on Monday evening, and Arthur M. Harris, of Central avenue, was named to succeed him. Mr. Hall has done most excellent work as the head of the training school and his interest has always tended to raise the standard. Mr. Hall's resignation was accepted by the board with regret. He will however, remain a member of the board of governors.

The hospital service continues to show steady increases in almost every department and justifies the foresight of the management in anticipating the growing demands of the community by providing the enlarged accommodations of Muhlenberg Hospital. A comparative statement of the work for the month of October, 1914 and 1915, follows:

SINGING IN GRAND OPERA.

Randall H. Trumpe, formerly of Plainfield, appeared during the past week in Troy, N. Y., and New York city, in a shortened version of the opera, "Martha," in which Mme Clementine de Vere, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, and the Covent Garden Opera Company, of London, sings the prima dona role. Mr. Trumpe sings the leading tenor, and his fine, robust voice is well suited to the lovely melodies of the opera. Mr. Trumpe was formerly a member of the First Baptist church choir, this city, and has been heard in concerts here.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

As a result of the annual fair given by the Muhlenberg Hospital Alumnae Association in Columbus Club auditorium yesterday afternoon and night, about $200 will be added to the sick benefit fund of that organization. Both the afternoon and evening sessions were well attended and the various booths were generously patronized by friends, who were seen purchasing many of their Christmas necessities. The tables and booths were attractively decorated with flags and the regulation Red Cross emblems, while the white gowned nurses presided. The hall was elaborately draped with flags of the various nations, palms and cut flowers, while the alumnae pennant was strung across the spacious stage. During the evening dancing was enjoyed, music being provided by a victrola.

The various tables were in charge of the following committees: Cake, Misses Olive Schreibweis and Margaret McGrath; candy, Misses Mary Kyle, Gertrude Talbert and Anne Conant; ice cream, Misses Isabel Knox and Catherine Roebe; Christmas cards and calendars, Miss Charlotte Griffin and Mrs. Ralph Davison; Colgate table, Misses Clara Charlton and Elizabeth Williams; doll table, Misses Mary Cleaves, Olga Anderson and Margaret Carson; bags, Misses Adelaide Sutphen, Alice Stryker and Elizabeth Randall; aprons, towels and caps, Misses Alice Nelson, Isabella McNicol and Mrs. Frank McInerney; fancy articles, Misses Catherine Knox, Helen Boice, Eleanor Selven and Elizabeth Wilson.

Oppel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Dicker, of 139 Seminary avenue, Rahway, took place at the home of the bride's parents, Wednesday night. Rev. L. Y. Graham, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony. Miss Christian Siebert, of Newark, a cousin of the bride, was the maid of honor, while Clarence Weber, of this city, was the best man.

W. C. BERGMAN'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of William Clarence Bergman, aged ten years, grandson of Captain and Mrs. William C. Smith, of Grandview avenue, whose death occurred at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. The body will be brought to this city in an automobile hearse and interment will take place in the family plot in the North Plainfield cemetery.

NO TRUTH IN RUMORED PURCHASE OF HOSTELRY

Representatives of the Hyde, Lattimer and Ludlum estates, which own the Netherwood Hotel property, informed a Daily Press reporter today that they had no knowledge of any deal whereby a syndicate was to buy the big hostelry and tear it down, using the material to build houses. A story to this effect was printed in last night's Courier-News.

In speaking of the matter one of the representatives said that he had heard of such a rumor about a year ago, but it was confined to neighborhood talk in the East End. The matter died a natural death, and he knew nothing more about it until queried by the Daily Press representative. The trustees of the three estates, he said, would be glad to find a good buyer for the hotel, but there has been absolutely no offer made within the past twelve months.

COMMITTEE TO DEMAND REMOVAL OF M'CALL

New York, Nov. 12.—Senator Thompson, chairman of the joint legislative committee investigating the Public Service Commission, made the following statement: "The committee feels that enough has been brought out in its investigation to warrant the committee in asking Governor Whitman for the removal of Edward E. McCall."

NO "LADIES' NIGHT" AFFAIR.

Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, was to have had a "ladies' night" entertainment last night, according to a previous announcement, but it was found to be a mistake which was not discovered until several of the women arrived at the meeting accompanied by their husbands. No one knew who was responsible for the rumor and for a time the gathering resembled a suffrage meeting.

INSPECTING P. H. S.

Miss Dorsheimer, Miss Brush and Miss Ausherman are finishing a two days inspection and study of Plainfield methods. A delegation of New Brunswick parents, headed by Mrs. Nathan Wolf, have been investigating the lunch counter arrangements. They expressed great admiration for the breadth and completeness of the provisions which Plainfield makes for the welfare of its children.

PARISH SUPPERS.

The Woman's Guild and Missionary Society of Grace church has announced a series of parish suppers to be held in the parish house during the coming season. The aim is to afford a suitable opportunity for the members of the congregation to get together in an informal and social way. The proceeds will be devoted to the organ improvement fund of the church.

EIGHT-DAY MISSION.

An eight-day mission is to be held at Grace Episcopal church in February, to be conducted by Bishop Woodcock. The members of the parish, under the direction of Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector, are making great preparation for the services.

RECORD PRICES FOR TURKEYS THIS YEAR

Holiday Fowls Will Be Scarce Because of Bad Weather Conditions to Date.

Turkeys will be high this year, probably mounting to thirty-eight or forty cents a pound. Such was the announcement made by a well known local butcher this morning when questioned about the holiday birds. Annually the announcement comes forth that these barnyard prices will be high but the butchers this year claim that the rumor is well founded and the low water mark will be thirty-five cents.

One dealer declared that he had paid thirty-one cents at wholesale for turkeys in a New York market this week. It is claimed that recent damp weather has had much to do with the scarcity of the birds. To date we have had little cold weather and this is also believed to be a reason for the famine, inasmuch as turkeys do not begin to fatten until the atmosphere becomes snappy.

Most of the specimens now being groomed for Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year dinners are lean and poor in quality. Farmers are hoping for a cold blast during the next week and conditions may improve a little between now and killing off time.

McCALL WILL NOT QUIT.

Chairman Edward E. McCall, of the Public Service Commission, when asked this morning as to newspaper reports about his possible resignation, said: "I will not resign." Being pressed to discuss some of the reports as to the intentions of the Thompson committee he said that he would not be drawn into any newspaper controversy and positively refused to talk further.

Neither man was injured.

SUCCESSFUL OPENING OF FIRE CO. BAZAAR

Generous Patronage Accorded Three Nights Fair in W. G. Holton Hall.

Under the auspices of the Defender Fire Company a three nights' fair was opened in W. G. Holton Hall, last night. There was a large attendance and generous patronage was accorded each booth. The hall was elaborately decorated for the occasion with red, white and blue bunting and flags. The booths and the dancing were the principal attractions.

Clarence T. Voorhees and Charles Wrage were in charge of the Teddy bears and dolls and they did a rushing business. There were many other booths where fancy and useful articles, canned goods and groceries, hot dogs, ice cream and soda water were sold. George Zink was in charge of the refreshment tables.

The dancing was enjoyed on the second floor, music being furnished by Naylor's orchestra. Between the dances all of the booths did a flourishing business. Those in charge of the fancy booth were Mrs. Elmer Blackford and Miss Kathryn Samson. They were assisted by Harry Dodwell, Charles Vail and John Stillger. T. J. Ronayne also assisted. The fair will be continued tonight and tomorrow night with added attractions.

Paul Carpenter, of Prospect avenue, will leave the latter part of the month on a long western business trip.

Miss Mary Peck, of the Warrenville road, is suffering from a broken ankle. She fell and broke it while coming out of the barn on her place, Monday.

GOT FORTY-SEVEN RABBITS.

Paul Ratti was numbered among a party of five which shot forty-seven rabbits and eleven squirrels at Flemington, Wednesday.

BAGGED LOTS OF GAME.

A gunning party composed of C. G. Hunt, Dick Randolph, C. M. Kelly, Samuel Harris, James Perry and Thomas Harris shot twenty-five rabbits, three pheasants, two woodcock and a squirrel at North Branch, Wednesday. Thomas Harris made a good showing for a beginner, bagging two rabbits and a pheasant.

Mathias Giddes, Edgar Gaddis, Fred Wheeler and Nelson M. Snyder spent yesterday in hunting at Pluckemin.

William Wiedenhaupt and family, who have been living for the past few months in the Kirby house on Dunellen avenue, are planning to move at an early date to their new house on the Warrenville road.

SURPRISE PARTY.

Miss Helen Griggs, of this place, and Miss Martha Frueler, of Bound Brook, gave a surprise party to Gilbert Horton at Miss Freuler's home in Bound Brook, Wednesday evening. About forty-six were present. A quartet, composed of the Misses Griggs and Frueler and the Messrs. Robins and Horton, rendered some fine selections.

GETS SUSPENDED SENTENCE.

Arraigned before Recorder David S. Campbell in the Borough Hall, yesterday, Patrick Donnolly, of Plainfield, was fined $5 for being drunk and disorderly. The sentence was then suspended and Mr. Donnolly, who had spent the night in a cell, was allowed to go home. He was arrested by Marshall Mohan on Washington avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Mihalowitz, who have resided in one of the Eckert houses on Third street for the past several months, are going to move to New York.

Patrick Donnolly, of Plainfield, has rented one of the Marschrod houses on North avenue.

John Dineen, of Brooklyn, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dineen, of Washington avenue.

Mrs. T. H. Platt, of Dunellen avenue, has returned from a visit to Philadelphia.

MEETS WITH ACCIDENT.

Wesley Huff, of North avenue, fell in the swamp in back of Rajotte's brick-yard while hunting, Wednesday, and was obliged to discontinue the sport for the day. The young man was chasing a pheasant.

HOLY CROSS PREACHER.

The Rev. R. W. Baxster, of the Grace church, Brooklyn, will officiate at the 11 o'clock service, Sunday morning in the Church of the Holy Cross. In the evening, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, pastor of the Grace church, this city, will preach.

'Plains & Fanwood.

Bradley Barret, president of the Fanwood Rifle Club, will probably call a meeting of the club in a few days in order that it may be decided whether or not its activities are to be continued throughout the coming winter. It will be possible to use the Company K. armory in Plainfield on Friday night of each week, but whether or not the members will agree to the expense will not be known until the meeting.

About seventy-five young people enjoyed a dance last night in Meyer's Hall under the auspices of the Entre Nous Club. The hall was prettily decorated with flowers and crepe paper. Several victrolas furnished the music, and later in the evening refreshments were served.

A regular meeting of the Sunshine Weavers was held in the lecture room of the Baptist church last night. Rehearsals on the two sketches to be presented by the society at an entertainment in the near future were held.

The Rev. Raymond E. Marshal will be in charge of the prayer meeting in the Methodist church tonight. Following a business session of the Epworth League will be held, at which all members are requested to be present.

The weekly meetings of the Ladies Aid Society of the Episcopal church are now devoted to preparing for the annual Christmas sale to be held in the Fanwood firehouse on the afternoon and evening of December 4. Several new features are to be added to the affair this year, and indications are that it will be more successful even than those of previous years.

Eugene Lidgate, of North avenue, has agreed to coach the basketball five of the T. A. B., of Plainfield, and started in last night, when he gave the team some pointers about the game. "Liddy" used to be some player himself several years ago, when he starred for the Plainfield High School, and later was one of the shining lights on the local parish house team.

Representing Fanwood and Scotch Plains, Miss Elizabeth Babcock, of North avenue, was elected one of the vice-presidents of the New Jersey Northfield Association at a recent meeting of that body. She has been prominently connected with missionary and spiritual work for some time, and is president of the local Junior League devoted to missionary work. Miss Babcock attends all the conventions at Northfield, Mass., as a local delegate, and is usually accompanied by several members of the Junior League.

Eugene Lidgate, who is located in business in Philadelphia, is making a short visit with his parents in the borough.

Mrs. Samuel Hollingsworth, of Stout avenue, is at Muhlenberg Hospital for treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Sheelen, of North avenue, are entertaining their niece, Miss Claire Vreeland, of Greenville.

The new banking system, which was explained in this column several days ago, has been made of more value to the pupils of School No. 1 by S. Dana Townsend, supervising principal of local schools, by having the books and other records kept by different members of the eighth grade. Kenneth Drake is cashier and treasurer, Dorothy Anderson is paying teller, Harold Connar is receiving teller and Muriel Walker is bookkeeper. Mrs. Anderson, departmental teacher of the three upper grades, has general supervision over the experiment, which seems to be turning out excellently. Already $25 has been deposited with the Westfield Trust Company, and is drawing 4 per cent. interest. The plan is an excellent substitution for a commercial course, something that Mr. Townsend is a strong advocate of.

Editorial

Economy Plus--

The dictionary defines economy as "carefulness in outlay," and most attempted economists go wrong because they exercise caution only as to how much they spend and not as to what that expenditure procures.

Mere cheapness is a snare—a delusion. Cheap goods are dear at any price. You must get quality and good style to really economize.

We sell only good merchandise and naturally we price it so as to make a profit. But close touch with the market enables us to constantly offer quality goods at less than regular prices. And frequently we do the unusual in offering specials from our own stock as is the case with the sale of suits announced in this ad. The garments are of the choicest selection from leading makers, but because of the late season, a legitimate reduction sale is made possible.

Women of Plainfield who really practice economy shop at Tepper's because they are sure of quality as well as low prices.

FLAG DROPPED ON RACERS

six cars are represented by twenty-four teams of young and middle-aged men, who have entered into friendly competition for the honor of turning in the largest number of signed application blanks. The slogan in the contest is "Men, not Money," and the limit set by officials is 800 new members within six days, but it was freely promised by the campaigners last night that this total would reach 1,000.

Entries in the race follow:

Packard, Captain Albert Newmiller; Studebaker, Captain Benjamin W. Evans; Overland, Captain J. E. Kimble; Buick, Captain Elwood B. Waller, Jr.; Mercer, Captain F. T. Van Hoesen; Hudson, Captain Harry Runyon; Stutz, Captain E. M. Sheppard; Winton, Captain D. T. Blair; Lozier, Captain N. H. Probasco; Renault, Captain H. B. Joost; Fiat, Captain C. A. Rice; Oldsmobile, Captain C. M. Baker; Locomobile, Captain J. N. Baker; Marmon, Captain William Barlow; Oakland-Spicer, Captain Eric Van Norden; Ford, Captain Howard Willet; Saxon, Captain Alfred Willet; Hupmobile, Captain Martin Snyder; Dodge, Captain Harold Tomlinson; Reo, Captain Herbert Peacock; Maxwell, Captain Joseph Singer; Saurer, Captain George B. Zimmer.

The Saurer and Spicer teams were late entries in the field, but they are represented by young men who are interested in the work, and they promise to be real contenders. Both teams were given cheers of welcome when they were entered last night.

More than two hundred attended the initial banquet of the contest held in the association rooms at 7 last evening. A separate table was designated for each team, and there were few empty seats at any of the tables, showing the spirit with which local business men entered into the campaign.

L. D. Albin, who is general chairman of the campaign, presided at the banquet, following an excellent turkey dinner, during which music was furnished by the Dutch Army orchestra. The orchestra was repeatedly cheered for its pleasing rendition of popular song and marches.

Because of the fact that many of those present wanted to hear the address of former Mayor Percy H. Stewart, on the Plattsburg camp, it was delivered at the Plainfield High School, all of the speeches were short and the men were dismissed promptly at 8.30.

W. D. Murray, honored president of the association, occupied a seat at the speaker's table, but could not be persuaded to make an address. When this was explained to Mr. Albin, with an added promise that Mr. Murray would talk Saturday night after some of the results were in, he was given an ovation.

Assemblyman William N. Runyon, chairman of Division A, of the workers, was the first speaker. Judge Runyon grew reminiscent, calling the attention of the men present to another meeting of a similar nature held in Plainfield years ago, when a campaign for the hospital was launched. He went back even further to a meeting, when a number of young men had dreamed of a modern Young Men's Christian Association for Plainfield, and had bravely laid the foundation for the present institution. They had builded better than they knew, said Judge Runyon, and thoughts of their noble work should be an inspiration to those who were banded together for the campaign now on. He urged all of those who are to take part in the campaign to put forward every effort for a bigger and better association that they might show their appreciation of what had been done for them by a generation that is now old. The mark set is high, the Judge admitted, but it is not unattainable, and pledged the men present to secure 1,000 members.

F. A. W. Lawrenson, business manager of Association Men, was next introduced by Mr. Albin. He paid a tribute to President Murray, under whom he had served as a member of an international Y. M. C. A. committee before he started to tell of the universal breadth of association work. Mr. Lawrenson told of a visit to countries in South America and Africa, trips to out-of-the-way spots of the world, where he had made addresses to Y. M. C. A. members that had to be translated in many quaint and curious foreign tongues that the visitor understand. He said that apart from the higher character of the association, any man should be proud to be a member of an organization that owned $107,000,000 worth of property; that paid $15,000,000 a year for its upkeep, and that held shop meetings for 2,000,000 men each year.

But it was the firm adherence of the association to Christian principles that made it one of the largest organizations of any kind in all the world, he said, and not its dollars. He told of approaching one man for a subscription in a financial campaign and being told that all the money necessary for the support of the entire association would be given annually if the word "Christian" were dropped from the name—making it the Young Men's Association—and proudly reported that this offer was not even considered when made to an international committee.

"Can you imagine something worse than having St. Vitus' Dance and the rheumatism at the same time?" asked Chairman MacArt, in beginning his address. No one could.

"Well, I'll tell you something worse. To come in here tomorrow night without the application blank of a new member would be much worse."

Mr. MacArt explained the details of the campaign for the benefit of those who were not fully acquainted with the work expected of them, and urged co-operation on the part of every man, no matter what his part in the organization.

Prospect lists were submitted to the campaigners, and they spent almost an hour going over these carefully that they might select the names of their friends or others who might be influenced by their arguments.

The campaign got under way this morning with each team hard at work, and optomistic reports are promised when workers meet again at dinner tonight.

The first report will be given by the teams tonight at 7 o'clock, and every night at the same hour until next Thursday, when the campaign closes. No report will be given Sunday, but the team workers will make good use of the day signing new members.

Bulletin boards on the Schwed building and at the Central Railroad station will note the progress of the campaign. The association will entertain the men and boys of the Saurer Works tomorrow night. They will have the use of the gymnasium, swimming pool, shower baths, pocket billiard room and reading rooms. They will also be entertained with moving pictures and refreshments, all of which will be free.

Y. M. H. A. NOTES.

Members of the Young Men's Hebrew Association are already arranging for their eleventh annual association dance, to be held in Columbia Auditorium, on New Year's night. Details of the affair have not yet been arranged, but it is planned to have it bigger and better than any held.

A bowling club has been organized by the association, and the members will bowl each Wednesday night on Kline's private allies.

In conjunction with a lecture scheduled for Sunday night, December 5, there will be a speaking contest among the members of the Y. M. H. A. The winner of this contest will participate in the State contest to be held later, when the winner will receive a gold medal. The winner of this State trophy last year was a Plainfield young man, and it is hoped that the medal may again be brought to this city in the coming contest.

WAR NEWS

is in progress over the greater part of the Austro-Italian front, despite severe storms and foggy weather.

Cabinet Discusses Ancona Case.

Washington, Nov. 12.—For the first time in several months, President Wilson today held a meeting of his cabinet. All the members were present except Secretary of Commerce Redfield. The principal subject discussed was the sinking of the Ancona by an Austrian submarine. Secretary of State Lansing, however had no details of the circumstances of the sinking of the vessel to lay before the cabinet. He said that he had not received a detailed report yet from Ambassador Page at Rome.

French Defeat Bulgars.

London, Nov. 12.—A news agency despatch from Athens says that Paris has received a telegram from Saloniki to the effect that the French have severely defeated the Bulgarian army near Veles and that the fall of that town is considered imminent.

New English Vote of Credit.

The House of Commons has formally agreed to a vote of credit for 100,000,000 pounds asked for by Premier Asquith.

German Food Scarcity.

A despatch from Berlin says that virtually the entire food supply of the nation is expected soon to pass under the control of the government in order to assure an equitable distribution at fair prices. Coffee, tea and cocoa were added today to the list of products whose sale will be regulated by the State. The Federal Council authorized the Chancellor to issue regulations covering trade in them.

British Steamer Sunk.

The British steamship Rhineland, 1,501 tons, has been sunk by a German submarine, presumably in the Mediterranean.

Swedish Embargo Complete.

A despatch from Stockholm says that beginning November 15, butter will be added to the list of articles whose exportation is forbidden by the Swedish government. This will make the embargo on the export food products virtually complete.

American Held in England.

John Dekay, an American, was remanded in the Bow street police court for extradition to France on a charge of fraud there in connection with a transaction in the sale of rifles to the Belgian Government.

Berlin, Nov. 12.—The Lokal Anzeiger's Budapest correspondent says that the number of wounded arriving at the Allies' base in Saloniki increases constantly. The Bulgarians, he states, have captured large quantities of war material sent into Serbia by the Allies.

Germans Pursue Serbs.

Berlin, Nov. 12 (via wireless).—The War Office gave out the following statement today:

"The pursuit of the Serbians continues vigorously. The first mountain ridge south of Kraljevo has been crossed, the advance in the Rasina Valley southwest of Krusevac has reached Kupci and farther to the east Rubari and Ribarske Banya. Yesterday the German troops captured more than 1,700 prisoners and 11 cannon.

Big New French Loan.

Paris, Nov. 12.—Finance Minister Ribot in the Chamber of Deputies has introduced the bill providing for the new French loan, the rate of interest is fixed at 5 per cent., but the price of issue and the period of subscription are left to be fixed by governmental decree. All the privileges and immunities attached to the new 3 per cent. bonds are extended to the new floatation which is exempt from all taxes.

Bulgar King's Fortune Tied Up.

French newspapers today disclose the fact that practically all the personal fortune of Czar Ferdinand, of Bulgaria, is in a London bank. The monarch's mother, Princess Clementine, of France, tied up her money in trust to prevent Ferdinand from squandering it.

Artillery Used In France.

The following official communique was issued by the French War Office:

"The artillery duel was still violent last night in the sector of Loos and in that of the Calonne trench. In the region of Bus in Artois our artillery silenced batteries of the enemy which were firing upon our forces. On the rest of the front the conflict with mines continues successfully for us. In the Argonne at hill No. 225 we put an end to the works on which the Germans were industriously laboring. North of Flirey we administered another check by preventing the enemy from pushing forward his mine galleries."

Serbs Still In Retreat.

Sofia, Nov. 12 (via Berlin wireless).—Bulgarian troops have captured a large part of the Serbian equipment and are continuing their progress. The forces that had crossed the Southern Morava are pursuing the retreating Serbians.

Greek Parliament Dissolved.

Athens, Nov. 12.—A decree dissolving parliament was published today. General elections will be held on December 19. News of the dissolution of parliament was received calmly.

TELLS EXPERIENCES IN CAMP

benches. The camp was provided with stone refuse pits and all waste matter was cremated, thus making the site the last word in sanitation. Upon enlisting each recruit was put through a not any too strict examination to determine whether or not he had any physical defects. Then followed the innoculation against typhoid fever infection. The officer of the camp evidently bore in mind the fact that typhoid fever and other diseases killed more men in the Spanish-American war than did the bullets.

"One of the camp departments that came in for much favorable commendation was that conducted by the Y. M. C. A. The association tent afforded the men their only facilities for letter writing and lounging in off hours. For this convenience no funds were solicited and personal contributions were refused, on the ground that ample provision had been made for the tent by the officials. Contrary to the opinion of some individuals there was not a drop of intoxicating liquor in the camp and the status of the men was of the highest order. Included in the recruits were a number of Episcopal ministers, professional men, engineers and followers of every possible profession and vocation. The instruction was not confined alone to military science but involved leadership and control over men. The spirit of the camp was submission to discipline and splendid democracy was evidenced on all sides by the willingness of one man to help another.

"We got up at 5 o'clock in the morning and breakfast followed the setting up exercises at 6 o'clock. The morning menu was much the same as that for dinner and supper and consisted of bacon, beans, coffee and potatoes, and an occasional luxury such as a bread pudding. From 6:30 to 7:30 we were at leisure and generally took this hour to tidy up our tents and air the blankets. From 7:30 to 9:30 we were put through a hard drill, each man carrying an eight and one-half pound rifle and wearing the heaviest imaginable regalia. Another rest period followed from 9:30 to 10:30, during which most of us took a nap. From 10:30 to 12:00 we indulged in more drilling and then ate dinner. The hour between 12:30 and 1:30 was our own and then followed special instruction by experts in cavalry, signalling, etc. United States army officers had charge of these classes and kept them going until 5:30, when the afternoon inspection took place. At 6 o'clock we had supper and from 7:30 to 8:30 listened to interesting lectures by well known lecturers.

"One of the features of the day's routine was the usual physical exercises and Swedish wand drills, the men using heavy Springfield rifles for wands. These were presided over by an expert from West Point. During the marching and drills no verbal signals were given by the superior officers, all of the commands coming through signs and whistle-notes, the men being compelled to learn the significance of each. This is most necessary because of the noise caused by the big machine guns and rifles in modern warfare. In our marches we had no music from drum or fifes and during a majority of the time we kept constantly on the alert as we were operating against the experienced regular troops of the U. S. army. We were taught that modern warfare is stern business and were shown how the dig trenches, use machine guns and rout out the enemy. We had duplicates of the most modern trenches built by the regular army officers with funds contributed by individuals. The trenches cost about $900 and Uncle Sam did not have the funds to defray the expenses.

"One peculiar feature of our stay at Plattsburg was the fact that each man consumed about three quarts of coffee a day, this drink being furnished in large quantities to the campers. A few days' marching put our feet in bad shape and of the 120 men in our company eighty had to be treated by the surgeon. The weight we carried on our backs made our shoes cut our feet. The last week at Plattsburg was given over to heavy marching. We carried forty pounds of equipment and for three days we had to contend with the storm elements, being drenched to the skin. Our food was supplied from five automobile provision trucks. Many of our men couldn't put their feet to the ground and a majority had to have them lanced, I being among this number. The regular troops marched thirty five miles in one day, but the farthest we got was fifteen."

Mayor Leighton Calkins presided at the meeting and introduced the speaker of the evening.

The audience was seated by a detail of picked Boy Scout ushers having achieved distinction in court work or having rendered special service, consisting of:

Eagle Scout Thomas P. Fitch, Troop 5; Harold McKay, Troop 5, Colin Millard, Troop 5; Jack Faucett, Troop 5; Ernest Naylor, Troop 5; Benjamin Satterfield, Troop 5; Rufus Searles, Troop 8; Hayward Erickson, Troop 8; Caryl Dunavan, Troop 9; Ridley Gillespie, Troop 9; Clifton Wiggins, Troop 9; Wilbur Bolen, Troop 9; Warren Avery, Troop 9; Howard A. Leek, Troop 10; Edwin Addis, Troop 10; Walter Marder, Troop 11; William Terry, Troop 12; G. Peterson, Troop 12; Donald Warren, Troop 14. The scouts were in charge of Scoutmasters W. F. Richards, of Troop 12; H. Douglas Davis, Troop 8; Ernest K. Powlison, of Troop 14, and First Deputy Commissioner A. V. Searing, Jr., and Third Deputy Commissioner F. E. Bach.

Live News From All Branches of Winter Sports

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Low salary regulations have been adpoted by certain minor baseball leagues, says a news item. But as small as the salaries have previously been served up we've seen but few ballists who have really earned their salt.

Plainfield High School swimmers have been fortunate in securing the services of Louis Hansen as coach. An individual better versed in the water art and more capable of handling an aquatic team would be hard to find. If he doesn't put the red and blue school on the map in this line of sport it won't be his fault.

They tell us that Leal School has sometning choice to spring at the proper moment-along basketball lines. Let's hope the "finds" turn out to be real stars for the private school sure does need some real life to keep its basketball lamp burning.

Taking into consideration the early start the Plainfield Recreation quintet has been blessed with we see no reason why this outfit won't be able to lick the best that comes when the court season gets into full swing.

If the roller skating craze hits many other centers in Plainfield as it has bumped the Columbus Club auditorium we'll soon have to demand one of those twenty-four hour roller marathons. Something of this nature is needed as an eye-opener for local sport followers just at present.

Should Holy Cross run short of regulars tomorrow afternoon the coach will have plenty of city officials to pick from, despite the fact that not all of the celebrities have been groomed for pigskin chasers.

Indications point to a wild afternoon here tomorrow. With 500 sailors on our city streets the mere Plainfielder won't have a chance to get a word in edgewise.

Scholastic football interest tomorrow will center around the Plainfield-Philipsburg game at the latter place. Just how the local eleven will stand up before the heavy up-State line is a matter of keen speculation at the present time, but the red and blue warriors have bright hopes of bringing home the bacon. A licking administered to Phillipsburg would be second only in the satisfaction line to a Rahway victory.

November 20 has been set for the opening of North Plainfield High School's basketball season. Sending the schedule on its way with a victory over the Y. M. C. A. boys would give considerable encouragement to the borough quintet which faces bright prospects for a good year.

Ban Johnson and others laugh when the Federal League is mentioned—in public—but it is cutting into the bank rolls of the magnates of Organized Baseball, and the aforesaid magnate of O. B. is not an animal that laughs over matters financial. After hearing some of them talk a stranger would think they enjoy losing money. They do—about as much as farmer enjoys the funeral of his only work mule. Despite optimistic statements from the camp of O. B., there comes a story from San Francisco, where the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues is in session, which states that O. B. is preparing to cut ball players' salaries. This won't be very hard on ball players, at least not on those that are worthy of the name, because they can well afford a small cut, if it hits them, but the blow will fall hardest on the fourflushers that have bluffed their way for the past few years, mostly through threats to join the Feds. It will not be a severe blow to baseball, and will help major and minor leagues. The only serious defect in the plan, from the standpoint of O. B. is that it will strengthen the Federals.

When Walter Camp goes to award the honor of being the most valuable football player for the season of 1915, he will be forced to give Eddie Mahan some attention, no matter what his personal prejudices in the matter. Mahan has proven a wonder at scoring points for the Harvard eleven, and has been a tower of strength to his team on defensive play.

Harvard has scored 107 points during the present football season, and Capt. Mahan has rolled up 42 points himself. The remaining units have been made by King, Enwright, McKinlock, Horween, Parson, Rollins, Willcox, Harte and Robinson. Mahan has scored 42 points in four different ways. He has made four touchdowns, six goals from touchdowns, three field goals and one goal from placement. The three goals from drop-kicks were all made in the game against the University of Virginia at the stadium, and the placement goal was against Princeton.

Tom Enwright and King are tied for the honor of having made the second greatest collection of points for the Crimson, each having 12 to his credit for two touchdowns that they have made. McKinlock is in fourth place with nine points, three from a field goal and six from a touchdown. Harte, Horween, Parson, Rollins and Willcox all have six points for touchdowns, and Robinson, the substitute quarterback, has made two points by kicking goals from touchdowns.

Who has the best football team in the country? You can search us, but we will offer some "dope" so that you can figure it out for yourself. It is admitted that the honor belongs to Cornell, Pittsburgh or Colgate. Let's hear them one at a time.

"If we go through the season unbeaten, we'll have the real right to the championship, irrespective of what Pittsburgh or Colgate do," said a Cornell person. "Look ot our record."

Here is the record:

Cornell	13	Gettysburg	0
Cornell	34	Oberlin	7
Cornell	46	Williams	6
Cornell	41	Bucknell	0
Cornell	10	Harvard	0
Cornell	45	Virginia Poly	0
Cornell	34	Michigan	7
Cornell	223	Opponents	20

The next speaker is a Pittsburgh gentleman: "Pittsburgh has a better claim to the championship than has Cornell or Colgate. Pittsburg has won all of its six games. It gave Navy the worst beating that it has ever suffered. It trimmed Penn and beat W. & J. by one of the biggest scores rolled up against a W. & J. team in 10 years. And the W. & J. team this year, you'll remember, beat Yale to a frazzled frazzle."

Here's Pitt's record:

Pittsburgh	32	Westminster	0
Pittsburgh	47	Navy	12
Pittsburgh	45	Carlisle	0
Pittsburgh	14	Penn	7
Pittsburgh	42	Allegheny	7
Pittsburgh	19	W. & J.	0
Pittsburgh	199	Opponents	26

And now we introduce the next speaker, the Colgate personage: "Colgate has a record that is better than Cornell or Pittsburg. We've beaten Yale and we've the Army, as well as three other elevens. We're the only big team in the country that hasn't been scored on this year. We smashed a record when we scored 107 points in one game against the R. P. I. team. And as for Cornell—well, we beat those birds 7 to 3 last year, and we could do it this year if they'd given us a chance on the schedule, but I guess they didn't want any more of our stuff."

Here is the Colgate record:

Colgate	44	Rochester	0
Colgate	13	Army	0
Colgate	107	R. P. I.	0
Colgate	223	Opponents	0

YALE MEN BET ON PRINCETON GAME

Odds in Favor of Tigers But Bulldog is Yet Confident.

Practice in fundamentals and a long signal drill constituted the work of the Yale football team yesterday in preparation for tomorrow's game with Princeton. Guernsey, who will do the punting, lifted high spirals for an average of fifty yards and he also practiced drop kicking.

John M. Minturn, of Syosset, N. Y., has presented the eleven with a mascot in the shape of "Brutus," an English bulldog, weighing seventy pounds. Captain Wilson accepted the gift and "Brutus" amused himself yesterday by chasing footballs in the bowl.

The ticket department announced last night that 54,000 seats have already been sold for the game.

Betting odds here are 3 to 1 in favor of Princeton, with plenty of Yale money in sight.

Bowling at home, the members of the Hoboken team succeeded in winning three games in a row from the New York five in an Elks' League match. The pinning was sensational. The Hoboken five started with 929 and had a big margin of victory. In the next game they jumped to 994, the visitors being 110 pins to the bad. The final game saw the New York bowlers advance to 933, but the Hoboken pin-knights were right on the job, and a total of 971 gave them the game by thirty-eight pins. Brenda rolled 213, 216 and 206 for Hoboken, averaging 211-2. Steinbruck was there for 225, Miller had 212 and Schneider, 203. A. BILLIARD EXPERTS WILL MEET IN BIG TOURNAMENT

New York, Nov. 12.—William F. Hoppe, Koji Yamada, George F. Slosson, George Sutton, Joseph Mayer and Walter Cochran are the entrants for the handicap billard tournament at 18.2 balkline, to open on Monday in Music Hall. This is the first handicap meet of the champions. The games will be on a basis of 500 points, with Hoppe going the full distance in each of his matches, and the others obtaining handicaps of from 100 to 200 points.

Although Hoppe is up against a mighty task, he rules favorite in the eyes of the local billiardists. There seems to be no limit to his ability, as he has been demonstrating it during the past few weeks in Boston. Yamada, the wonderful Jap, showed like a novice beside him, and it seemed Hoppe could make endless counts at most any period of his game.

Sutton has put in many months of hard practice at his Michigan farm, and, fully restorted to health, he is ready to show his old-time form. His mark of an average of 100 to 18.2 play stood for years until Hoppe smashed it in his match with Sutton at Chicago two years ago. Sutton is granted a handicap of 100 points.

George Slosson is rated with a handicap of 125 and Yamada is given the same advantage in the schedule. Joseph Mayer, of Philadelphia, who has developed recently into the spotlight, gets a handicap of 175, and Walter Cochran, of Chicago, has the highest handicap, 200 points. With this advantage, any of the handicapped players has a chance to come through the tournament a winner.

ELIZABETH EAGLES WIN THREE FROM PLAINFIELD

In the first match of the season in the Eagles' League for the Plainfield and Elizabeth teams last night in Elizabeth the home team succeeded in capturing three games. RUTGERS IS READY FOR GAME WITH ALL STARS

Rutgers went through its last scrimmage yesterday in preparation for the All-Star football game at the Polo Grounds, in New York, tomorrow. The coaches have been driving the men hard during the past week in expectation of a close struggle. The prospects for victory were considerably brightened by the return of Bob Nash to the team. Nash broke a small bone in his shoulder in the Springfield game and was thought to be out for the season, but this week he reported at the field for practice. Wittpenn, who was also injured in the Springfield game, will be unable to play. The loss of Wittpenn considerably injures Rutgers forward passing, as he did most of the throwing. However, Robeson has been developing rapidly and should be able to take Wittpenn's place.

The All-Stars, in preparation for tomorrow's game, have spent the week in practice at home of Hamilton Fish, their captain. Among the men who are to play on the team are Brickley, captain of Harvard last year; Ballin, captain and tackle on last year's Princeton varsity; Tol Pendleton, a famous halfback of Princeton a few years ago; Kennard, of Harvard, whose drop-kick beat Yale in 1908; Hardwick, halfback on Harvard; Kilpatrick, end on Yale, and Arthur Howe, former Yale quarterback and captain.

The contest will start at 2:30 p. m. Admission will be 50 cents, $1 and $1.50.

YALE AND COLUMBIA CLASH.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 12.—For the first time since their six-oar shells raced on Lake Saratoga, in 1875, crews representing Yale and Columbia clash on the water today. Eight-oared crews will pull their rival shells over a course of one mile and seven-eighths in New Haven harbor. Capt. Seth Low, 2nd, of Yale, has arranged the race, for the New York collegians are the only big crew in the east not defeated by the Elis this year. Columbia has sent over a goodly sprinkling of students and alumni, and the race will be watched from steamers chartered for the occasion. The Yale Navy will anchor its two chartered steamers near the finish so that the spectators may view the course from Long Wharf to Lighthouse Point.

GOPHERS READY FOR MAROONS.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 12.—The big football game of the season here is that between the University of Chicago and the University of Minnesota, which will be played here tomorrow. The Gophers are in great shape for the gridiron battle, and will entertain the Maroons by putting against them the strongest team Minnesota has had for some years. Homecomers' Day will be observed on the field, and the alumni will join with the students in the rooting and singing.

P. H. S. COURT QUINTET WILL GET LATE START

Just when Plainfield High School's basketball aspirants will start practice seems to be rather undecided at this late date when most other neighboring High Schools have been hard at work for several weeks. Football has held back the start as most of the likely material for the team is on the football squad, including Capt. "Bill" Whelan.

Whelan is the only regular left and Coach Patch will have to build the team around him. He is the only one who has had much experience on the court and the five will have to be hurriedly rounded into shape as the first game is only a few weeks off. The game with the Alumni on Thanksgiving eve has been called off because the team will not have had any practice by that time.

UNBEATEN PHILLIPSBURG TEAM TO APPEAR HERE

The heavy Phillipsburg High School eleven will be the attraction at Parker Field tomorrow afternoon against the Plainfield High School pigskin chasers. Reports from up-State say that Phillipsburg has the best eleven in years.

"Herb" Peacock will not be seen at quarterback on account of an injury sustained in the South Side game that has developed into water on the knee. Alpaugh, however, showed by his generalship at South Side last Saturday that he will fill the hole nicely. "Bus" Miller, who has been missing from left tackle for several weeks, will probably get in for a few minutes. Mutnick, substitute fullback last year, put in an appearance at practice yesterday and may also get into the fray. Coach Patch will put his strongest lineup in against the Phillipsburg aggregation. The visitors have not been beaten this year.

SUCCESSFUL HUNTERS.

One of the most successful hunting parties that has gone out of Plainfield the past week was composed of Neaf Apgar, his two sons, Haze and Roy, Hazelwood Kellar and Robert McCormack. They returned home last night after a two days' trip in the vicinity of Sunnyside and Cherry Valley, during which they bagged forty-five rabbits, three squirrels and four pheasants. The trip was made to and from the hunting grounds in Mr. Kellar's automobile.

BATTIN PLAYS WESTFIELD.

The Battin football squad since Monday has been put through some of the hardest drilling of the season, in preparation for the game with Westfield. Several players, who were kept out of the last game because of low marks, expect to make up the work in order to be eligible to play in the game tomorrow.

HOLY CROSS PRACTICE.

The Holy Cross football team will hold its final practice tonight before the big game with the battleship Wyoming eleven tomorrow on Cricket Field. Final instructions are to be given the players before the game. A meeting of the team will be held in the McCormick-Doyle studio after the practice.

HYGIENE HOUSEMAIDS THE LATEST INNOVATION

Montclair, Nov. 12.—Hygienic housemaids are the latest innovation in Montclair. The local health department has announced that it will conduct examinations and issue certificates of health to servants for a $3 fee. Chauffeurs, coachmen and gardeners may obtain certificates also under the arrangement, which is optional so far as the health department is concerned.

The plan is an elaboration of the idea of standardizing household help in Montclair, and which is to be carried out with the co-operation of the Montclair Board of Education. The health certification has the indorsement of the Housewives' League. The standardization plan involves examinations at the department of domestic science conducted by the Board of Education, and the issuance of certificates to those who pass. The standard wage for those who qualify is $25 a month.

Barbers and handlers of food in the stores of the town are required to pass a medical examination. The examination which is proposed by the health department will include blood tests and search for tuberculosis and other ailments.

PREPARING XMAS BOX.

The Chi Gamma Chi will meet tonight in the new St. Joseph's Hall. All members are requested to bring their thimbles to sew for the Christmas box.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The German side of the war, in its horrible details, drew [illegible] ences to Proctor's Theatre [illegible] A great variety program [illegible] than usual excellence is offered, the acts being some what [illegible] in has been seen at Proctor's recently. The "Black and White Review," with seven high class entertainers, with special scenery, is entirely new to Plainfield, with four minstrel misses and two black face end men, and an interlocutor that would do justice to the old Primrose, Thatcher, Dockstader and West minstrels, furnish an abundance of good singing, refreshing jokes, and splendid comedy. Bernard and Ryan, in a refined comedy skit, present a hurrah cyclonic conglomeration of parodies and nonsense, and taken as a whole the show is a very excellent once. The first half of next week will bring out the film fans to witness the greatest of all sensations, the now famous "Carmen," the little cigarette maker, the vampire of the famous play will be portrayed by Theda Bara, famous emotional roles on the screen, and conceded to be one of the greatest of actresses. This is the original William Fox vampire presented in New York, October 31.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Announcement by Manager Shannon that he would give away the world famous thoroughbred race horse "Tornado" at the usual "Country Store" at the Plainfield Theatre tonight has caused such a sensation that standing room at both this evening's performances will undoubtedly be at a premium. Nothing on such a mammoth scale has ever been undertaken at a local playhouse and the response on the part of expectant patrons promises to be overflowing. "Tornado" will be only one of the many valuable prizes given away as the list which "Storekeeper" Shannon has provided includes jewelry, household goods, poultry, silverware and all manner of foodstuffs. Everybody has a chance, even the hard luck people who always say they never won anything in their life oftentimes getting a big surprise.

The new show for the last half of the week opened yesterday and proved to be a crackerjack. Pontini, the protean pianologist, was announced as the headliner and verified his selection as first place on the program. His act was both original and highly entertaining. Joe Woods' juvenile company presenting "Youth and Folly," made a big hit, as did also Williams and Merrigan, billed as Big and Little Casino. Mr. Williams, who is the "Big Casino," because of his 300 pounds of avoirdupois, has been seen in Plainfield several times before and never fails to make good. The bill was rounded out by Princess Doveer, Degnon and Clifton, and Wills and Southern. A complete change of program is made every Monday and Thursday.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Having secured a conviction of one of the three men charged with murders and accepted a plea of guilty to manslaughter from another, Prosecutor Beekman has made rapid work in disposing of these difficult cases. It may appear that Holbrook got off too easy with a two-year sentence in prison, but judging from the conditions as stated in court by counsel he could not have been convicted of murder and he might have gone unpunished. There was no question about his brutality to a helpless patient for which he deserved the sentence he received. The prosecutor doubtless did the best thing in accepting the plea of guilty and saved the county an expensive trial.—Unionist-Gazette.

PROPOSITION WOULD NOT BE REASONABLE

P. S. C. Cannot Discontinue Sale of Pupils' Tickets at Reduced Rate.

Trenton, Nov. 12.—Holding that the proposition of the Public Service Railway Company to discontinue the sale of tickets at reduced rates to pupils traveling to and from school would, if put into effect, result in an increase of fare that would not be just and reasonable, the State Board of Public Utility Commissioners today handed down a decision refusing to permit the withdrawal of such tickets. The Board says the giving of a special reduced rate to school children is not unreasonable nor preferential.

In 1914 the Public Service Railway Company attempted to discontinue the sale of reduced rate tickets to school children, and on September 22, 1914, the State Board made an order suspending for two months the increase in rates that would result. The case was postponed two or three times so that the hearing was not held until last July, following which the matter went to conference.

After the Board issued its order, the company restored the old rate and has continued to sell the reduced rate tickets pending the final determination of the question. For many years it has been the practice of the railway company and its predecessors to sell tickets to school children at less than the regular five-cent rate, the school rate being about three cents.

BELIEVE YOUTH A BURGLAR

November 4, Grier, when aroused from his sleep, received a heavy blow on the head and grappled with a man in his room. The intruder inflicted cuts in Mr. Grier's head that necessitated ten stitches to close and nearly severed his victim's little finger on the right hand. He finally managed to wriggle loose and escaped through a second story window and down a porch post. The householder could give no description of his assailant to Chief Kiely and Captain Flynn, who were on the scene soon afterwards, and the clues worked up by the officers were very meager. It was learned that a man had raced down Grant avenue a few minutes after Grier was assaulted, but all trace of him was lost at West Third street, where he passed two other men. The next day the police found ten unused bullets in Mr. Grier's bed which had evidently fallen from a gun and a few hours later Captain Flynn found a formidable looking magazine gun near the house. The culprit's hat was also found.

When news of the attempted robbery was published in the newspapers it was read by Miss Clara Blume, of West Front street, and Ronzo McCrea, colored, who is employed as stableman by the former. She told the police of having seen a young man coming from her barn early Wednesday morning. The stranger explained to McCrea, whom he met, that he had formerly lived in Plainfield and had lost his hat in getting off a freight on which he had ridden to Plainfield for the purpose of renewing old acquaintances, and he borrowed a hat from McCrea.

The man also claimed acquaintance with one Fred Vaughn, colored, and it was from the latter that Captain Flynn obtained the clue that led to the arrest of Blauvelt. From a description young Vaughn was inclined to believe that the man who claimed his friendship was Blauvelt and Flynn took up the clue. He learned that Blauvelt had been calling on a young lady in this city and from her obtained her suitor's address in New York. Two days' shadowing by Flynn revealed the fact that Blauvelt was living with his mother and two sisters at 238 West 56th street, New York city.

When first arrested the prisoner expressed indignation and surprise, claiming that he was not Blauvelt, but his final admission cleared up the mystery to the fullest possible extent, the police say. Chief Kiely accompanied Flynn to New York this morning to make arrangements for having him held pending the drawing of extradition papers for the signature of Governor Fielder.

Blauvelt is widely acquainted in this city, where he was employed as a chauffeur. On February 14, 1913, he was arrested for "joy-riding," his car having crashed into vehicles containing five persons. Judge DeMeza sentenced him to serve thirty days in the county jail on this count but he took an appeal.

WILL ENTERTAIN CARRIERS

ation, West End Civic Association. All will work in harmony to make the convention a success because of the wonderful amount of advertising it will give the city of Plainfield if the 2,000 or more delegates are well entertained while here.

The most important committee, next to the general body in charge of entertainment, will be that on finances. A. E. Force was named chairman of this body. He represents the Board of Trade. Other members are: William M. Floersch, of the Business Men's Association; C. B. Repp, of the Chamber of Commerce; A. E. Hoagland, of the postoffice; H. P. Stevens, of the Netherwood Resident's Association, and T. C. Vail, of the West End Civic Association. The East End Civic Club will also have a representative to be named later.

Samuel Rothberg heads the publicity committee. Those who will work with Mr. Rothberg are: Leslie R. Fort, J. A. Gaffney, J. W. A. Bauersack, Garrett Keating and A. F. LaRock.

Others who attended the meeting were G. W. Keen, J. E. Bailey, D. W. Littell and P. H. Burns.

A big parade will feature the convention, and in addition to the many visitors, there will be a goodly turning out of Plainfield people. All the military and semi-military organizations are expected to participate, including Company K, the local artillery company, and Boy Scout troops.

A financial campaign is to be started soon to raise an amount adequate to care for the guests. It is expected that $1,200 will be needed, but no trouble will be experienced in securing this amount by popular subscription, say those who are in charge of arrangements.

RABBITS ARE PLENTIFUL, SAYS GEORGE FISHER

Rabbits are plentiful this year, according to George J. Fisher, Sr., of 224 Manson place, who has been out in the fields several times since the season opened. Mr. Fisher says that hunters returning with stories of the scarcity of rabbits are amateurs who do not know how to hunt. He has brought in three or four every time out, he says, and other experienced hunters are doing the same.

You May Find a Worker Trained and Fit to do Your Work.

A worker whose salary you will voluntarily raise in a short time!

"Getting along" with half-competent help, in home, office, store or factory, is a poor plan—a poor business policy.

The quest for the Competent Worker is important enough to justify a real campaign of classified advertising in the Plainfield Daily Press—although it does not often require a very long campaign.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW OF CHILDREN

Child Welfare Exhibit Bulletins Are Now Issued by the Government.

Child Welfare Exhibits is the title of a bulletin issued yesterday by the Children's Bureau of the Federal Department of Labor. This has been prepared in reply to the many inquiries received by the Bureau about exhibits, and single copies may be had for the asking. The bulletin will give those who expect to observe the nation-wide Baby Week next March, or those who are planning a baby show, a children's health conference, or any kind of children's exhibit the benefit of expert advice and practical experience in successful exhibit work.

The bulletin is full of suggestions for communities of all sizes. It describes effective small exhibits of one or another phase of child problems. It defines a "child welfare exhibit" in the title of which the name of the city or State appears as a "well-rounded presentation of the whole question of the welfare of the community's children," and sounds a warning against undertaking such a general exhibit without the co-operation of all the social agencies of the community.

The results of child welfare exhibits are emphasized. "A new factory inspector in Kansas City, a housing inspector in Louisville, a $25,000 school building in a congested district of Northampton, increased sewer connections in Easthampton, where the ice supply of the town was menaced, are types of results which have been secured in practically every community that has devoted sufficient time and thought to the planning of a child-welfare exhibit. In cities where no organized combination of social agencies exists to interpret and carry out the legislative program suggested by an exhibit, the exhibit organization itself is often a first step to such a combination."

The bulletin includes a complete list of all child-welfare exhibits owned by State departments, January 1, 1915, and a copy of the record blank used by the Children's Health Conference of the Children's Bureau

STUDY MANAGEMENT OF AMERICAN CITIES

Authorities of South American Trade Centers Seek Information.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 12.—The average American city, a one-time subject of criticism by foreign observers, is coming into its own. The authorities of two large South American trade centers have asked for information about the administrative methods and finances of cities in this country.

The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce, has just completed for one of the inquiring municipalities, a study of the financing of improvements in American cities, the desired facts being quickly gathered from the wealth of information at hand on the subject. Within the department there are exhaustive statistics of that class, published by the Bureau of the Census. Also, reviews issued by the municipalities are on file, and the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, through its editorial staff was able to prepare a full bibliography of publications dealing with city taxation and financial management.

The second South American request was for official publications of the principal cities in this country, on city improvement, public works, construction laws and municipal organization or reform. The Bureau is preparing to furnish the desired publications, and also to make systematic efforts to bring these communities into closer touch with those of the United States. It is expected that the projected work will contribute toward stronger business relations.

One of the South American communications involved other important matters which enable the Bureau to bring the large public works that are included in the city's new fiscal plans to the attention of investors contractors and suppliers of materials, in this country. The war has prevented certain capitalists in Europe who have heretofore invested extensively in such enterprises from extending their interests, and the authorities of the foreign community have turned to this country for a portion of the means of carrying out their projects, as well as for models of management. The Bureau is therefore able to furnish not only instructive facts to be sent abroad, but also business opportunities at home.

LESTER MESEROLL RESIGNS POSITION

Scores Education Board of Bernardsville as He Announced Retirement.

Bernardsville, Nov. 12.—Lester Meseroll, formerly head of the Dunellen schools, has resigned as supervising principal of Bernards township and principal of the High School, to take effect June 30, the end of the present school year. The Board of Education accepted the resignation.

Mr. Meseroll read his written resignation. Before reading it he told the board of his intention, stating that he had been in charge of the schools for eight years, and had built them up. He gave a general outline of his work during the period. For four or five years, up to two years ago, he said, he was antagonistically treated by members of the Board, which treatment, he asserted, seemed to be returning, a condition which he would not stand for again.

"I am not resigning because of any alleged wrongdoing nor because of pressure from the Board of Education," Mr. Meseroll declared.

No comment was made by any member of the Board, which simply passed a resolution accepting the document.

It is, however, an open secret that while the Board did not formally request the resignation of Mr. Meseroll it would have done so had he failed to take the action he did last night Since Mr. Meseroll admitted certifying to Cornell University that his son, Walter B. Meseroll, had passed the subjects required for admission to Cornell before he had actually passed a special mathematical test given him, after he and some other boys had been convicted of cheating, it has been known that the Board felt that the principal's sphere of usefulness was ended in Bernardsville with the present year. Mr. Meseroll, when questioned at the time about his action, sought to justify it, but did not do so to the satisfaction of the Board, it is said.

"During the past four years I have been keenly conscious of serious opposition on the part of some members of the board, much of it purely personal," the resignation read.

"I know that harmony between the board and the principal is necessary both that he may do his best work and that the educational interests of the township be conserved and advanced. I therefore herewith tender you my resignation."

LITERARY

If you have ever known and loved a dog you will enjoy a "Point of View," in the Christmas Scribner, on "Some Dogs:"

"I have no dog now, but I sometimes pretend I have. It is an easy thing to pretend. I imagine him lying before the fire, close beside me so that I can put out my foot to nudge his hairy back. He understands that I am telling him I love him. I think of him as waiting—a gentle, pensive squire—how patiently he endures that fearful creation of time, an interval. I see him on a tramp—a joyous series of important explorations of the trivial. There is a frenzy of joy on his long, galloping dashes in open country, his perpetual 'skinning under' fences, his sudden pursuits of a slow-rising bird. He reveals an ecstatic vigor even in the biting of a burr from his tail. But, most of all, I love him when, from the midst of these alarms and excursions, in red-tongued happiness he comes racing back—to me."

"CHILD WELFARE" SUBJECT OF TALK

Mrs. Isabel Davis, Head of Organization, Addresses City Union.

"Child Welfare" was the topic of an interesting address yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Isabel Davis at the semi-annual meeting of the City Union of King's Daughters in the parish house of Grace Episcopal church. Mrs. Davis, who is secretary of the Child Welfare League of New York city, laid particular emphasis on the objects of the "King's Daughters," defining it as meaning that each member took upon herself special duties as the daughter, not of an earthly king, but as daughters of the infinite King and Supreme Ruler of all things, and these duties were infinite in their scope, extending on both sides of the grave.

She told of the great work being done in New York for the welfare of the children and of the even greater work to be done. She enumerated many things that were already being done in Plainfield and many kinds of work that will eventually come under the direction of the King's Daughters through the Day Nursery.

The statistical reports showed that about 1,200 children had been cared for at the nursery since the last reports. The kindergarten and other forms of instruction had met with great success and the finances were in excellent condition.

The reports also showed that there was a rapidly growing interest in the Day Nursery and its work by the people of Plainfield and this increased interest had brought more support in a material way. This was also shown by the unusually large attendance at this semi-annual meeting.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make any one who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.—Adv.

THE SINKING OF THE ANCONA.

While a shudder went through all of the United States upon receipt of first despatches containing news of the sinking of the Italian liner, Ancona, by a submarine flying an Austrian flag, it is too early for a condemnation of Austria, or of the commander who may have been in charge of the submarine.

So-called international law, as it has been understood and practiced since naval engagements began, gives any warship or submarine the right to hail and search a vessel on the high seas. If the commander of the Austrian submarine ordered the liner to stop and submit to a search and this order was ignored, he had a right to fire a shot across its bows, and if it did not stop after this show of warlike intentions, he had a perfect right to sink it. That Americans were aboard the liner and 27 of them lost their lives through the sinking of the vessel does not change the case. Italy, of course, puts forth the claim that the liner was sunk without warning. Her officials say that it stopped when the submarine came into sight, but an official version of the torpedoing gives rise to a serious doubt. The Italian government charges that one hundred shots were fired from guns of the submarine before the torpedo that finally sunk the ship was launched. This apparent waste of ammunition does not coincide with established records of German and Austrian efficiency. Where has there been any such waste of the munitions of war on the part of the Germans or Austrians before? Such procedure would have been not only inhuman and barbarous, but extravagant and foolish, and the Austro-Germans cannot be convicted of extravagance or idiocracy, whatever their crimes.

Americans are horrified over the apparent sacrifice of life, but they should not condemn the submarine crew hastily.

On the other hand if the captain of the liner did ignore a command to stop from the submarine and, as a result, sacrificed the lives of members of his crew and many of his passengers, cannot the Italian government be held to account by America? If it is established that the sinking of the Ancona was a wanton act on the part of an Austrian crew, the United States will certainly demand an official apology and reparation. The liner captain knew international law, or should have known it. He may have been responsible for the catastrophe. If this should be proven it will open up a new diplomatic problem for President Wilson and his Secretary of State.

NO DEARTH OF CANDIDATES.

Announcement by "Uncle Dan" Voorhees that he is not and will not be a candidate for the State Treasurership, created some surprise in political circles; but it came too early to simplify the situation. On the contrary it has had the effect of bringing out new aspirants for the office, which is regarded as one of the best and "nicest" in the State, carrying, as it does, control over several million dollars of State deposits.

Chairman Herbert W. Taylor, of the Essex County Republican Committee, seems to be in a receptive mood, if his candidacy will not interfere with designs his county has on the United States Senatorship and Governorship, next year, says the Trenton Times. State Chairman Bugbee is in the same position as to receptivity, but is disinclined to make a fight for the place. Former Senator Hillery has not made known his position.

The entrance into the contest of former Assemblyman George F. Wright, of Passaic county, with the backing of Senator Thomas F. McCran and the county's delegation of five Assemblymen is likely to add to the interest. Senator McCran was elected by a majority of 8,000, and Passaic, which is the third county in the State as to population and wealth, does not hold any of the important State offices.

It will probably be impossible to divorce the campaign for the treasurership from those for the senatorship and governorship; which will make Tuesdays in Trenton rather lively and interesting until the Legislature meets and the Republican caucus picks Mr. Grosscup's successor.

North Plainfield needs new fire apparatus. When the newly elected city officials take over the affairs of the borough next January they should give attention to protection from fire. While municipalities in all other parts of the country are putting in up-to-date apparatus, even discarding automobile engines because they have become out of date, the borough is forced to get along with one horse-drawn hose wagon that was antiquated before an automobile engine was proven practical, but it should be remedied as soon as the finances of the borough will permit an expenditure for the purpose.

A machine gun has been sent to the State prison farm at Milledgeville, Georgia, to be used to shoot down would-be lynchers. It was from this farm that Frank was taken. This is a good move, but a machine gun will not fire without human aid. Can they find anyone in Georgia to operate it when the moment comes?

Because a millionaire wants to get married relatives seek to have him pronounced insane. Not having seen the bride-to-be we are incompetent, but the burden of proof is upon him.

In eleven months, beginning November 1, 1914, automobiles killed 227 persons in the city of Chicago. Thus do we pay for the advance of civilization.

TO DEFEND SHIP POLICY.

New York, Nov. 12.—The annual gathering of the Academy of Political Science, which will be a two-day session devoted to "The American Mercantile Marine," opened here today. The meeting will be the arena in which Secretary McAdoo of the Treasury Department will portray the administration's views of the subject and answer the many critics of this policy, and the opposition will be voiced by Hon. John W. Weeks, of Massachusetts, who has pronounced views on the merchant marine. All phases of the question, including the La Follette Seamen's act, will be discussed.

POSTOFFICE PRINT SHOP.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 12.—A print shop is being opened in the basement of the local postoffice, and Postmaster Edgar Battle has been appointed official printer for the railway mail service of the Pacific Northwest States and Alaska and for the postoffices of Seattle, Spokane, Portland and Tacoma. The government has been having this work done outside, and it was decided to purchase a plant and install it here, to care for the rapidly growing business of this section.

Potatoes

Potatoes are what Germany raised most of, while conducting a fairly interesting war.

In fact, forgetting all about potatoes for one paragraph, this war seems to be the war between Germany.

The potatoes that Germany raises are Irish potatoes; but they are a long way from Tipperary.

Germany did this merely to show she could raise something besides what Sherman said.

Irish potatoes are raised in hills. Also in valleys.

Sweet potatoes, which are called yams in the South, are raised in ridges.

A corrugated field means either a filtration bed, a sweet potato field or a peanut patch.

Irish potatoes are used for food, for starch, and for making poker-chips.

Poker chips are more expensive than the Saratoga kind, which are made of the same material, but less nourishing.

We have known a man to starve to death, right after his family starved, by holding himself strictly to a poker-chip diet for a few years.

Potatoes are good for food, in various forms.

But the potato pie should be prohibited by an act of the Legislature.

We once had a cook who made white potato pies.

But death came to her relief.

We think she ate a piece of the pie.

When we were a boy, a bushel of potatoes was some load to carry.

Now one can carry it home in one's hip pocket and never be suspected of wearing a bustle.

We tried to raise potatoes last summer.

But the potatoes we bought of our groceryman to plant had been sterilized.

They were race-suicide potatoes.

We got nearly as many from the patch as we planted.

It was like passing the hat for the suffrage movement at a brewers' picnic.

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

When The Laborer Is Sick

THERE is one side of life which the movies cannot exaggerate, and that is the conditions which surround the sickbed of the day laborer.

Have you ever done a day's labor, hard manual labor, for pay? If so you know that the laborer is worthy of much more than his usual hire. He is paid far less than he is worth. Our social system is based upon a plan that stints the worker and then doles out homeopathic charity when he is overtaken by his rainy day.

When we have occasion to attend a sick laborer in his lowly home, an honest, sober, industrious father, we always feel like—well, for the time being we are bitterly anarchistic. To think that the best type of citizen, the honest workman, must suffer for want of those little luxuries and conveniences which make sickness endurable in the homes of the well-to-do maddens us. If he has a nurse it must be a volunteer or a visiting nurse who places him and his family on a card index for filing in the archives of the city public relief department—stigmatizes a decent citizen for the remainder of his life.

There is no place in the hospital for him. He can't afford the expense of a private room and a private physician; he is too proud to accept the charity of the public ward and the gratuitous services of the staff physician. He is up against it.

He may join a sick-insurance society that supplies medical attendance to members for a small sum per month. But this turns out a disappointment, because the society takes most of the money and the doctor is unable to render good medical service for the pittance he receives.

We can see but one wise remedy. Let the laborer carry a sickness and accident policy which will protect his income. Then let him contract with his family doctor for all necessary medical services at a definite sum per month. This plan is working successfully in many cities; so long as it is satisfactory to the patient and the doctor it is bound to be a success. A surprisingly small monthly tax suffices to insure conscientious medical services for a laborer and his dependent family. The subsidized family doctor stands between the family and charity. That security alone, for the self-respecting workman, is a great comfort.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Scrofula

Seven years ago, at nineteen, I had a tubercular gland in the neck operated on. It didn't heal after several operations, discharging for over a year. Finally, through rest, open air and bismuth paste treatment it healed. Three years ago the swelling recurred, and the college authorities sent me to the hospital, where I was placed on an open air cot. The gland nearly suppurated again, but after a few weeks of open-air life the swelling went down. I get sore throat very easily. Am twenty-six, sixty-two and one-half inches, ninety-eight pounds. So you see I qualify for the Fat Match Fraternity. What I want to ask is, should I have my tonsils removed?

Answer—From your story, which is typical and should be a lesson to others, we would expect to find upon an examination of your throat that one of the tonsils, or possibly both, would harbor a focus of infection—the primary point of entrance for the infection which caused the scrofula or neck gland tuberculosis.

THE PRESIDENT

THE President of the United States is a good and wise man, who is elected by the people to give tone to politics in Washington. He is popularly supposed to run the country, too, but he doesn't. He merely looks over the train sheets.

The President serves four years. Some of the most durable have served eight years. He gets $75,000 a year, and lives in the White House, a large mansion, completely surrounded by newspaper reporters. He doesn't get his salary for living in the White House, but it is said to be worth the money.

The President usually rises to his high office from obscurity, and goes back there promptly as soon as his term is over. Only native-born Americans can be President. This discourages immigrants so that they rarely go into politics. They go into business instead, and become aldermen.

It is the duty of the President to veto all bills passed by the opposition, to see that the Cabinet chairs are freshly filled each morning, and to eat whatever is set before him, no matter how badly the banquet committee may have fallen down. He must fit a Pullman car berth neatly, must enjoy seeing his features warped all out of shape by cartoonists, and must give reporters and writers any desired details about his way of shaving or his brand of socks or the way in which he ties his shoes. The President is public property, and is never allowed to forget the fact. The public is very hard on Presidents too, just as it is on the rest of its property. Very few Presidents live very long after their escape.

The President works very hard and is worked even more heartlessly. In former days, executives were very poor house-cleaners, but nowadays the President who didn't clean up at least a department of government a week would be accused of incredible carelessness. The chief exercises of

The White House, a large mansion surrounded by reporters

Presidents are shaking hands with office seekers. They are of various denominations. Some are Episcopalians, some Presbyterians and one or two have been thirty-cent pieces. Candidates for the Presidency are chosen by influential politicians in a national yell Marathon held every four years. The candidate getting the longest yell is nominated. It is customary to elect Republican Presidents.

The Presidents have all been noble, honest men. They are even grander and nobler after death, for then even the opposition admits it. If a President works hard and makes good, he gets into the hall of fame, and has 100,000 namesakes. Thus far, however, no namesake has ever become President.

Views Of The Press

The Serbian Women

"MANY bodies of women were found in the trenches," says the correspondent of the Cologne Gazette, whose accounts of Balkan operations are printed in The Times, "as Serbian women are taking part in the national defense." This is strong evidence touching a matter in dispute. The German soldiers cannot take pride in fighting women; no German war correspondent would say that Serbian women were fighting unless he had positive proof. Women of Serbia are fighting in the trenches, and doubtless fighting bravely, desperately, and willingly dying for their country. If there is little glory in this for the invaders of Serbia, and not much for the men of Serbia, who are forced against their will to share the dangers and the horrors of the battlefield with their wives and sisters and daughters, the glory achieved by the Serbian women will be indelibly recorded on the pages of history and remembered in the songs of future ages.

If "for our country 'tis a bliss to die," it is a greater bliss, a nobler sacrifice, to die fighting the country's invaders, defending its altars and its fires, instead of carrying its might into foreign lands. On the whole, however, it is consoling to know that the women have not yet felt themselves compelled to bear arms in the other countries involved in the great struggle. The share of suffering and loss the women must bear everywhere is large enough without that; theirs is not the lighter burden.—New York Times.

Tilefish

THE United States fisheries bureau has chartered a schooner for a strange quest, tilefish along the northern edge of the Gulf Stream. It appears that Gloucester fishermen have been bringing in some surprising catches recently, and the Government experts are eager to follow up the find.

The cod fishermen, indeed, have occasionally reported tilefish in years past, though for more than thirty years they have been considered a practically extinct species. Their startling disappearance is one of the mysteries in the annals of deep-sea fishing. In the spring of 1882 millions of them were seen floating dead upon the surface of the ocean. What killed them has never been determined, although the theory is that they succumbed to cold water forced by northerly gales into the warm Gulf Stream, where they flourish.

As the tile is an edible fish, its recovery from the strange disaster, after these many years, would be a matter of considerable economic importance.—Peoria Journal.

The Penalty Of Looking Pleasant

Q. Will you kindly give me your opinion as regards the following questions: (1) When a photographer has taken a photograph and furnished at his own expense all articles necessary to photograph a person, to whom does the plate, film or negative belong, to the person photographed or to the photographer? (2) In case the plate, film or negative is the property of the photographer, can he sell or dispose of said plate, film or negative to another person? (3) If the photographer has a right to sell or dispose of said plate, film or negative is it necessary for the photographer to obtain the consent of the person photographed in order to sell or dispose of said plate, film or negative?

A. As a general rule, unless there is an agreement to the contrary, the plate, film or negative will belong to the photographer. This rule will not prevail, however, if altered by law or custom and does not obtain with reference to United States Government confidential work. In general, whatever one may lawfully own, he may lawfully sell, but there are some restrictions. It has been held by many courts that, unless there is an agreement to the contrary, the customer has the right to control the disposition of the photographic made from the negative, although it has been said that this is not true of public characters, especially if one allows his photograph to be taken free of charge.

His Wife's Money

Q. A married woman allowed her husband to make use of her money in his business ventures. Will she thereby lose or forfeit her own rights?

A. As a general rule, if a married woman allows her husband to use her money or capital in his business, and he conducts his business on the faith thereof, her rights become subordinated and the creditors will have the right to look to such fund for payment.

Long Distance 'Phone Charge

Q. It is a rule of the telephone company in my town that a subscriber must pay for long-distance messages sent over his 'phone and from his residence or place of business. It has happened several times that other persons have used my 'phone in this manner and the bill has been charged to me. Does the telephone company have a right to do this?

A. Yes, do you not think the regulation is reasonable?

What The Cashier Says Goes

Q. If a bank cashier has dealings with certain individuals, they believing that he has authority to do the act in question, while in reality, he is unauthorized, can the bank be compelled to stand by his act?

A. The cashier of a bank is one of its principal officers and frequently is considered as its chief executive officer. It follows that as a general proposition, the cashier's acts, when done within the ordinary course of business and pursuant to the usual course of business dealings, will be binding upon the bank, even though such acts may be, in fact, unauthorized, unless of course the individuals with whom he has dealing "should" know of any limitations or restrictions upon his authority.

Indifferent Children

There are sons and daughters who have not yet realized the uncertainty of life. Some day they are going to take the Governor on a good spree. Some day they are going to buy Mother those gewgaws. In the meantime, the old people sit rather wistfully wondering how long it will be before their children awake to the inevitability of the Big Sword. Let these children wake now. Some day they will have no heart for a good spree. Some day their eyes will hate gewgaws. They're still playing with a rattle.

The Woman Who Aids Cupid

She is blinder than Love himself. She doesn't realize that the man worth having is the man who wants a wife with a character stronger than hers. The strong man judges woman by his own standards. Is she careful of her reputation? he asks himself. Is she trying to get anywhere? He admires only the woman who keeps her hands on the oars, and her eyes in the boat. Strength is sexless. It is man's expense, not woman's, to take time to aid Cupid. Let the woman who goes to needless expense begin to economize. She doesn't have to lie awake over President Wilson's perplexities.

Buck Kilby hands down the decision that in the matter of the alienation of a wife's affections the man who does the alienating is entitled to recover the damages.

The people are pretty slovenly in many respects, but they seldom permit cobwebs to accumulate on their wine.

The fact that both Scylla and Charybdis have been destroyed is another move in the direction of simplified spelling.

There are many comedy situations, but nothing is funnier than a Frenchman's whiskers.

After a man has looked around and assured himself that the women are watching him, he proceeds with the task at hand.

The less you care about a relative the more likely he is to send you his photograph.

So long as he has any land left the Indian will always be the subject of some attention from white men.

The man who has no salaries to pay generally is in favor of raising them.

It is assumed that the New York man who died recently, leaving four widows, will have the words "At Rest" on his tombstone.

After a man is thirty-five you can guess his age with tolerable accuracy by merely looking at the back of his neck.

Men are so ugly that the comic valentines often flatter them.

A woman's idea of an unpardonable mistake is to have her crepe de chine gown referred to as chiffon.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Uncle Ben's Bowlder That Rocked.

The Kiddies Screamed With Delight.

"DO you know anybody who would like a picnic story?" asked daddy when the children climbed on his knee.

"We would!" cried both Jack and Evelyn.

"One beautiful, clear fall day Uncle Ben invited the three children to drive up Ivy mountain on a picnic. So Anne got out her wonderful basket and packed it with egg sandwiches, nut cakes, apple tarts and fudge. Old Ned drew the yellow buckboard around to the front door, the kiddies piled on to the back and off Uncle Ben drove. The ride up Ivy mountain soon got very steep, and the children could look back over wide places of red and yellow autumn leaves, while all along by their path grew lovely, tall goldenrod.

"'Are we going to the tower?' asked Bibbley Wah, who remembered another picnic. 'We're going to the tipping bowlder,' said Uncle Ben, who had kept this as a surprise for the children. So about a mile beyond the tower, on the same flat, rocky top of the mountain, he hitched Old Ned to a young hemlock, took the luncheon basket on his arm and called to the children, 'Come!'

"In about five minutes they reached a grassy spot, and in its middle ran the rock ledge, with a huge bowlder balanced on it."

"Was it as big—as big as a house?" asked Jack.

"As heavy as a small house and as big as our shed," said daddy. "It was also almost round, so that it looked like a huge green apple sitting on a log, for its surface was all mossy. 'Isn't this a jolly place to eat luncheon?' cried Uncle Ben. 'Back up against it and we'll begin.' So the children squatted, with their backs against the bowlder, and ate like little pigs till Anne's nice food had all vanished and the sunshine had tanned their small noses red.

"Suddenly Uncle Ben stretched—and what do you think they felt?"

"Felt him sleepy?" guessed Evelyn.

"No. Felt the bowlder tremble! At first they were afraid and scampered away from its base. Then Uncle Ben stood up, put his shoulder against the bowlder and tipped the huge thing till it rocked to and fro, while the kiddies screamed with delight to see so small a man move so huge a rock. 'If you youngsters would like to tip a bowlder, just stand here and push when I tell you to,' Uncle Ben invited. So three little children, together, rocked one of the most famous big bowlders in the state," said daddy.

"How did it get there?" asked Jack. "Did Uncle Ben buy it?"

"Hundreds and and hundreds of years ago," daddy explained, "some huge glacier probably rolled it out of the northland, and when spring rains melted the ice away they must have left this big bowlder sitting there."

Married Life on $80 a Month

BY MRS EVA LEONARD

John Sutner Finds Another Leak and Decides to Stop It Up.

"John, I am afraid I will have to get little Jack a pair of shoes this week," said Molly Sutner in an apologetic tone. "His feet are almost on the ground."

"Another pair? It isn't more than two weeks since I got the last ones. You must remember that I am getting five dollars a week less for ten weeks now, until Benson's fifty dollars is paid up." John had seemed more than usually irritated for the last few days and Molly would not have mentioned the shoes, but she was afraid the child would take cold with his feet half on the ground. The tension of asking for money under such trying circumstances was almost more than she could bear.

"For heaven's sake, John," she exclaimed, flushing angrily, "I would rather do without everything myself than ask for it, but I cannot see the boy suffer and keep silent. I will take some money out of the household allowance, if you say so, only that means less to spend on food this week." As John did not reply, she added resentfully: "Perhaps you think I wore the shoes out myself very carelessly."

"Now don't get touchy. I've enough to stand without your beginning that again. Besides, I do think you could watch Jack a little and keep him from wearing his shoes out quite so fast."

"All mothers say that the shoe bill is the biggest item in clothing a child," replied Molly. "What can you expect from an active child? He's worn them almost a month."

"Ah, I guess I know better," interrupted John.

"I can prove it by the bill." Molly rose and vanished into the bedroom, and soon reappeared waving it triumphantly. "It was three weeks last Tuesday."

John took the bit of paper in his hand. "It is a little better than I thought," he admitted reluctantly. "I'll take him down after I get home tonight and see if I can't find a shoe that will wear a little longer than the ones you select."

"Let me get them, John. He can't wear heavy shoes. They will hurt his feet." Molly looked appealingly at her husband.

"There you go. He is a poor man's son and may as well begin to realize the fact. The children of the poor can't wear soft hand-sewed shoes that wear out every three or four weeks. That has been one of our leaks and it has got to be stopped along with the rest. I thought you were anxious to save. That is what you have been talking all so fast."

"I am anxious to save," blurted out Molly, "but I can't bear to have Jack's dear little feet made sore and perhaps start trouble that may be hard to get rid of by putting clumsy, hard shoes on him. We will save some other way, John."

"We have got to save some other way and that way, too." John's tone was harsh and the boy had a scared look on his face, and sidled off of his chair and took refuge under his mother's arm with his head in her lap. "It is just one of your foolish notions. Jack is getting to be a big boy and can wear big boy's shoes. Can't you, dear?" John could not stand it to have the boy afraid of him.

"Come and see daddy and he will tell you about the fine pair of big boy's shoes that we are going to get tonight when daddy comes home." He shoved back from the table and held out his arms and the boy ran into them.

Molly saw that it was useless to say anything. One of the ways in which her self-discipline was showing was in her ability to leave a disagreeable subject before a violent row was precipitated.

"Well, we do need to save; trying this will do no harm," she thought and, sighing, shoved back her chair and began to clear the dinner table.

AND THE WORST IS YET TO COME--

SMART HOLIDAY CLOTHES FOR DOLLY.

No. 9130.

With the approach of Christmastide, mothers are beginning to prepare little tokens of love for their children. There is perhaps nothing that appeals more strongly to little girls than a big doll—and the child is doubly delighted if dolly has real clothes. The above shows a smart hat and coat that is right up-to-date and that will be found easy to make. The pattern, Ladies' Home Journal No. 9130, also includes an Empire suspender dress with kimono guimpe and sleeveless bolero. The coat has set in sleeves with turn-back cuffs and deep cape collar. Cuts in 4 sizes, 14, 18, 22 and 28 inches. The coat requires 1½ yards of 27 inch and 1 yard 36-inch material.

Patterns can be purchased at the store of A. E. Force and Company.

FIGHT FOR BETTER RATES.

Washington, Nov. 12.—The independent steel interests of the Pittsburg district will be given a hearing today by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the application of railroads operating from Chicago to the Pacific Coast for authority to publish a rate of 55 cents from Pittsburg to the Coast. The granting of such a rate would place Pittsburg on an equal basis with Chicago, from which point the rival steel interests are now getting an advantage in rates to the Coast. For over twenty-five years and until recently, Pittsburg and Chicago enjoyed identical freight rates to the Pacific Coast. Since the shift in rates, the western railroads have been losing much of the Pittsburg cargo, which has been diverted to ocean routes. The Pittsburg independents will be represented by F. A. Ogden, general freight agent of the Jones & Loughlin Steel Company, who has been vigorously working to effect a reversion to former rate conditions ever since Chicago shippers were given the advantage.

Will Train Campaign Speakers—Establish Branch of Rand School.

The establishment of a branch of the Rand School of Social Science in Elizabeth to train speakers for work in the coming campaign is one of the plans of the Socialist party. Fifty-eight members in Union county have expressed a desire to take the course and it is expected that these will unite with Essex county as the campaign work advances. Walter B. Fo[illegible] the county organizer of the party, has been given full power by the county committee, and he and his helpers have begun what they anticipate to be the hardest and the strongest fight ever put up by their party.

Through Union county the representatives of the party have already begun work, and they intend to keep going with vim until the end of the Presidential campaign of 1916. They say that it is not only for the national offices they intend to fight, but they are going to go after the local offices and make a strong attempt to elect several local candidates on the ticket.

With the establishment of branches of the Socialist party in Roselle, Roselle Park, Cranford, Hillside, Plainfield, and, in fact, every town where there are already twenty Socialist voters, the men who are active in the work will keep the others alive to the issue and will work hard for converts. One of the leaders of the party in this city says: "We intend this year to put up the hardest fight that has ever been waged in this section in any political campaign. We have men at the head of the party who are not afraid of work, and if it is work that will bring success, we feel confident that it can be attained."

A series of illustrated lectures will be given at the Socialist headquarters in Elizabeth, beginning Sunday November 21. These lectures are for the purpose of educating the laboring man to the conditions in the industrial life of the country. An up-to-date picture machine and pictures have been secured and installed in the hall for this purpose. It is probable that later these lectures will be given at Linden, Rahway, Plainfield and other neighboring towns where there are branches of the Socialist party.

It is expected that Elizabeth will furnish at least twenty-five speakers who can go out over this and other counties "stumping" as the work of the campaign advances. Some of these speakers will go to Essex county and some from that county will come to Union.

CITY PLANNERS AT BOSTON.

Boston, Nov. 12.—A city planning exhibition opens today the new east wing of the Massachusetts State House. Officials of nearly all of the bigger cities and towns of New England are taking part in the conferences which begin today and extend for ten days. The Homestead Commission arranged the conference as the ideal way to open the new wing of the State House.

—If there's a new owner in charge of the little store down the street, the chances are that a "Business Opportunity" advertisement has been the "s work."

NOSE CLOGGED FROM A COLD OR CATARRH

Apply Cream in Nostrils To Open Up Air Passages.

Ah! What relief! Your clogged nostrils open right up, the air passages of your head are clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffing, mucous discharge, headache, dryness—no struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh is gone.

Don't stay stuffed up! Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Ely's Cream Balm is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer has been seeking. It's just splendid. —Adv.

SAURER TEAM IS LEADING FIELD

Plainfield Car Makes Best Speed in Y. M. C. A. Membership Contest.

96 NEW MEMBERS

Much Trouble Experienced on First Lap and Several Cars Spend Day in Repair Pits—All Running Well Today—Boys Are Behind.

At the end of the first day's run in the six-day automobile race of the Y. M. C. A. a Plainfield car was leading the field.

The Saurer team showed the greatest speed on getting under way, and last night, when the entries were posted the local car was far enough ahead to bewilder its nearest rival. The team of Captain Zimmerman from the local plant turned in a total of sixteen new members as the first day's work, and the second team could only show a speed of ten members.

The total number of memberships turned in for the day was 96. That greater speed is not made is due to the fact that many of the cars experienced starting trouble, and some of the pilots were unable to get acquainted with the road during the preliminary tryouts, and were forced to go into the race yesterday under a handicap. They reported last night that they were getting their engines warmed up and might be expected to increase their speed today and other days of the contest.

Division A, of which Assemblyman William N. Runyon is chairman, won the division pennant. The Saurer team won the team pennant, that for the second highest team went to the Velie, with three tied for the third. It was temporarily awarded to the Packard team.

Chairman MacArt and Secretary Estes were well pleased with the results of the first day's campaign. They did not expect the workers to get fully acquainted with details of the canvass during the first twenty-four hours, nor did they expect the public to become familiar with the purpose of the campaign until it had been given at least one day's publicity. The teams must average better speed than they did yesterday in order to turn in the 100 members that has been set as a limit, but many captains reported last night that he had prospects on his list that would be turned into members within a short time.

One of the most cheering announcements of the evening came from Captain E. M. Sheppard, of the Stutz team. While Captain Sheppard and his team-mates only turned in two new members for the first day they announced that a member of Trinity church had authorized officials of that institution to select ten young men of the church for memberships to be donated by him. These will not be reported until the recipients have been named.

Some of the cars experienced trouble on the first lap around, and were not able to make a showing last night. The Oldsmobile found faulty gasoline in its tank, which would not explode properly, and was forced to drop back into the pits for a new supply. The Saxon, the Hupmobile and the Reo were all in the hands of mechanicians during a greater part of the day. The Hup had a blowout and pit workers were awfully slow in making the tire change. The Saxon team dropped by the wayside on the second lap and had to be towed into the pits while a broken crank-shaft was repaired, and the Reo developed a cough in the carburetor. All were in good condition last night, however, and may be seen out on the track this morning desperately striving to make up for lost time.

The standing of teams at the end of the first day's running follows:

Saurer, 16; Velie, 10; Packard, 8; Abbott, 8; Fiat, 8; Hudson, 6; Winton, 6; Locomobile, 6; Overland, 5; Studebaker, 4; Renault, 4; Oakland-Spicer, 3; Buick, 2; Stutz, 2; Lozier, 2; Marion, 2; Mercer, 1; Ford, 1; Dodge, 1; Maxwell, 1; Oldsmobile, 0; Saxon, 0; Hupmobile, 0; Reo, 0.

The poorest showing of the day was made by teams from the boy's division, and this was explained by one of the captains, who said that those seeking to secure boys' memberships had first to win the boy, then the mother and after that the father. He said they had won many boys and some mothers, but that the fathers were too busy signing up for their own memberships to be secured in a few minutes.

A pleasing feature of the first day's work was the large number of sustaining membership reported and the number of men who were not able to give a full membership, but who donated $5 to apply on the membership of some boy not able to pay for the privileges that he needs badly. In urging the canvassers to fully explain this feature of the campaign, Secretary Estes told of the boys' class held

360 ARE IN FAVOR OF CONSOLIDATION

Replies Coming in Slowly to Appeal Made by Board of Trade.

At the next regular meeting of the Board of Trade a prominent speaker will address the members on progressive topics and outline plans by which much more effective work can be accomplished by the Board on behalf of the city. Officials of the organization are disappointed that more of the people have not returned the postcards expressing opinions for or against the consolidation of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

In order to decide whether there was sufficient sentiment in favor of consolidation to warrant holding a special election, the Board of Trade several weeks ago sent 1,000 return postal cards to representative citizens of the city asking them upon the receipt of the cards to indicate on the return card whether they were in favor of consolidation or opposed to the project and mail the cards. These cards were sent to citizens and not alone to members of the Board of Trade.

About 400 replies have been received, of which about 360 are in favor of consolidation, while about forty opposed. The officials of the Board are anxious to have the remainder of the cards returned as soon as possible so that the proposition may be called to the attention of the Common Council or dropped for the present.

JOURNEYMEN AND MASTERS CONFER

Arbitration Board Disscusses Various Questions of Trade Relationship.

WAGE DISPUTE DELAYED

Owing to Absence of Contractors the Hodcarriers and Master Masons Were Unable to Adjust Differences of Long Standing.

The Joint Arbitration Board, composed of members of the Building Trades Council and the Master Builders' Association, met last night at the Thardes Council Hall, and various questions which have been disturbing the relationship of the employer and employe recently were discussed at length. Patrick E. Neylon, master tinner and plumber, who was judged as being "unfair" to union labor three or four weeks ago by the Trades Council for doing work on the buildings of the International Motor Company, was restored to good standing with the union. It appears that Mr. Neylon was doing work on the old buildings, rather than the new additions, which are being erected under conditions said to be unfair to union labor, with John G. Brown, of Philadelphia as the superintendent of construction.

Steps were also taken to have action taken against roofing concerns, who are supposed to be union contractors, for doing work on the new buildings at the International plant. While Mr. Brown, who, according to the local building permits, has the general contracts for the work, he has been hiring non-union masons and hodcarriers on other parts of the work, it is said.

The wage question, which has been under discussion by the local hodcarriers and master masons since the middle of June, was to have come before the Board last evening, but because of the absence of mason contractors who utilize concrete mixers in their work, it was laid over. This question was scheduled to be the important topic of the session, as some time had been spent by committees representing the hodcarriers' union and the Master Mason's Association in coming to some understanding on this subject.

The point that has been causing the delay in the two interested bodies in drawing up a new working agreement is as to whether the union hodcarrier should be paid $2 or $ for feeding concrete mixers. The journeymen are holding out for $ their standard scale of wages, while the contractors feel that the wages should be reduced in order to be able to compete against out of town contractors on big jobs. But two local masons have the mixers at the present time, as far as can be learned by a Daily Press reporter.

It was openly stated on the floor last night, so it is learned from those present, that there is a feeling among the journeymen that the absence of the two contractors was due to the fact that there was a desire to delay the matter, as both contractors have large jobs on hand at the present time, where the mixers would be used extensively. Members of the Master Builders' Association present, however, did not feel that this stand was justified, and believed that there was a misunderstanding as to the night of the meeting.

Another meeting of the Arbitration Board will probably be called for Monday evening of next week when the question is to be settled and a new working agreement drafted and signed. The Master Masons Association is scheduled to meet a week from Monday night.

RAHWAY MAN HAD NOVEL SCHEME IN WORK HERE

Before the local police "got wise" to his novel scheme of working on the sympathies of the public, John Kenney, of Rahway, did a big business in the town section of Plainfield yesterday afternoon, the many alms he received finally resulting in his down fall. Kenney had smeared a preparation over his right arm which made it appear as though he had been terribly scalded.

Kenney exhibited this pitiful sight to passersby and asked for alms which he received in large abundance. He had about concluded that his new scheme was far more productive than his profession as an umbrella mender when a copper happened along and placed him under arrest. In the city court this morning Judge DeMeza discharged him on the grounds that he get out of town immediately.

EX-CONVICT TAKEN INTO CUSTODY HERE

Man Who Served Time in State Prison Admits Committing Local Thefts.

By the arrest yesterday afternoon of Henry W. Dorsch, who gives his home as Newark, the local police in all probability nipped in the bud plans for some wholesale petty robberies in this vicinity. The downfall of Dorsch, who admits having served one term of two and one-half years in State Prison, came after reports of the theft of a gun from the garage of Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed, and clothes from the premises of Ralph DeLibrio, on Randolph road had been filed at police headquarters. Lieut. Maurice Higgins and Patrolman Richard Birmingham took him into custody and although he at first denied knowledge of the charges against him he admitted his culpability in court this morning and was held for the grand jury in bonds of $500 on each count.

It is alleged that Dorsch, who has the appearances of a hardened criminal, has been lurking about Plainfield for several days, surveying the town with a companion. He refuses to reveal the name of the other man and it is believed that the latter has fled. According to a story told on the stand by Daniel Mundy, an employe of Mr. Reed's, he noticed Dorsch going from the yard with something under his coat and investigation revealed the fact that it was a shot gun. Carman Ritzo, an employe of DeLebrio's, said that he had seen Dorsch around for several days and had seen him acting suspiciously with another man.

Dorsch is one of three men who was arrested here on April 11, 1907, by Captain Flynn, and turned over to the detective bureau of Newark. They were wanted on charges of stealing copper wire and other plunder from the Public Service Corporation and each was sentenced to serve five years in State Prison at that time. The other two were Arthur Glasson and Fred Celius, and it is believed that one or the other of these last two men was with Dorsch in Plainfield. At the time they were apprehended here in 1907 Flynn recovered much of the loot taken from Newark stored in the swamps back of South Plainfield.

MYSTERY ATTACHED TO MAN'S CONDITION

Edward Conklin Laid All Night in Stable After Being Hit by Train.

After lying for twelve hours in a semi-conscious condition in a barn owned by George O. Stevens at 747 West Fourth street, Edward Conklin, of 316 Park avenue, was found at 6:20 o'clock this morning suffering from injuries thought to have been sustained on the railroad. The ambulance was called and the man was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital, where it is said that he is suffering from numerous lacerations about the head and body and probable internal injuries. While his hurts are serious it is not believed that they will prove fatal.

According to the story told by the victim to Mr. Stevens, by whom he was employed, he left the stable at 6:10 last night and crawled back to it about 11 o'clock. He knows nothing of what happened between the hours of 6 and 11 o'clock.

George Green, of 917 West Third street, who discovered Conklin lying on the barn floor, notified his employer and later the police. It is the supposition of the authorities that he was hit by a train on the Central Railroad tracks and that his body laid in an unconscious condition on the bank until the time when he crawled into the stable.

VICTOR DE ALORIA SHARPLY REBUKED

Judge DeMeza Refuses to Hear Further Testimony After Grandstand Play.

GRAND JURY CASES

Joseph Luppo Held on Two Counts and Annie Nugent on One—Result of Arrest Made by Captain Flynn—$1,000 Bail Each.

"Playing to the gallery" proved disastrous to J. Victor De Aloia, a Newark attorney, in the city police court this morning, when he appeared as counsel for Joseph Lupo, City Judge William G. DeMeza refusing to entertain further evidence on the second charge against the defendant after his attorney had made a boisterous plea against the admission of certain testimony. Union County Prosecutor Alfred A. Stein represented the State on the two charges against Lupo, who was arrested the forepart of the week by Captain John J. Flynn for keeping a house of ill repute at 128 Liberty street, and the defendant was held in $1,000 bail on each count to await the action of the Grand Jury. Annie Nugent, who was brought here from New Brunswick by Lupo three years ago, was also arraigned this morning, but her counsel, Martin B. Stutsman, waived examination and she was held in bonds of $1,000 for the Grand Jury.

De Aloia first gave vent to his temper when Stutsman waived examination for the girl and allowed her to go on the stand as a witness for the State against Lupo. The court refused to allow a five-minute intermission to De Aloia in order that he might hold conference with Stutsman. The reason for this demand came after court when the Newark attorney accosted Stutsman on the street and declared that his client could not have been held for the Grand Jury if the girl had not been offered as a witness. He also attempted to give the Plainfield lawyer a few tips on how to handle a case, but Mr. Stutsman informed the Italian attorney that he already knew more now than De Aloia would be able to absorb during the remainder of his life.

The girl give testimony on the witness stand this morning in a clear, decisive manner in both cases, her evidence tending to incriminate the accused Lupo. She told of having known him in New Brunswick and having come to Plainfield at his suggestion three years ago. They located on Central avenue, according to the girl, and later moved to Liberty street, where they were when arrested by Captain Flynn. She declared that Lupo had worked but three months during the three years they lived here and that she had paid the rent and living expenses for Lupo, herself and her stepmother. She aols admitted having given Lupo money on various occasions.

The abrupt termination of the second trial came when Prosecutor Stein laughed at an extra "fling" which De Aloia took at one of the witnesses. The Newark lawyer leaped to his feet and despite the warnings of the court, continued in a loud voice to denounce the proceedings and make himself heard to the courtroom full of spectators. He afterwards became noisy during his talk with Martin Stutsman outside the courthouse and Captain Flynn ordered him to cease under a threat of arrest and imprisonment.

"GO TO SUNDAY-SCHOOL."

A new hour for Sunday-school will be introduced by Superintendent Frank O. Dunning, of the First Presbyterian church Sunday-school tomorrow morning, when the exercises will be held at 9:45 instead of 10 o'clock, as formerly. The flag raising will take place sharply at that time, according to an announcement by the superintendent, and every member and teacher has been asked to be there when the bugle sounds, "To the Colors." Tomorrow will be "Go to Sunday-school Sunday" here and each member is expected to bring someone in his neighborhood who has not been a regular attendant.

APPROACHING WEDDING.

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Ida Van Arsdale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Van Arsdale, of 1004 West Third street, to Harry J. Brower, of Orange place. The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride-elect's parents, Wednesday evening, November 24, at 7:30. Mr. Brower is a patrolman on the local police force.

WILLIAM J. ALLEN DIES IN 50TH YEAR

Well Known Borough Resident Succumbs to a Long Illness.

William J. Allen, aged fifty years, died at his home, 159 Somerset street, yesterday, following an illness of two years from cancer, with which he had been a great sufferer. Mr. Allen was born in England and had resided in this vicinity for the past twenty-five years. For several years he was employed as an agent by the Prudential Insurance Company, and later took a position with the Singer Sewing Machine Company.

Mr. Allen was a member of the First Baptist church and a member of Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, being a past noble chief of the latter organization. He was widely known in both the city and borough and had many friends.

There survives a mother, Mrs. A. B. Allen, of West Fourth street; a widow and one son, Harold Allen, two brothers, David and John Allen, and two sisters, Mrs. William Wilson and Mrs. William Pasch, of North Plainfield. Chief Marshal George Weiss, of the borough, was a brother-in-law.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Always eager to outdo his previous efforts, Manager Shannon is bringing to the Plainfield Theatre as the headliner for his new vaudeville bill next Monday, the New York cabaret success entitled, "Too Much Ginger." It is a singing and dancing offering presented by twelve girls, everyone of whom is an artist. The act has been seen during the past few months in several of Broadway's largest restaurants and comes to this city as a special attraction. It is preceded by flattering newspaper comment, and in booking it for the Second street playhouse, Manager Shannon feels that it will fully satisfy the most fastidious vaudevillian in Plainfield.

"Too Much Ginger" will be only one of the six good things on the program for next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the others being Ross and Stuart, a clever team, who describe their offering as "effervescent, exhilarating, appetizing vaudeville cocktail in one guly," entitled, "Hotel Nearly;" Rose and Troier, refined entertainers; Bruce and Barnes, presenting a comedy variety; Charlie Cole and Harry Wood, in their farcical sketch, "Kindlings," and a novel offering with numerous surprises inscribed in the advance notices as "The Great Shanghai Mysteries."

Dr. Parkhurst On "The Birth of a Nation"

By REV. DR. CHARLES H. PARKHURST

IT is impossible to witness the film drama "The Birth of a Nation," now being shown at the Liberty Theater, and not want to say something about it.

Every one who has seen it is saying something about it. When one has been crowded upon, pressed down and run over it is against nature not to make some kind of an outcry.

That is the way one feels when coming out of the Liberty Theater. The thing is vast. It is overwhelming. Nothing like it has ever before been put upon the stage.

The tension of the performance is but a single feature of it, but it is that which one feels most poignantly after three straight hours. It begins in an easy way, but commences soon to find its muscle and goes on to the end, pounding upon one's senses with blows that come heavier and heavier, more and more rapid.

It is not apparent what are the grounds of the objections urged against it nor what is the animus of those who are clamoring to have the exhibition prohibited.

The natonal board of censorship has approved it and reaffirmed its approval. The popular indorsement which the play has since received by the thousands who are seeing it daily will require more than small prejudices or moral eccentricities to disturb. In the meantime efforts to suppress it are thus far successful in nothing so much as in giving it wider and more remunerative publicity.

The intimate familiarity which David W. Griffith has shown with the events of the reconstruction period along with the detailed scholarly study which he has made of the wider territory of events which the play covers renders the production one of surprising educational value to those who were either young children still or even unborn in the stirring years of 1860 to 1870. A boy can learn more true history and get more of the atmosphere of the period by sitting down for three hours before the film which Mr. Griffith has produced with such artistic skill than by weeks and months of study in the classroom.

This drama is a telling illustration of the possibilities of motion pictures as an instrument of instruction in history.

The criticism that it exhibits the negro in an unfortunate light and that it is calculated to engender racial animosity is fully met by the consideration that it represents the negro, not as he is now at all, but as he was in the days when he had just had the chains broken from him and when he was rioting in the deliciousness of a liberty so new and untried that he had not yet learned to understand it and was as ignorant as a baby of the way to use it. It is in this respect exactly true to history, and if it reflects upon the negro as he was then it is a compliment to the black man of today. An exhibition of lawlessness might not have been proper thirty or forty years ago. Such proprieties change with the passing of time.

The battle scenes which Mr. Griffith has depicted are of surpassing power and realism. Every lover of peace must experience a certain painful gratification that just at this time the ghastly horrors of carnage can be brought so closely home to the eye. It is one thing to read about the trenches, the killing and the corpses. It is quite another thing to have them bodily pressed before the eye, with all the demoniac fury that marks conflict at close range. A well written description of a battlefield allows the place and the occasion to be invested with features of magnificence, with the heroism of the contestants and the glory of the victors. On Griffith's screen we see the real thing. There is no magnificence, no glory, but horror, brutality and stark butchery. It sickens with the sense of man's inhumanity to man. It makes war despicable and devilish. It conveys an indelible lesson to all who have been bewitched by those who have decked out the naked hideousness of war with tinsel drapery.

There are also scenes of surpassing dignity and beauty done by a master artist's hand—the signing by the president of the proclamation for volunteers which marked the end of the old regime, the surrender of Lee to Grant and the assassination of the president in Ford's theater.

The tender affection in which Mr. Lincoln is held was manifested in the way the great audience received the scene of a heart-broken southern mother pleading with him for her son, sentenced to death as a guerrilla. Every eye was dim with tears in the strangling hush that fell on the theater. What might not our country have been saved had the problem of reconstruction been left to the great heart—the one man who compassed within himself the resources of the intelligence, experience, breadth and sympathy of Abraham Lincoln!

"The Birth of a Nation" has my unqualified approval.

PRESBYTERIANS TO OBSERVE "GO TO CHURCH SUNDAY"

"Go to Church Sunday" will be observed at the "Promenade church," East Front street, opposite Church street, tomorrow morning and afternoon. The day has been set apart in various cities as a special one when all those who are church members but who have not been regular attendants in recent times, are urged to attend divine services. Following the introduction of the augmented choir and congregational singing in this church, "Go to Church Sunday" comes at a time when there will be a special treat in the form of a fine organ program that will precede the vesper service in the afternoon at 4:45, arranged by H. J. Harold, the organist and musical director of this church.

The Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring especially invites parents with children to attend both the morning and evening services at his church. If children are restless provision is made in the chapel for their care and toys are at hand in the gallery pews. The pastor preaches tomorrow night on "The Life of Christ" in a short sermon so as to give as much time as possible for the congregational singing service.

MY LADY WALKS.

My lady walks in quiet thought—
  Beneath her silken hood
The peeking curls full prim'ly lie,
Downcast she holds her eyes demure,
  Thick lashes veil their light;
The sun behind a cloud doth hide,
  Lest he should shine too bright.
What can I do but silent be
When pensive thus is she?

My lady walks with happy tread—
  Her saucy little curls
Do make my love-sick head go round
  Concording with their whirls.
Her laughing eyes look up in mine,
  And craze me with the sight;
The sun with all his splendor fails
  To shine with equal light.
Ye gods! What can I do but kiss
Such joysome maid as this?

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Under the caption, "Crucifying Runyon," the Elizabeth Evening Times published the following editorial on Thursday:

"Union county had a right to expect recognition for Senator Pierce and Assemblyman Runyon. Senator Pierce should at least have been floor leader of the Senate majority, and Runyon, through his Assembly leadership last year, had fairly won and was entitled to a promotion to the Speakership. If reports are correct Mr. Runyon will not even be honored with the floor leadership, and Senator Pierce will get no recognition at all. What is the answer?

"In the case of Mr. Runyon it is hard to understand why the Republican majority is crucifying him at this time. Without regard to his judgment and his conscience he stood for the Republican program last winter, including the Morris Canal scandal. It was the confidence the public had in Runyon more than in any other one thing that put an element of doubt in the minds of the people as to the real viciousness of the Morris Canal measure. The high esteem and unquestioned confidence in which the public held him caused many to feel that the bill was not so bad as it was painted. The same is true with a number of other diabolical plots hatched by the Republican majority under the direction of the railroad and Public Service lobbyists last winter. Of course, Mr. Runyon is from a county with only three votes, while the gentleman whose name is now associated with the Speakership not only has twelve votes in his county, but is the willing tool and supple jumping jack of Boss Dalrymple, of Essex county."

Collectors for dinners for the poor, such as the collections at Thanksgiving and Christmas, will have to be licensed in this State.

WAR BONUS FOR WORKERS.

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 13.—The second bonus on profits, offered by the Colt Firearms Company to its employes, will be contained in the envelopes of the workers when they are paid off today. The first bonus was $45, paid three months ago, and the second bonus will exceed this amount.

Thanksgiving Is Near

—and mention of Thanksgiving naturally suggests Thanksgiving dinners.

—and mention of Thanksgiving dinners naturally suggests the necessity for the proper cooking of food.

—and mention of the proper cooking of food naturally suggests that the best cooking appliances are necessary to produce the best results.

—and mention of cooking appliances naturally brings out the fact that there is only one BEST way to do one's cooking and that is by using a CABINET GAS RANGE.

Those who have used Cabinet Gas Ranges—and there are tens of thousands of them in use in this State—would not think of going back to the old coal stove method of cooking with all its dirt and inconveniences. Gas heat can be accurately directed and absolutely regulated so that the cooking service is under perfect control all the time. This means economy and efficiency.

If you have no gas range, buy one so that you can have it installed in time to cook your Thanksgiving dinner on it. If you do you will have one more reason to be thankful.

SHIRLEY & JOHNSTON

"THE QUALITY HOME FURNISHERS"

Babcock Bldg., West Front St.

JOCKEY M'TAGGET WEDS.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 13.—There is melodrama in the romance of Johnny McTaggert, that wee jockey who is claimed to be one of America's leading horse pilots. Johnny will get married tomorrow. He has finished his strenuous season, collected his bank-roll, and now for those wedding bells. His bride will be Miss Marie McDonald, a New Jersey girl, whose father is a prominent horseman. One day Johnny got a "nasty spill," and he was laid up in bed for a few weeks afterwards. Little Miss McDonald sent him flowers. "Then Cupid speared me for fair," admits Johnny, who hadn't had time up to then to fall in love. Then came the Brooklyn Handicap, and Johnny was to ride R. T. Wilson Jr.'s Tartar in that big event. Johnny won a "yes" from his lady-love on condition that he would win the race. Well, Johnny won the race and his bride, as they do in the story book romances. But Johnny thinks she would have married him anyway, and so the melodramatic feature does not figure heavily in his present happiness.

THE JAPANESE THANKSGIVING.

Tokio, Nov. 13—The Great Harvest Festival, the Japanese Thanksgiving, is to be observed throughout the Empire tomorrow. The main celebration is at Kioto, where, in honor of the new Emperor, Yoshihito, the sacred ceremonies of the Daijosai will be carried out. The Emperor, as the ruler of the Land of Sacred Rice, which was bestowed by his heavenly ancestors, offers a feast to his ancestral goda, and himself partakes of the sacred food. The Emperor is today performing one of the most sacred rites incident to his coronation. A service dedicated to the purification of the soul and body of the Mikado, also all members of the imperial family, is being conducted with the pomp and grandeur of oriental custom. Three court feasts, to which the foreign diplomats will be invited, are to follow tomorrow's festival.

MEAT EXPERTS TO MEET.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—A meeting of packers, stockmen, commission men and retail provisioners will open here on Monday, to confer with government experts on the marketing of live stock and the distribution of the nation's meat supply. Charles J. Brand, chief of the U. S. Bureau of Markets and Rural Organization, has called the conference of the producers, packers and distributors, in order that a better understanding may be had and the system of supply and demand be studied more closely.

NO BUILDING YET ON FORMER COUSSON PROPERTY

Rumors have been current during the past week that the owners of the former Cousson property in the rear of the Plainfield Trust Company site had plans out for the erection of a large business building. The property belongs to Judge William R. Codington, Fred Endress and B. Frank Coriell, each of whom has been identified with local realty operations. Mr. Endress stated to a Daily Press reporter that he and his colleagues have had tentative plans prepared for the purpose of learning the cost of a suitable structure for the lot, but nothing definite has been arrived at.

"It is quite probable," said Mr. Endress, "if we get a reasonable figure permanent plans might be drawn up to go ahead with the right kind of a building the location of the lot demands. That seems so far off now that it hardly seems worth talking about, yet we might say on the other hand that there is some truth in the rumor."

IN THE SUBURBS

Dunellen.

Contractor Samuel Titus has been awarded the contract of erecting a garage for Arthur Bogardus.

John T. Pierson, of New Market road, is making preparations to erect a house for his own use on Penfield place, adjoining the property of John Rinehart. He is just completing a shed on the lot for the storing of concrete and carpentry tools.

Work on the alterations to the Michael A. Gallagher building, which is to convert the lower floor, formerly used as the Dunellen garage by Gustav Barfus, has proceeded rapidly during the past week. The hardest part of the work has been the removal of the brick corner of the building facing on both North and Washington avenue, where the big plate glass windows of the new store will be. This has been accomplished with great skill. It is evident from the progress of the work that the new store is going to be one to be proud of.

The house of Councilman Richard M. Ryan on First street, formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. G. Elston Lowrie, is to be repainted. The contract has been awarded to Contractor J. F. G. Kinney.

A new house is soon to be erected on Penfield place next to the home of John Rinehart. It will be built for John T. Pierson, of New Market road and when completed, the Pierson's will make their home there.

The grounds about the new residence of Mr. and Mrs. Walter M Fowler at the junction of Washington avenue and Culhane place are being graded this week by Contractor Ellis, of Plainfield.

An addition to the residence of William E. Terry is being built at present by the Apgar Construction Company.

Extensive repairs are being made at present at the residence of Edward J. Dusel on Walnut street They include replastering, carpenter work, electric wiring and decorating

The frame of the new Roman Catholic church has now been raised, indicating the main height of the building. Work is being hustled to get it all enclosed before really bad weather arrives.

The residence of Arthur Vail on Front street owned by Mrs. Maria Hunt is now being repainted.

The residence of J. Alfred Wilson on Washington avenue is being repainted. The artists on the job are Contractors Harris & Shively.

Middlesex Borough.

The William Wiedenhaupt house on Warrenville road in Middlesex, is about completed by Contractor Edward Daniel, of this borough. He expects to have the work on the building entirely completed in a very few days.

The vicinity of Lincoln has been claiming the attention of Messrs. Kirchner & Voght, the local carpentering contractors, of late, and they have done several jobs there. They have just completed a contract for building a barn for Peter Smith, to replace one destroyed by fire sometime ago, and have a contract to erect a wagon shed. They have also received a contract for re-shingling and repairing the house occupied by Michael Frox.

Contractors are figuring at present on the plans for the proposed new school in Middlesex borough. It is going to be a fine building and makes a very desirable contract for anyone to obtain.

Warrenville.

Walter Scriven has been awarded the contract to enlarge the barn on Henry Williams' farm recently purchased by John Bowers.

Scotch Plains.

R. G. Stevens, of Fanwood, has purchased a plot of ground from Percy Cook, of Springfield road. It is said that Mr. Stevens will build a bungalow on the property and will occupy it as soon as it is completed.

German Valley.

S. W. Wyckoff has sold his farm at Sunnyside, near Annandale, containing eighty-five acres, with stock, crops and machinery, to the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company, of Plainfield. Possession is to be given at once.

Bound Brook.

A large brick structure is being built as an addition to the garage of the M. Bolmer Motor Co., of this place.

South Plainfield.

The Spicer Manufacturing Company has finished its electric power plant and will be independent of the Public Service Corporation.

Michael Day is building a barn on his property, corner of Church street and Lakeside avenue.

Annandale.

Through the real estate agency of William H. McConnell, of Annandale, Lincoln N. Burnham, of that town, yesterday bought the Hotel Windsor and its contents at Washington, owned and conducted by Fred E. Butler. Price not given. The Windsor is one of the busiest hotels in Warren county. It is understood that Mr. Burnham, who up to about a year ago, when he disposed of the Annandale hotel business to P. R. Gerhart, the present proprietor, had for years been in the hotel business, will take possession Thursday.

STATE PERMITS.

Plans approved last week by the Board of Tenement House Supervision amount to $117,500. Among them was one for the Elizabethport Mutual Building and Loan Association to alter a dwelling at 202 Delaware street, to cost $500. The others are as follows: Irvington, $16,000. Jersey City, $27,000; Newark, $59,000; East Orange, $4,000; West Hoboken, $8,000; New Brunswick, $3,000.

EXTENSIVE ALTERATIONS.

Mrs. Alice L. Waldorf, who recently purchased the property she occupies at 134 Crescent avenue, has commenced extensive alterations to the residence. John H. Cose is putting on a new slag roof while Albert J. Rhodier has the contract for all carpentering repairs. These will be preliminary to other improvements planned for completion before next spring. The property was at one time a part of the Job Male estate and was purchased by Mrs. Waldorf from Mrs. Strathby.

"Benjamin Desraeli"

Said, "unless the heart is right the whole body must suffer."

Likewise with a store—if its intent is not right, its business must suffer.

Our intent is sound, fair, equitable and profitable. We have not sold "Things Men Wear" without learning that as a man sows, so shall he reap.

The Rothberg store has no regrets — it sowed Fair-dealing and reaped Success.

If we had it to go over again, we would perform our part as we have done, for nothing is so precious as a good name—nor so profitable.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

"The Closing Net," in five parts, will be the chief dramatic attraction at the U. S. Astor Theatre today with Howard Estabrook in the leading role. It is a picture that will appeal to the most exacting. Mr. Estabrook is one of the best known dramatic actors of the country. Monday and Tuesday, Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne will be seen in "Pennington's Choice," a Metro feature in which their chief support is James J. Jeffries, one-time champion pugilist of the world. Jeffries will be seen in the most exciting scene of the picture in which he has a fight with Bushman. They both are giants and the battle is very warm for a few minutes. Bushman being the hero of the piece, of course, must win, which he does to the queen's taste.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Another big show is announced for next week at Proctor's Theatre. The program contains a number of excellent features, the most important of which is the sensational photoplay, "Carmen," direct from its big success in New York city. As everybody knows, "Carmen" is a typical vampire character. William Fox, the producer of this magnificent film spectacle, kept this fact in mind and secured the greatest vampire actress in this country to portray the important role of the "Cigarette Girl." The star who will be seen in the characterization in Plainfield will be Theda Bara, known from coast to coast as the silent drama's greatest vampire actress, and the same who scored the triumphant hit in New York city. In addition to this film feature, there will be a splendid vaudeville bill including: Tuite's Collegians, a company of six versatile entertainers, the Australian Le Brauns, a novelty skating act, which is bound to please; Mazette, a charming young miss, offering a delightful entertainment. Coming soon, Triangle pictures, conceded to be the greatest pictures produced. "The Birth of a Nation" will be the attraction November 22, 23 and 24.

ODD VERDICT FOR BAYONNE PINNERS

Plainfield Knights of Columbus Team Loses First Series in the League.

LOW SCORES PREVAIL

Hard Luck Splits Feature Contest—One Arm Bowler the Star of Visiting Five—Anchor Man Taylor Bowls Best for Local Quintet.

After getting away to a twelve pin lead over the Bayonne bowlers in their opening game of the State Knights of Columbus League schedule here last night, the Watchung Council pin knights went to pieces and dropped the next pair of contests to the visitors, the second by a decisive margin. The second verdict was copped by ninety-eight pins and the third by [illegible] The Bayonne team going into the last frame with thirty-one pins to the good. Low scores prevailed throughout the evening, the only doubles deckers, Chonks and Lunton in the second game, the former setting up a 223 and the latter an even 200.

Plainfield bowled a 746 total in the second game and 784 in the third. The only total to go over the 800 rail was credited to Bayonne, an 842 in the second turning the trick. "Finch" Monahan substituted for Strappe on the local quintet in the last part of the second game and Segray went in for Hughes, of the Bayonne clan, in the third engagement.

One of the features of the meeting was the pinning of Brown, the one-arm lead-off man of the visiting outfit. His nook ball was the subject for considerable favorable comment from the big crowd that witnessed the games and his totals of 178, 157 and 177 averaged up with the best of the evening. Plainfield's standbys appeared to be [illegible] per in last night's [illegible] of the localites [illegible] scores. Francis J. Blatz, who usually can be relied upon to fatten the team score, came in with totals of 159, 167 and 168, all of which are surprisingly low for him. Joe Sullivan, one of the infant members of the Queen City contingent, got away to a good start in the first with a 175, but fell down to 138 in the second. "Buck" Taylor, the anchor man of the Watchung Council quintet, exhibited the most consistent brand of bowling, getting 170 in all three of his games. The Plainfielders in general had much hard luck on splits, Blatz and Howe being especially heavy losers through this turn.

SPORTING NOTES

The meeting of the A. A. U. at New York on Monday will settle a controversy between the leaders in the Middle Atlantic Association, over the election of delegates.

The change of government in Mexico will make no difference in the Juarez racing season, which begins Thanksgiving Day. That is the latest war news. The horsemen are already planning the trip to El Paso, on the American side of the border.

Some of the greatest chess masters will enter the national tournament in America next January, in observance of the Rice jubilee. New York, Boston and Philadelphia will get most of the contests.

Al Shrubb has introduced a before-breakfast hike in the training of his cross-country runners at Harvard.

The Chicago Cubs will train at Tampa again this year. An association down there provides grounds and a bath-house and pays all training expenses.

BRUNSWICK PINNERS HOLD BEST LAURELS

Lead League Standing of Elks' Circuit and Coyne Has Best Score to Date.

With a record of six victories and no defeats the New Brunswick Lodge bowlers occupy first place in the Elks' League race. The Hoboken pin knights, who are in the runner-up position, have won five out of six games, while the Elizabeth quintet, which has won seven and lost two games, is not far behind. The pace-makers have the best average, a mark of 968, and have also made the best single game score, 1,024.

Coyne, of the New Brunswick five still holds the honors among the individual bowlers. He has a mark of 212-5 for six games. Van Ness, of the Newark Lodge team, is second. His average for six games is 201-5. Jack Speary, of the Newark quintet, is in tenth place, his average being 194-3. The best single game effort is a score of 242 by Taylor, of Paterson. Pittsburgh has a baseball wonder, aside from our friend Honus. He is George Artzberger, 97 years old, who has been playing amateur ball for fifty years. Last season he took part in 61 games, batted for .326 and fielded for .970. In one game this summer he scored the winning run by singling, stealing second and third and scoring on a passed ball.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

If present weather conditions are to prevail for a month or more to come, and there's no telling but what they might, it may be well to prolong the gridiron season long enough to get in a lick or two of real football. So many sham battles have been staged about these diggin's this fall that we've begun to think there isn't any football in our athletes any more.

Should Holy Cross fail to top the score of the Wyoming eleven it will be no disgrace, but at the same time local followers of the pastime have a right to expect at least a fair race for the verdict. The Plainfielders have a chance to show their mettle on this occasion and also an opportunity to get right with their local supporters.

Ken Phillips' migration to the west has caused considerable stirring up in football officiating circles here Saturday afternoon. Ken was an old reliable as a football referee and that he is being generally missed is conceded by all concerned, the fans as well as the combatants.

Now that the Knights of Columbus, the Eagles and the Elks have opened their alley schedules, how about a local fraternal league. There's the Moose to anchor and the Tabs and a few other organizations would fall in line at a minute's notice.

There's absolutely no reason why an organization of this kind could not be turned into a rip-snorter in Plainfield and it would go a long way toward putting the pin sport on a higher plane of popularity. We have a sufficiency of good wood-splitters and the alleys to be found here are the best for any city of twice this size in the country.

Plainfield's fire laddies have taken to hand-ball as a recreation. Last year it was basketball but the smoke-eaters soon found that this pastime was far too strenuous and performances to date indicate that the new frolic will prove far more popular. Handball as a limb loosener has no equal and the ladies should reap plenty of enjoyment of entertainment from the game.

What about that Holy Cross-Plainfield High School gridron tilt for Thanksgiving Day? To the average follower of football the teams appear to be just about as evenly matched as two eleven could and a holiday card of this calibre would be a genuine appetizer for a turkey dinner.

Haven't heard a thing from that Y. M. C. A. basketball team since the asssociation athletes elected a captain and manager. 'Pears to us although it would have been far better to delay this election business until after those 800 new members put in appearance. There'll sure be some talent to pick from.

With the football season now on the homestretch it's about time someone started to distribute the usual left over laurels to the coaching staffs. This reminds us first and foremost that Ralph S. Patch, as the guiding light of the P. H. S. eleven, has done some good work along football lines in the Ninth street institution since he took up his work there. Patch is to be commended on the calibre of a team he has turned out this year and the players are unanimous in their praise for his ability as coach and leader. If the game had more coaches like Patch in schoolboy circles there'd be far better football.

The surprise of the fall season rests in the fact that no bush league baseball magnate has kidnapped any of our city leaguers. The Plainfielders will never get a chance to break into frisky company after that minor league low salary rule goes through.

That representative Plainfield girls' basketball team is once more entertaining its annual trouble in signing up opponents. Records established by this group of maidens on the court in past years has stirred up an epidemic of cold feet among other feminine aggregations which might in a pinch be called upon to further opposition.

Having nothing else to do a staff writer for the Baseball Magazine has picked an All-Star baseball team and, having nothing else to print, we'll run it.

GOOD ROADS RUN TO BE NOVEMBER 26-27

Auto Clubs of New Jersey Will Father State Endurance Contest.

The date for the big twenty-four hour "good roads" automobile endurance run, which is to be held under the joint auspices of the American Automobile Association, the Associated Automobile Clubs of New Jersey and the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club, was set yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the contest committee in Newark for November 26-27.

The cars will be started from the Newark Automobile Club house on Friday noon, and will cover a course through the northern and central part of the State, winding up at the clubhouse on Saturday noon. The distance for the tentative route selected is approximately 425 miles and the running time will be figured on a basis of twenty miles per hour. The cars will run night and day, the only time being taken out being that for meals.

The run will take in the Lincoln highway to Jersey City, Ridgefield Park, Hackensack, Rutherford, Passaic, Paterson, Pompton, Bloomingdale, Franklin Furnace, Monroe, Lafayette, Augusta, Branchville, Newton, Andover, Stanhope, Netcong, Ledgewood, Kenvil, Mine Hill, Dover, Rockaway, Morris Plains, Morristown, Mendham, Chester, German Valley and then over Schooley's Mountain into Hackettstown.

From Hackettstown the cars will head for Washington by way of Beattystown. Thence through Hampton and Glen Gardner to Clinton, Whitehouse and Somerville. Thence to Princeton by way of Belle Mead, Harlingen and Kingston. Here the Lincoln highway is picked up again and the run made through Lawrenceville to Trenton.

Next the road leads across the central part of the State to New Egypt by way of Chesterfield, and then to Cassville and Lakewood. Then toward the shore to Point Pleasant, and along the shore road through Manasquan, Spring Lake, Belmar, Asbury Park and Long Branch to Seabright. The Rumson road is taken to Red

BUSINESS IS GOOD

EVERY MAN knows that while "clothes don't make the man," they go a long way in helping gather in the "shekels"—if the material is right for age, and is properly tailored. That's a statement no one will deny.

THAT BEING TRUE, we want to say that no shop in Plainfield, or anywhere else, can excel our work—and the goods we use will make any man proud of his appearance.

WE HAVE MADE an innovation, and are going to build a business man's suit for Thirty Dollars ($30). We are anxious to have you run in to see what we have to offer.

Bank, and thence to Holmdel, Wickatunk, Freneau and Old Bridge, South River and New Brunswick over the new highway.

Leaving New Brunswick, the road through Metuchen, Plainfield, Westfield, Roselle and Elizabeth to Newark will be followed.

In view of the fact that the Associated Automobile Clubs of New Jersey have taken in a number of new clubs during the past year, and the State organization has planned an extensive campaign for better roads the route for the run has been selected that it will take in every city in which there is an affiliated club, and official checking places will be established at each of these club headquarters.

The contestants will be required to take on gasoline and oil only at designated stations, and the checking at these controls will be in charge of the New Jersey Automobile Trade Association.

The run has struck a popular chord among the affiliated clubs throughout the State, and a number of special trophies have already been offered the committee by several of the clubs. It is also planned to award trophies to all contestants finishing with perfect scores.

MANY ENTRIES IN KENNEL CLUB SHOW

Dogs From All Parts of the East on Bench at New Brunswick.

The first annual dog show of the New Brunswick Charity Kennel Club opened this morning at 9 o'clock, and the affair gives every promise of being one of the very biggest sporting and social events ever staged in this part of the State. A tremendous amount of preliminary work was done by the promoters of the show and the results have been most gratifying. Entries have come from as far away as Chicago, Ill., in the West and Washington, D. C., in the East. Dogs were shipped to New Brunswick from some of the most noted kennels in the country. It will be a show long to be remembered and almost as big as the best show that Newark puts on. There are 350 entries.

The show is being held in the Company H Armory, which meets every requirement, and besides giving the people an excellent view of the exhibits, will afford the public an opportunity of viewing the New Brunswick soldiers' fine new quarters.

The classifications and kennels of Plainfield owners of dogs, and the names of some of the dogs in the show follow:

French bulldogs, Bourbon Kennel and Robert E. Smith.

Japenese spaniels, Greenacre Kennels.

Mrs. James Gardner Rossman, of Dunellen, has entered her Champion Sweetsir of Lyker, in the Maltese terrier class. She refused $10,000 for this dog, which is the most perfect dog on the show bench, and is entered for the special only.

There will be 489 prizes offered and fifty cups awarded the winners.

TIBBOTT FACTOR IN EASTERN FOOTBALL

Dave Tibbott.

Next to Coach Speedy Rush probably the greatest factor in the pronounced success of the Princeton football team this season is Right Halfback Dave Tibbott. Dave has sported in the limelight since the season opened. A terror while carrying the ball he has been even more terrifying to all his rivals because of his great kicking.

Maulbetsch, all-American half back and Coach Yost's brightest star, has given a good account of himself in the games thus far this season. In the recent game with the Michigan Aggies, however, he found a line that he could not successfully pierce.

in the Y. M. C. A. each Friday night, when a volunteer director took twenty or thirty street urchins and gave them a lesson in gym work, after which they were put under a shower and then turned loose in the swimming pool. He said that the results on these boys was wonderful, and declared that such a membership was the "sweetest" of all, because it helped to make a good man out of a youth who might otherwise fall into evil companionship.

The workers will participate in a big automobile parade over the streets of Plainfield Tuesday night It will start from the association building at 8 p. m., and it is promised that at least fifty cars will be entered. A band will head the paraders and occupants of the automobiles will carry red fire and other pyrotechnics to attract attention. Chairman MacArt put this idea up to them at the dinner of last night, and it was riotously approved.

Frank W. Ober, editor of Association Men, was the speaker at last night's dinner. Mr. Ober paid a tribute to the courage and devotion of Plainfield men engaged in the campaign for members. He said that a similar campaign conducted in Chicago resulted in 5,000 new members or one out of every one hundred residents, and Mr Ober felt that the campaign would be a success. He urged every man taking part in the canvass to give the association all that he had, saying that it was giving them and the city all that it had. Mr. Ober told of some of the big men of the country who admitted that they owed their inspiration to Y. M. C. A. associations in their early life.

W. E. Fenro, secretary of the State Executive Committee of New York will be the speaker for tonight. The dinner will begin at 7 p. m., and it is promised that the biggest and most enthusiastic meeting of the campaign will be held.

RECREATION NOTES

The Municipal Dance will be held tonight in the Washington School auditorium.

The Athenians will meet Monday night in the Plainfield High School gymnasium for basketball practice.

"TORNADO" STOLEN FROM NEW OWNERS

Lucky Winner of Throughbred Racer Highly Indignant Over His Disappearance.

If you had gone to the Plainfield theatre last night, and was lucky enough to win the thoroughbred Kentucky racer "Tornado" when the "Country Store" awards were made, and you had tied the horse in the theatre alley until the performance was over and then you had come out to lead your valuable prize home only to find that someone had stolen it, wouldn't it have made you mad?

Well, that's what happened to John E. Keely, and it not only made him mad but caused him to get highly indignant. Manager Shannon, who conducted the "Country Store," is indignant, too. The theft of the animal makes it look as though the affair was a "plant" something which he wishes to avoid. It is probable that "Tornado" was led away by some boys with the poor idea of what constitutes a joke. If so, they are asked to bring it back and no questions will be asked, otherwise the matter will be put in the hands of the local police.

The announcement that a horse would be given away as one of the prizes at the Plainfield last night, drew a capacity crowd to the Second street theatre. Many believed that the announcement was a press agent story, but when "Tornado" was led out and presented to Mr. Keely, the crowd received a pleasant shock. Mr. Keely was almost overcome when his name was called as the lucky seat owner and his chagrin at finding the animal gone when he went to get it at the close of the show can be better imagined than described.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS CONDUCT LADIES' NIGHT

The first Knights of Columbus bowling league match for the Plainfielders, who played against Bayonne, attracted considerable attention and the many guests formed a rooting squad for the Watchung pinners.

Refreshments were served during the evening by a committee composed of John T. Caulfield, Edward Tayler John J. Varley, H. P. Greenwood and a number of others. Dancing, with music furnished by Prof. Al Squire orchestra, proved to be one of the leading attractions on the evening program.

Reading Character

is always interesting, but a study of a tradesman's business character as indicated by his advertising is even more interesting and always profitable.

Just glance over the advertisements in the Plainfield Daily Press of the merchants whose places you know.

Does not the merchant write his store character into his advertising? Is it not possible to form a pretty good idea of the store from the manner in which it makes its announcements in the newspapers?

Merchants are coming to realize more and more that when they write an advertisement they are painting a business portrait of themselves—indicating their business character.

They are more careful in their statements, more modest in their language and pay more attention to typography and illustration.

Advertising is prepared now-a-days more carefully than ever before and there is more of it every day.

And by the same token it is going to be more interesting and profitable to the readers.

EIGHTY YEAR OLD HORSE THIEF SUSPECT ARRESTED

George Wilson, an eighty-year-old resident of Somerset county, was arrested near Neshanic last night by Somerset County Detective George Totten and Hunterdon County Detective Elmer Mahan, charged with the theft of a horse from Anthony Case, a resident of Three Bridges. According to the story told by the police and said to have been corroborated in every detail by the prisoner when he broke down last night, Wilson drove to Neshanic after getting the horse and visited the farm of A. J. Ammerson.

According to Mr. Ammerson he came upon Wilson as the latter was stealing some chickens from his poultry farm and a scuffle ensued. Wilson's face was badly battered by Ammerson but the culprit managed to get into the buggy again and drive away.

NEWS OF INTEREST IN THE PLAINFIELD BUILDING WORLD

Corner-stone of Netherwood Reformed Church Will be Laid Tomorrow Afternoon With Impressive Ceremony

Plans are now complete for the laying of the corner-stone of the Netherwood Reformed church at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Elaborate preparations have been made and representatives of the various denominations in Plainfield are expected to attend.

The ceremonial program will be as follows:

Selection, Dutch Arms Band; doxology; prayer, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, First Presbyterian church; solo, Miss Blancae Kelley; Scripture lesson; hymn, "I Love Thy Kingdom Lord;" address, Rev. Dr. Samuel Lane Loomis, Congregational church, Westfield; address, Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, First M. E. church; hymn, "Blest Be the Tie that Binds;" address, Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, First Baptist church; address, Rev. John Y. Broek, Trinity Reformed church; offering; selection, Dutch Arms Band; offertory solo, Miss Blanche Kelley; hymn, led by the Bible school; laying of the corner-stone; scattering flowers by the beginners' department of the Bible school; prayer, Rev. Edward S. Ralston, Netherwood Reformed church; hymn, led by Bible school; benediction; selection, Dutch Arms Band.

To meet the needs of a fast growing section of the city entirely without a place for religious worship, the Netherwood Reformed church or chapel was organized in 1909 through the efforts of Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of this city. A portable building was secured and located on Leland avenue on property purchased for the purpose. This building, which has a seating capacity of 100, was opened in July and by January of the following year the Newark Classis of the Reformed Church organized the society into the Netherwood Reformed church, with a charter membership of twenty-nine. Rev. Royal B. Stout was the first pastor and continued until August, 1913, when he resigned and was succeeded by the present pastor, Rev. Edward S. Ralston.

Since its formation the society grew rapidly, particularly the Sunday-school, which has entirely outgrown the capacity of the portable building, and a portion of the pupils are now instructed in the parsonage each Sunday morning. The large number of new dwellings which have been erected during the past few years have brought many new families to that part of the city and the church membership has kept pace with this remarkable growth until the portable church building is now far from adequate to accommodate the growing congregation.

This condition was foreseen more than a year ago and plans were started for the building of a larger and permanent church building. It was decided to first build the chapel and later erect the main church edifice.

Building plans were prepared by Charles W. Bolton & Son, architects, of Philadelphia, and preliminary preparations were made. Mrs. Susan F. Du Bois left a legacy of $1,000 toward a building fund and $5,000 was given by Mrs. Ralph Voorhees, of Clinton, for the same purpose.

Ground was broken for the chapel several months ago. The plans call for a building of hollow tile and stucco, trimmed with a fine grade of artificial stone. The floors are of reinforced concrete, strengthened by heavy steel girders. There is no woodwork about the windows and the entire building is practically fireproof. The building stands on a knoll with the main floor sufficiently high above ground to permit a large basement underneath the entire building.

The main auditorium has a seating capacity of about 200, so arranged with movable partitions that five Sunday-school classes can be arranged. These partitions can be removed when necessary so that the entire floor can be thrown into one room in the event of an unusually large congregation. In this way the seating capacity can be increased to 250. There will be two entrances at the front of the building and one at the rear.

The basement which is about 50x30 feet, is 14 feet in the clear. It is planned to permit basketball games and a gymnasium, as well as for dinners and such other purposes as may be necessary. A commodious kitchen 12x22 feet is another convenience, while on the south side will be galleries for spectators at the games.

The heating apparatus will be located in the front of the building directly under the tower. There will be entrances to the basement from the outside at front and rear.

The chapel will cost approximately $14,000 and while the outside will not be completed before spring, it is expected that the interior will be finished next month so that services will be held in the new building about January 1.

The grounds will be graded to a gradual slope toward the streets at the front and side, while on the south and east sides it will be level.

The completion of the chapel will be the second step in the development of this church property, the first being the portable building, and the third will be the building of the main church building, which will be undertaken at such future time as the growth of the congregation may necessitate and the necessary financial conditions will permit.

When completed the chapel and grounds will be one of the most attractive properties in the eastern section of the city, while, if present plans are carried out, when the main church is erected it will be a beautiful edifice.

PROSPERITY WITH ADVANCE PRICES

Contractors Rejoice Over the Return of Normal Conditions in Building.

MARKED GAINS SHOWN

Demand for all Kinds of Materials is Noted Among the Trades—Manufacturers Are Meeting Conditions With Difficulty.

New York, November 13.—With October showing a gain of 37.1 in national building over September, building contractors, architects and prospective investors are convinced that normal conditions are at hand. They have been pumping over a period of depression for so long that they were about to rejoice over the return to prosperous times when an unexpected advance in the price of Portland cement, structural steel, brick and some of the basic building commodities reminded them that perhaps conditions were headed for the extreme opposite to that from which they have just emerged. This prompted an investigation with the following rather startling results.

Satisfied early in the year that the war was going to have a continued depressing effect upon construction building material manufacturers, with hardly an exception, decided to limit their stocks this year. They had experienced considerable stress in 1913 and the latter part of 1914 from over stocks in a dull market. This time they were going to be prepared. So they reduced their capacity.

Just at about the time when the fall reaction in building construction normally developed building conditions began to show gains. August showed more plan filings than for any single month since July, 1912. September gained over August by 22.9 per cent. and October continued the improvement.

Shipyards began calling for timber. Machine shops called heavily for war steel. Then they began to take structural steel to enlarge their plants. The reflection was found in inadequate storage and housing facilities in various centers. Bridgeport, Conn., added 22,000 to population in five weeks, and some factories had to house their people in stock rooms until they could find boarding places. Newark pushed its plans for meadow development to completion this year instead of next spring. Factories are going up there. All these operations called for building materials.

In April of last year Portland cement was down to $1.23 a barrel. Dealers bought heavily. Their yards were filled. In September they were receiving their last shipments at that price from the mills. In October prices were at $1.52 a barrel; practically all the unprecedented stocks of $1.23 cement had gone into construction. By the end of October all the $1.48 cement had been sold. $1.52 prices were stiff, and on November 1 the price went up to $1.67, with dealers anxiously inquiring what prospects there were for getting cement at that price after thirty days.

In March of this year common Hudson brick was selling at $5.50 and $6 a thousand, dock, New York, wholesale to dealers. Manufacturers had some 400,000,000 still unsold from last year. On August 1 the price of this commodity had dropped to $5.25 and $5.75. Manufacturers were in despair and were ready to close their plants down with less than half normal quota. There had been a strike, not wholly regretted by manufacturers, at Haverstraw early in the brick making season. But when it became known that in that month a gain of 13.7 per cent. had been made in building construction, brick manufacturers changed their mind about closing down. They tried to get more men, but the steel mills offered more money, and men were hard to get. In the meantime prices in a "dull" building market in this city stayed steady at low levels until on October 9 prices were found to be at $6.50 and $7 a thousand and not a great quantity of future brick available. Dealers had not stacked to any extent, so that the market was extremely tight at those levels, and was considered firm.

To further aggravate building material conditions, ideal building weather prevailed almost continuously from September 1 to the first week in November. Construction work went ahead as seldom before in New York at this time of the year. Operations were rushed to completion for the October renting season and so were other operations that were not scheduled to be completed until after the first of the year. This condition prevailed until it was suddenly discovered that the railroads were all congested with freight. The Panama Canal slides had shut out quantities of Oregon pine and other lumber from the Far West. Every available steam packet doing a coastwise traffic had been chartered for foreign freight service, barges down the bay were impressed into floating storehouses and even premiums were unavailing in moving freight.

If ever there was a case of unpreparedness in the U. S. A. it is right now in the matter of making a meagre supply keep up with demand for materials. Concrete ingredients, for instance, are particularly hard pressed. Trap rock, ordinarily used for concrete bond, where gravel is not used, has advanced five cents a cubic yard and may go higher. The other alternative is gravel, which has been advanced between five and ten cents a cubic yard. All steel reinforcement material is higher by ten cents a pound than it was four months ago. Even sand has gone up five cents a cubic yard.

If this demand should develop in France, similar inquiries will develop in other countries. People here are beginning to ask where will building material prices go to. So speculative elements have entered the material field. While manufacturers are protecting regular customers, it is likely that prices will continue to rise further. Speculators have already begun to buy. It is a good time for building projectors to be prepared.

NEW BUILDING POSSIBLE FOR WATCHUNG AVENUE

Appearances at the present time indicate that Watchung avenue will have another new building between Now and next spring. Harry W. Marshall, owner of Marshall's laundry, is having plans prepared for a large modern building adjoining his present structure at Watchung avenue and East Fourth street. As to whether it will be two or three stories in height depends upon the size of the estimates for the work, bids for which are to be received later.

Mr. Marshall recently purchased forty feet of the vacant lot between Fourth and Fifth streets on this busy thoroughfare. Charles W. McCutchen owned the property and the purchase was made for investment purposes.

REPAIRING FRENCH BUILDING.

Workmen have been busy during the past week making repairs to the French building on Somerset street over Green brook, due to the fact that several new tenants are moving in. John T. Caulfield is doing the masonry work, Charles L. Ryder, Jr., the electrical wiring, while other local men are doing the carpentering and painting.

QUINN FARM TITLE PASSED.

The Quinn farm on Park avenue, formerly the old Charles Brower place, has been sold to D. H. Bey, of New York, and the title has been passed. The farm consists of seven acres. The transaction was handled by J. T. Vail.

S. W. RUSHMORE'S MODERN DWELLING

$30,000 Structure Now in Course of Erection on Belvidere Avenue.

FIREPROOF THROUGHOUT

Bowling Alleys and Billiard Rooms Are Features—Large Sun Parlor to Measure 19x40 Feet—Many Unique and Attractive Rooms.

What promises to be Plainfield's most unique dwelling has been started on Belvidere avenue, the work on the structure now being erected for Samuel W. Rushmore being pushed by the contractors. The house is to be of brick, tile and stone, and unlike most structures of its type in this city, will be entirely fireproof throughout. The permit for the building was issued this week by Inspector T. O Doane. The estimated cost has been placed at $30,000.

This structure will have many unusual features, both exterior and interior, and will stand out, when completed as one of the show places of this section of New Jersey. The architecture is semi-colonial in nature, the structure measuring 121 by 43 feet, and will be but two stories high. E. S. Childs, of New York city, is the architect.

The first floor is to be an elaborate affair from start to finish, the feature which is to stand out pre-eminently being the 19 by 40 foot sun parlor, with a quarry tile floor. The living and dining rooms will also add to the attractiveness of the structure measuring 30 by 33 feet and 20 by 21 feet, respectively. A commodious reception room, measuring 21 by 18 feet, and a 16 by 19 foot billiard room are also numbered among the features of the first floor. The kitchen is to be modern in every detail, being fitted with both electric and gas ranges. A servants' dining room is also provided for in the plans for the ground floor.

The second floor is not to be without its unique features, four large sleeping rooms and three others for the use of the servants. A small sewing room, and four baths, the latter to be tiled throughout, are included in the second floor plans. Two balconies of large dimensions open into the second floor corridors. These balconies, as will be the case with the sun parlor on the first floor will have floors of quarry tile.

The basement, too, is to have its attractions. An up-to-the-minute laundry, measuring 9 by 18 feet, is to have all of the modern improvements, including a clothes chute leading from the first and second floors. Two regulation bowling alleys are to be installed in the basement, and will lend much to the attractiveness of the home of Mr. Rushmore.

Mr. Rushmore last spring purchased the tract of ground on which the dwelling will be built from Charles W. McCutchen. The lot has considerable frontage on Belvidere avenue, as well as Ravine road. The grounds themselves are to be improved and beautified, terraces supported by walls of quarry tile to be provided. The improvements to the grounds, when completed, will add much to the appearance of the Netherwood residential section.

A modern steam heating plant is to be installed, while the roof will be tile. The fact that the structure is to be thoroughly fireproof means much in the development of the building of dwellings. William H Dennick, of the city, has been awarded the mason contract, while the carpentry work is to be cared for by M Carlhardt, of Orange.

The excavation of the cellar was accomplished during the summer months, and everything is now in readiness for the pushing of the work during the remainder of the fall and winter months, and will mean the keeping of many of the local craftsmen busy during that time.

ENLARGING STORE.

The work of enlarging Debele's confectionery store, on Somerset street, is now in progress, and it will be several weeks before the job is completed. Contractor Ambrose Smalley is doing the work and has already removed the partition so as to give more floor space in the store. Large iron girders are being installed to support the floor above. As soon as this is completed Proprietor Debele intends to install a large soda fountain in the center of the store and add more modern show cases for the display of his goods.

GRADING SCHOOL GROUNDS.

The grounds about the Harrison Avenue School, in the borough, are being graded and laid out according to approved plans. Harrison avenue is also being graded and improved near the school, while the other streets which form the approaches to the school are being put in good shape.

TEMPERANCE HOUSE IN STANBURY HOME

New Owner of Scotch Plains Property Will Convert Old Residence Shortly.

Frank Keil, of Arlington avenue, this city, who recently purchased the Stanbury Homestead property at Park and Mountain avenues, Scotch Plains, will take possession during the present month, but it is understood he completed no plans for development of the tract within the near future. It is Mr. Keil's idea, however, to make a few alterations to the old residence and conduct a temperance road house, leaving the management of the place to a nephew. The necessary changes will begin as soon as William F. Stanbury, the former owner, disposes of his household furniture at auction and private sale.

The Stanbury tract, as told in the Daily Press two weeks ago at the time the deal was completed, comprises ten acres and is one of the best known pieces of property near Plainfield. While the purchase price has not been made known it is rumored that Mr. Keil paid $10,000 for it. The place has a frontage on four streets and can be easily developed. It is probable that Mr. Keil will do the developing himself at no distant date, although he has already received numerous offers for parts of the ground. Parcels could easily be detached if it were deemed advisable as it would be no hard matter to cut in new thoroughfares, the ground being almost perfectly level and easily excavated.

MANY NEW BUILDINGS DURING THIS SEASON

Aggregate Cost of Structural Work for Plainfield During 1915 is $533,269.

Not until the facts and figures in the case are gathered together does one appreciate to just what extent building and construction work has been going on in the city of Plainfield during the past ten months. During this period of time, Inspector T. O Doane has granted permits for the erection of 199 new buildings of various types, the aggregate cost of which is estimated to be $453,871. In addition to these buildings, fifty other permits are granted for alteration of other structures, calling for the expenditure of $79,398, making a grand total of $533,269. These figures represent the work called for by the permits issued by Inspector Doane up to and including October 31.

With two months' activities to be added to these figures to complete the present year, it is highly probable that this year will see close to $700,000 in buildings for this city during 1915. Repair and alteration work made possible by the revival in the local industrial world, will mark the next two months, and in all probability the rest of the winter months. Other new buildings are also being considered at the present time, and a fairly busy winter season is promised for the local building craftsmen.

The various types of buildings, the number of each and the cost of each are as noted below.

Type	Number.	Cost.
Dwellings	57	$203,415
Business apartment	7	62,500
Business buildings	2	104,345
Apartment buildings	1	45,000

Garages	55	15,940

J. P. EMMONS TO ERECT NEW DWELLING IN BORO

John P. Emmons, of Prospect place, has contracted with Charles L. Drake for the erection of a fine new residence on Washington avenue, between the present Emmons property on the corner and Green brook in order to make the lot much larger Mr. Emmons has had the barn on his residential property cut in half. One part will be moved to a new location on his own grounds for his personal use while the other will be placed back of the house to be built, fitting it up for use either as a garage or anything else needed.

The new house to be built will measure 28 by 31 feet with an interior arrangement of seven rooms and bath. It will be provided with all modern improvements and cost approximately $4,000. The work is now underway.

CRAFTSMEN LOOK FOR BUSY SEASON

Eight Building Permits Granted by Inspector Doane This Week.

AGGREGATES $50,600

Permits for the Month Call for a Total Expenditure of $57,610—Six Dwellings and Two Garages About to Be Started.

Building activities in this city took a big step forward during the course of the past week, when eight construction permits were issued by Inspector T. O. Doane. The papers cover the erection of six dwellings, two garages, one barn, and one alteration job, the cost of which will aggregate $50,600.

The permits for the present month up to yesterday noon call for the expenditure of $57,610, as against $29,725 for the entire month of November of last year. This amount of work being started is exceptionally large for this time of the year, and that means that local building craftsmen will be able to continue to work even after the real cold weather starts in. Many of these buildings will be enclosed between now and Christmas, and will permit considerable interior work after that date.

The permits as issued during the past week are as noted below:

FIRST WARD.

Emile Beyes, who has been prominent in local building circles for several years past, is to erect three dwellings on the northerly side of Columbia avenue. The structures will measure 23 by 24 feet, and will be of hollow terra cotta block. They will be two stories high, and modern in every respect. Hot air heating systems are to be installed. The estimated costs have been placed at $2,000 each. The work will be cared for by the owner.

George Felmly is to erect a 24 by 18 by 33, two story, frame dwelling at 354 Emerson avenue, to cost $3,500. The structure will be a seven room affair, and will be modern in every respect. George H. Fisher, Jr., is the architect, Watson Bayne, of South Plainfield, the mason contractor, while the carpentry work will be taken care of by the owner.

Marco Tedesco is having erected at Watson avenue and George street, an 18 by 28 frame barn to cost $300. The work will be done by the owner.

Jeremiah C. Callahan will erect a 26 by 18 hollow terra cotta garage at 304 Richmond street at a cost of $200.

SECOND WARD.

The directors of Muhlenberg Hospital have been granted a permit for the alteration of the Nurses' Home on Park avenue, the improvements to cost $6,500. The improvements were described on this page two weeks ago. Evarts Tracey is the architect, B. F. Tallamy & Brother the mason contractors, while the carpentry work contract has been awarded to James Carver.

Samuel W. Rushmore is to erect a two story, 121x43 foot dwelling of stone, brick and tile on Belvidere avenue at a cost of $30,000. A detailed description is found in another column.

Herbert Buxton has been granted a permit for the erection of a 16x22 foot frame garage at 963 Park avenue. The structure will be a one and half story affair, and will cost $1,200. A gas heating system is to be installed. Marsh and Gette are the architects, and James W. Carver, the general contractor.

FOURTH WARD.

As previously announced through these columns, W. M. Wilson is to erect a frame dwelling of the "double-decker" type at 213-215 Manson place, at a cost of $2,900. The building will measure 24x28 feet, and will be two and a half stories high. The structure will be a model of this type of buildings, and will be in accordance with the popular demand of the west end of the city at the present time. George H. Fisher, Jr., is the architect, Howard Huff, the mason contractor, and Cohen and Israealsky the carpentry contractors.

COUNTY CONTRACTS.

Building activities remain even throughout the county, with twelve contracts being filed at the offices of County Clerk James C. Calvert, at Elizabeth during the week ending last Saturday. The contracts call for the expenditure of $25,446. Those filed from this end of the county are as follows:

Tony Correa with Matti Boin, entire work new building, Watson avenue, Plainfield, $1,325.

THE NEED OF A SANE RELIGION.

A very wise man once said that "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." He did not mean "fear" as we ordinarily use that word, but "reverence" for God. Put this in modern language and the sentiment reads. The systematic worship and service of God is the essential element in every man's life and the man who does not recognize this fact is a fool. Another ancient wise man said: "The fool has said in his heart, there is no God." Interpreting this verse as the second wise man meant it to be understood, we find that he considered the man who never thought of God except at a funeral and then for a very short time belongs to that category of individuals in which no real man likes to be counted—fools. Let me bring in a third wise man, a man who belongs to very recent times, William James. (I think this statement is found in the latter part of his book "The Varieties of Religious Experience.") He says: "God and man have relations with each other, and in opening up his life to him, man realizes his true destiny." Sooner or later a man discovers this to be a fact, but he does not always observe the counsel of these wise men.

If a man is of the Jewish faith, let him be true to the religion of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and their God be his God. Let him be as devoted to his God as these patriarchs were.

If he is a Christian, Protestant or Catholic, let him be sincere to the great teachings of Christ.

When a man whose training has been in the Christian church tells me that all he needs to do is to be honest with his neighbor and God has nothing against him, I say in reply, that as a Christian he is not true to the ideals of his faith. Christ is his master or should be and he should believe everything He said and devotedly follow Him.

I can easily know what the great teacher said. I should be an honest and intense student of His life and words. I should attend the services of His church to know more fully of his work and message.

He founded a church for the betterment of humanity and declared that the gates of destruction should destroy it.

There is nothing like the church in developing a man's character. No brotherhood or club can possibly take its place, no matter how much good these brotherhoods imagine they are doing.

Some five or six years ago a very prominent preacher in London made this statement regarding England: "Seventy-five per cent. of the adult population is out of touch with organized religion."

The same writer remarks that "educated Germans frequently express their astonishment on coming to England at the fact that so many people go to church."

Do you wonder, therefore, that Europe is at war?

For years past, in our own churches, the cry has been, the growing indifference on the part of the world to the ordinances of religion.

Something is wrong with the ideals of men. I have often said to men who have become indifferent to the church and religion: "Imagine every church and meeting house out of this town and nothing left but your clubs and societies, would you and your family want to live in it?" And every man questioned has answered, no, with no reservation. Then, in the name of all that is reasonable and honest why does he not ally himself with the church which is continually protecting him and his family.

We do need to ally ourselves with the great Lord of Hosts in our present position. Do you ask what that position is? Men who know have said emphatically that California's treatment of Japan is manifestly unfair. California has no overplus of righteousness or religion. With no God to direct her she may stupidly and obstinately lead us into a war with Japan. If you don't believe that read what Sidney Gulick and General Vinton Greene say.

Read the editorial in yesterday's Philadelphia North American under this heading, "Alone in the World." The article is centered on two quotations from two prominent men who have lately been in Europe. This is what they say that "the world is aching to get at the wealth and war profits of this over-fed, helpless giant with all the United States." We believe in the easy money and are "white livered at the mere suggestion of fighting," but we are indifferent to the worship of God.

I am in sympathy with every movement that aims at the fullest preparation of this land against foreign aggression. With the movement that means the enactment of more stringent laws which will make it a very serious matter for a man to accept American citizenship when his heart is in another country.

But I believe with the prophets of old, when they spoke to ancient Israel that what we need is to be true to our God and the revelation He has made and the church He has founded.

Religion must not be tagged on to our lives to be used at funerals and memorial services. It must be a vital part of our lives.

It is said that a short time ago at a meeting of the Cabinet the President turned the session for a while into a prayer meeting.

I confess it as my conviction that prayer meetings should be held all over the land. When conditions are so ominous and preparedness is so lacking. This motto of Lincoln should be ours: "Lord, we don't pray that thou shouldst be on our side, but that we may have the vision to be on Thy side."

Religion is the sanest thing in life. I know that sometimes a man who is ignorant, or insane, or immoral, or unbalanced manifests his peculiar temperament religiously.

The Mayor and Judge of this city were perfectly justified in forbidding a certain religious organization from holding meetings on the streets of the city because these men and women assailed the treasured religious teachings of others. Of course, they thought of themselves as martyrs like Paul and the other apostles. It might have been helpful to them if they had remembered that Paul was always courteous in speaking of the religion of others. The utterances of these preachers and some of the charges they made were simply false.

There are other religious non-de-scripts roaming around the city, who thrust themselves upon you telling the wonderful conversions they have had in prisons and other places, but whose personality is anything but pleasant and who seem to be moral degenerates or mentally deficient. There are all kinds of religious cranks and some of them get into the churches. I don't believe that these religious free lances should be permitted to enter our jails or prisons and be permitted to preach unless they are properly vouched for by some religious body.

Yet the demand on us is to be more religious, to get in line with our privileges and to ask God to give us His wisdom in making this land worthy to be esteemed and a blessing to the world.

Ancient History

I'd love to know
How long ago
Somebody sprung this ancient wheeze
And other gaglets such as these:
"D' you know married men live longer than single men?"
"No, it just seems longer."

Twould give me bliss
To know when this
Was first upon the zephyrs sprung,
And if its author vile was hung:
"Who was that lady I seen you walking down the street with last night?"
"That wasn't a lady. That was my wife."

Or, in whose rule
Some crack-brained fool
Got this long-haired from his system
And if the waiting throng all hissed 'em:
Doctor—Your mother-in-law will have to go to a warmer climate.
Son-in-law (bringing in axe)—Here, Doc., you hit her. I can't.

Also I'd like
To know the like
By whom, upon a weary world,
This time-worn bit of cheese was hurled:
Drunken man (to man moving a grandfather's clock)—Why—hic—don't you carry a—hic—watch?

Marriage

Marriage is a trade in which neither party pays much attention to business principles.

Each party to the swap expects to get everything he wants without giving up anything.

When he gives nothing and finds afterward that he got just what he gave, he is surprised and deeply hurt.

It is considered highly disloyal and indelicate for the prospective groom to try to ascertain whether the bride's feet are mates.

It is likewise gross and vulgar for the bride to endeavor to find out in what key the groom snores.

Their happiness, if they have no more sense than most people, depends almost entirely on trifles.

And either of them would be ashamed to ask anybody who knew, about these trifles, beforehand.

Things big enough to fight about after marriage are too trifling to mention before the wedding day.

Most of the homely women get married.

That is because they know they are homely and never pass up a good chance.

The pretty ones think they have a lot of choice, and they wait and pick around and act snippy about it till the boys decide the aforesaid pretty one is not worth picking.

Then comes the "anybodyohlord" stage.

We once knew a girl who said she wouldn't marry the best man in the world.

She kept her word.

But she's married.

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Hare Lip And Cleft Palate

THE pre-natal development of the face is completed by the union of several separate processes or projections. One from either side unites with a central process to form the upper jaw and lip. When these side projections fail to unite completely with the central projection a cleft or space is left open, and this constitutes hare lip, or, if the cleft extends back far enough, cleft palate. Why the union sometimes fails we do not know. The only wonder is that it most always does develop perfectly.

A hare lip or cleft palate may be single or double. That is to say the cleft may be upon one side only, or upon both sides. In the lip the cleft occurs at the line represented by the elevation which runs down from the nostril to the vermillion border on either side. This line, or pair of lines, is produced by the union of the three projections or processes alluded to above.

Authorities differ as to the time when operation is best for hare lip and cleft palate. Hare lip alone is generally best operated on during the first few weeks of life, as soon as the baby is apparently started upon a healthful career. At one or two months of age the tissues are still soft and elastic, and healing is active. Furthermore, at this age, sensation is so dull and undeveloped that no anesthetic, or scarcely none, is necessary.

If there is a cleft in the palate the operation is a formidable one and generally it is well to wait until the child is a few years old, unless the physician deems the cleft a menace to life.

The simple repair of a hare lip is successful in something like three out of five cases when performed during the first few months. If union fails, if healing does not occur, of course that is disappointing, but not a calamity, for the operation can be repeated later and with better prospects perhaps. At any rate the deformity is so hideous that no effort or repeated effort should be spared in the endeavor to correct it. There is no excuse in allowing a child to grow up with a hare lip or cleft palate untreated these days.

OUR STANDING ARMY

THE standing army of the United States is the greatest in the world. There are statisticians who will indignantly deny this, but this is because they ride home in automobiles at night and do not know how the other 49/50 of us live.

Our standing army consists of upwards of 5,000,000 people. Thanks to American chivalry most of these are men. Some of us stand only a mile or so each day, while others stand ten miles a day, and have to transfer three times in the bargain.

The discipline of the American standing army is magnificent. This is because it is drilled regularly, twice a day. Every evening in every American city, whole cars full of our standing army can be seen obeying commands. After a man has belonged for a while he answers the commands: "Step lively," "Move up in front," "Take the next car," like a well oiled machine.

Many members of our standing army are splendid athletes. Nothing is finer for the muscles than standing army drill. A veteran will carry four bundles and a garden rake under one arm, hang from a strap with the other, and hold up two large men on his feet for hours at a time.

The American standing army is very useful. It is used to build costly mansions and provide titled sons-in-law and other trinkets for street car magnates. When a magnate wants a new yacht or an old master, he takes a few cars off his line and thus increases his standing army. In New York as many as 200 members of the army are often crowded into a single car. This is accomplished by other members of the army who are trained to push on them from behind. Sometimes the cars burst, and sometimes the patrons do. The former is considered more unfortunate by the company. New York magnates are very kind to their standing army, however, and have recently put sanitary straps in their cars. New York is the only city where the standing army has a regular waiting list each night. This is because women are allowed to belong to it, however.

Contrary to custom in other countries, the American standing army draws no pay. On the contrary, it pays for the privilege of standing. This leads to the belief that the army would not be worth two bits in time of war. An army which pays 5 cents per head for the privilege of hanging from a strap, and being punched in the back by a conductor, would probably thank the enemy with tears in its eyes while it was being kicked off the field of battle.

"How do I produce the effects which I obtain from the piano?" is answered in this interesting volume of personal interviews with famous pianists and composers.

Ignace Jan Paderewski is most sensitive to the choice of fingering a player makes, and believes that each finger can produce a different quality of tone. A fine photogravure portrait of Paderewski makes a fitting frontispiece to this contribution to the history of modern music.

Other contents include interviews with Rudolph Ganz, Teresa Carreno, Katharine Goodson, Raoul Pugno, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Hans von Bülow, Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler and Ethel Leginska.

CARE OF THE BABY, by J. P. Crozer Griffith, M.D. W. B. Saunders Company, Philadelphia. $1.50 net.

Happy mothers have beautiful and healthy children. To be a happy mother, a woman should understand the laws of her own sex long before she is called to this supreme honor of her life. Much of the fear and reluctance to bear children comes from ignorance of nature's laws and girls should be encouraged to read and study books on motherhood and the care of children long before they even think of marriage.

The present volume is a manual for mothers and nurses, but it may be read with profit by girls in their teens.

Dr. Griffith is Professor of Pediatrics in the University of Pennsylvania and is an accepted authority on the care and management of infancy and childhood in health as well as in disease. He has written out of a vast experience and his book can be recommended.

YOUNG HILDA AT THE WARS, by Arthur Gleason. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York. $1.00 net.

Ten weeks of Red Cross work and the adventures of an American girl in war-swept Belgium are told in this simple narrative. It has all the value of history and the interest of a novel.

The characters include an American girl, two English women, a couple of surgeons, and a Red Cross ambulance at the farthest outpost of danger in Belgium.

WHEN HANNAH VAR EIGHT YAR OLD, by Katherine Peabody Girling. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York. 50 cents net.

A story to make the heart more tender toward the patient, still people of the North who come to our country in search of freedom. Some of us call them emigrants; others call them cattle; few have the spiritual insight to recognize the true heroism that endures the homesickness, the strange ways, the cruel indifference, the rough treatment given to the foreigner. Mothers will read this little classic and thank God that their own dear ones are safe in cozy nests. Children will read it and run to mother to clasp her more closely.

THE SONG OF THE LARK, by Willa Siebert Cather. Houghton Mifflin Company, New York. $1.40 net.

The musical world of Chicago forms the background of this life story of a great American soprano. Readers who were familiar with the situation in musical circles when Theodore Thomas directed the Chicago Symphony Orchestra will find an added interest in tracing the characters of the story.

One follows the development of the little Swedish girl, Thea Kronberg, from her childhood in Moonstone, Colorado, to her triumphs in grand opera when she sang "Isolde" before the King at Buckingham Palace. There is not a dull page in the book.

The author writes with passion as she describes the struggles, the tragedies, the actual physical labor that welded the great soprano's genius into an intellectual and spiritual instrument of song.

We thrill with emotion as at an actual performance in reading the last chapter of the story describing the great scene when little Thea Kronberg, now become a famous soprano of Wagner rôles, "sang the story of her friendless life, and of how the thing which was truly herself, 'bright as the day, rose to the surface,' when in the hostile world she, for the first time, beheld her Friend. Fervently she rose into the hardier feeling of action and daring, the pride in hero-strength and hero-blood, until in a splendid burst, tall and shining like a Victory, she christened him:

"'Siegmund—
So nenn ich dich!'

"As the curtain fell, Harsanyi turned to his wife. 'At last,' he sighed, 'somebody with enough! Enough voice and talent and beauty, enough physical power. And such a noble, noble style!'"

Any account of the loyalty of young hearts to some exalted ideal, and the passion with which they strive, will always, in some of us, rekindle generous emotions.

The Life Line

He Who Doesn't Believe In "Pauperizing" The Poor

No doubt this is a splendid theory. But it's also a good conscience easer. For instance, when we have a five-dollar bill in our pocket—just the price of that new fishing-rod we want—and we suddenly see a poor hungry-looking beggar approaching us, it's so nice to have that theory to fall back on. "We keep him a beggar by helping him," this type of person tells himself. "He must find work. If he gets a living easily this way, he'll stay this way." Yes, but suppose he can't find work? Suppose he'd enjoy work as much as we enjoy our work—if he could get it? Many a man has risen to good citizenship—even to fame—by a helping hand at the right moment. The theory of self-help is all right; we know that nothing develops us like working out our own salvation. But perhaps the tide has been too strong for us, and we are stunned, for the minute; are we still to be judged as swimmers—when we haven't the strength to swim at all? Let the man who refuses help imagine himself in the position of the one in need. He can't go far wrong in giving as One gave. Let him shed his theories, and listen to his heart. He's missing a symphony.

When Business Clashes With Pleasure

When a girl first sets her foot upon the threshold of a business career she is apt to think chiefly of the rosy prospects that are in store for her—of the independence of her new position, of her increased pocket money, of her new opportunities for friendships, and so on.

Before she has been out in the world very long she is bound to find that the new position brings along with it also new problems and new difficulties, and she is confronted with situations that had not occurred to her before.

It takes a good deal of courage, to say nothing of self-control, to keep a smiling face when your chances of being able to go to the dance that you have been looking forward to for a fortnight vanish into smoke because, without warning, your employer suddenly informs you that the pressure of work is so great that you will be needed a couple of hours later at the office that night to get off his correspondence.

The Three Ways.

It is especially hard when you have spent all your spare time for weeks on preparing a pretty dress for yourself, and in bringing your evening cloak up to date for this special occasion, and it doesn't seem right that you should have to stay till 8:30 or later, when the proper time for departure is 6:30. You didn't think that business life could be so trying, did you?

There are three ways in which you might deal with this situation. Firstly, you could insist on observing your stipulated hours of work, and inform your employer politely but firmly that you have a previous engagement, in which case he would be equally within his rights in dispensing with your services and replacing you with someone who would have his interests more at heart. That would mean that you would not have much of a recommendation to offer to your next employer, and that while you were looking for your next job there would be no pennies to put one side for any more pretty dresses.

Secondly, you might submit to being kept at your work, but submit with so poor a grace that it would be perfectly apparent that you were doing so under compulsion. In that case you would certainly succeed in communicating your own bad temper to the person above you, and it would be some time before the friction ceased. There are always plenty of people ready to take your job if it is offered to them, so the only way to keep it is to make yourself so indispensable that things can't get along without you.

This leads to the third way, the best way. This is, as you will have guessed, to swallow your disappointment, try to forget you ever had any other engagement and do your extra work to the very best of your ability. This is a counsel of perfection, but it is worth following if you want your business career to yield you any real satisfaction.

The Silver Lining to the Cloud.

It is to your advantage as well as to your employer's that there should be "all hands to the wheel," for without co-operation the business might cease to flourish, other more business-like firms might step in and secure their contracts. That would mean that your firm might not be able to employ so many people and that your job might have to be dispensed with.

Perhaps, you know, there is compensation in everything, and though you may find it hard to find comfort in the fact at the time you'll enjoy your next dance ever so much more keenly, just because you were done out of this one. It works like that somehow!

So, when business clashes with pleasure, you have to remember that it is, after all, only the business which makes the pleasure possible.

How to Take a Foot Bath

How many persons know how to take a foot bath properly? The remedy is old as time, probably, yet not one woman in a hundred knows how to give it when prescribed by a physician.

Foot baths may be used either to warm cold feet and start circulation or to overcome congestion, break up an incipient cold or relieve bad headaches.

Preparations for a foot bath are the same in all cases. Special porcelain lined baths can be bought and kept in a closet or under the regular tub. It is cheaper and quite as effective to use a wooden or papier mache bucket. It must be large enough not to cramp the feet.

Choose a comfortable chair and have the bucket and knees covered with a blanket well tucked in around the legs. The upper part of the body should be out of a draft and if taken medicinally a blanket can be put around the shoulders.

The temperature of the water and duration of bath depends on what it is taken for. The water should be hot as can be borne and deep enough to cover the ankles.

For cold feet let them remain in the bath from five to ten minutes. Take out a foot at a time, dash with cold water and rub hard with a crash bath towel or flesh brush. To hasten good circulation slap the feet and rise on the toes.

See that the stockings and shoes are not damp when put on, preferably warm them.

A medicinal foot bath is the same in preparation but the patient remains in it from a half to three quarters of an hour. The bucket should have hot water added as it grows cool, and the head should be covered with a damp cloth. A little mustard added to the bath will help to break a cold.

Sometimes the foot bath for cold feet is given in alternate hot and cold water, followed by vigorous rubbing. Always end in the cold water. This is a more strenuous method and is often too severe.

The First Gray Hairs

Somebody once said that no one will ever quite realize the pang of dismay a woman experiences when, upon glancing into the mirror, she catches sight of the first thread of gray in her locks.

Now this is a slight exaggeration, for the sight of one gray hair does not have such effect. In fact, many of us have found one or two gray hairs in our tresses when quite tiny tots—and pulled them out as curiosities, too.

More often than not we do not notice that our hair is beginning to go gray until all of a sudden we awake to the fact that numbers of hairs have turned white, and that at the temples quite appreciable gray patches are beginning to show.

It is then that we begin to worry, when we should have worried long before.

When Does a Woman Get Gray?

A noted hair specialist, when asked at what age a woman began to grow gray, replied, "Nowadays the age seems to be about 26."

He was right. Quite young girls show gray hair nowadays. It is a sign of the hurry and worry and bustle of the age.

Frequent cases of premature grayness show more than this, though. They show that nowadays we neglect our hair. We do not take nearly so much care of it as our grandmothers did.

The gray hairs that come as a result of advancing age cannot be avoided, but premature grayness should and can be. If the first gray hairs show before you are 30, you should consult a hair specialist at once and do everything that you can to arrest it. A woman shouldn't begin to turn gray until after she is 40, under normal conditions. As a rule, fair hair does not lose its coloring nearly as soon as dark hair. Red hair keeps its color longest.

See to Your Health.

In most cases of premature grayness the health requires attention. Regular scalp massage is the only thing that will do good, but the treatment must be carried out regularly. To take it up by fits and starts is to do more harm than good.

Electric Brushing.

Occasional electric brushing is also very beneficial to the scalp. You can have this done at the hairdressers' or buy an electric hair brush for yourself. These are somewhat expensive things, though, and as the electric hair brush treatment need only be occasional, it is better to take it at the hairdressers.

Never let your scalp get excessively dry, and don't wash the hair in strong soda. There is nothing that tends to rob it of its color more quickly.

When the hair begins to turn gray you can do a great deal to hide the gray hairs by the way you dress your locks. Remember that it is underneath, as a rule, that the grey begins to show. This being the case, it is wiser not to adopt a style of hairdressing in which the hair is turned over to show the locks underneath. If you wear your hair parted, don't always part it in the same place, as it is liable to make it thin at the parting.

Baby's Carriage

A carriage should not be used at first, but at the age of two months it may be well employed as an out-of-door cradle. Only when the child is about 6 months old should it be allowed to sit erect, and only then when supported by cushions. A hot water bottle should always be put into the carriage in cold weather, as it greatly helps in keeping the baby warm.

The carriage should be amply long; it must have a hood to shelter the child from wind and rain, but this must not be too deep or else free circulation of air will be prevented.

A washing canopy in summer is absolutely necessary, lined with dark green. Great harm is done to the child by neglecting to shelter the eyes from the glare of the sun, when awake; and during sleep the head and face must never be exposed.

Baby's First Teeth

The embryonic teeth begin to develop at least six months before birth. It is probable that a nutritious diet for the prospective mother lays the foundation for healthy teeth in the baby and that lack of proper food for the mother may deprive both her own and the baby's teeth of some part of their normal vigor.

Every child has two sets of teeth. The first set, known as the deciduous or "milk" teeth, are replaced, beginning at about the sixth year, with the permanent or "second teeth." Nearly all so-called "teething" troubles belong to the first period, as a disturbance is rarely connected with the coming of the permanent set.

At birth each tiny tooth of both sets lies partly imbedded in a cavity of the jawbone, surrounded with and covered by the softer tissues of the gum. As the baby grows, the teeth grow also, and if the baby is healthy they are ready to cut through the gums, beginning at about the seventh month of life.

There are 20 of the milk teeth, five in each half jaw. The teeth appear in groups. There are five of these groups, with intervals between their appearance.

After the first group there is a pause of five to eight weeks; after the second, a pause of one to three months; after the third, one of from two to three months; after the fourth, one of from two to four months.

Thus, by the time a baby is one year old it may have six teeth; at one and one-half years there should be 12, at two years, 16 teeth; and at two and one-half years the entire set should be cut.

There is considerable variation, both as to the order in which they appear and in the time, so that the mother need not be alarmed if her baby does not follow the average as above stated; but if the baby has no teeth at the end of the first year it can hardly be said to be developing properly.

Probably the diet is at fault, or some disease is retarding the growth of the baby in general. In such a case the doctor should be consulted.

The Christmas Spirit Is Whispering Over the Store

IT is heard in the Toy World—now doubled in size and population; in the Jewelry and Book Stores; among the leather goods, the handkerchiefs; in the Men's Store; in the Galleries of Decoration—here, there, everywhere.

It is an elusive thing—this Christmas spirit. We have it; and we don't have it. We lose it; and we find it in the most unexpected place and at the unexpected moment.

The truth is: the Christmas spirit is in ourselves.

Go back—10, 20, 30, even 50 years—to our own childhood Christmas; to the days of expectancy, of uncertainty, of anticipation.

About now we were beginning to be very, very good. We studied our lessons. We kept our hands clean and our rooms in order. We obeyed. We were kind. We strenuously loved our parents.

Oh, yes. They knew. And we knew. It was this very knowing—in secret—that made the Christmas spirit.

Fifteen years later we were the parents. The children were ourselves recreated. There was the same subtility, the same subterfuge between us. Again we knew—the Christmas spirit.

Now—enmeshed in business cares, children gone to new homes—we forget. The Christmas spirit is gone. Where shall we find it?

Where shall we find it?

Why in ourselves, of course, in the million suggestions for gifts that now fill these two buildings.

To give; not to receive. This is the Christmas spirit.

"With all my wealth, with all my comforts, with all my power to get what I want," said a man of affairs, "my greatest joy is in giving. Not costly gifts, not sumptuous gifts. But simple gifts—things that I wrap up myself late Christmas eve and stuff into the stockings of my children that hang at the foot of their beds."

"The one gift that I received as a child which lingers most vividly in my memory is a red banana. It was on my birthday. It wasn't a yellow banana. Yellow bananas cost 10c then. Red bananas cost 15c. I was given a red banana. I have never forgotten it."

So this, then, is the Christmas spirit, the elusive Christmas spirit that we seek and do not find because we seek it away from home; the spirit that is found in ourselves.

It is whispering over the store these days—ready to fill the heart of any one who will hear its message.

Good Fortune Again in

Diamond Jewelry

¶ Last year at this time it was our privilege to offer a diamond cutter's stock of mounted jewelry at much under current prices. It was one effect of the war—the partial shifting of the diamond cutting centre to New York, the importer selling us his entire mounted stock to concentrate on cutting. The offering was greatly appreciated by those selecting Christmas, birthday and personal gifts. Our sales on diamonds were the largest in the history of the Jewelry Store.

A Still Better Presentation

¶ This year—through a deal suddenly closed only a few days ago—we are able to make a still better presentation — better in quantity, in variety, in newness of the settings, and in desirability in general.

¶ 487 pieces in the collection.

¶ $173,000 at current retail prices.

¶ To be sold for $126,000.

¶ Discounts of 20 to 30 per cent.

¶ The diamonds are selected white stones. The settings of all the important pieces are in platinum. The workmanship is above criticism. The designs are quietly rich; in exceptional taste.

¶ The prices are really extraordinary, considering the advance in diamonds (10 per cent. in the year), and in the cost of platinum and skilled labor—more than 25 per cent.

From Two Diamond Dealers

¶ Two long established diamond houses of integrity and high standard—in the front rank of the industry—contribute to the collection.

¶ Both are actuated by the same motive—to take advantage of the present increased demand for diamonds to dispose of their stocks in order to devote all their energies to the marketing of loose stones.

The Collection is Rich in pieces that are usually scarce at special prices, because it includes both staples and novelties.

Single stone diamond rings.

Cluster diamond rings.

Rings of diamonds and emeralds; of diamonds and sapphires; of diamonds and rubies; of diamonds and pearls; of diamonds and turquoise.

Diamond bar pins, pendants and la Vallieres.

Diamond festoon necklaces.

All-diamond medallions in delicate mountings.

Diamond and pearl chains.

Diamond brooches and corsage pins. Diamond bracelet watches.

¶ To miss seeing this collection in its virgin freshness and completeness is to miss probably the most extraordinary opportunity that will be presented for Christmas.

¶ This announcement—careful, conservative, discreet—as all advertising should be—is not an effort to "sell the jewelry" to you before you see it, but to invite your early and careful inspection. If it pleases you, you will purchase; if it does not meet your individual requirement, you will at least have had a "feast of the eye."

¶ Either way, it is good fortune.

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS

The Strand Theatre will next week present Pauline Frederick in a spectacular and faithful film adaptation of the celebrated novel and play, "Bella Donna," by Robert Hichens and J. B. Fagan. This play, which made Naximova famous, is a striking combination of intense tragedy and exquisite Oriental settings. The tale is that of Mrs. Chepstow, an English adventuress whose exploits are matter of common gossip in London. Despite the fact that her name is bandied about by the wits at his club and that her reputation is distinctly unsavory, the Hon. Nigel Armine, an impressionable and rather unsophisticated man, refuses to believe what he hears. She later tries to poison him and is outwitted.

The afternoon fashion shows enter into its third week. The latest Parisian and American styles for women are shown in colors on the screen. The Topical Review contains the latest European and American news pictures and war scenes taken at the front. Some beautiful and interesting travel scenes and scientific studies will also be shown as will a new comedy. The musical program, which has become a strong factor in the Strand's entertainments, is a very pleasing one, consisting of classical and popular selections by the concert orchestra, under the direction of Carl Edouarde, and vocal solos rendered by Mlle. Odetta le Fortenay, late of the Royal Opera, Covent Garden and Opera Comique, Paris, soprano; William Dorrian, tenor, and Anna Brandt, dramatic soprano.

Where the People Still Use the Abacus.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The History Of Children's Counting Frames.

ONE night daddy came home with a package under his arm. When the children ran to see if it was something for them he unwrapped a beautiful new counting frame. After supper he told the children this story:

"This is the nicest, newest counting frame I could find for you kiddies," he began. "But it is made just like the oldest kind of arithmetic in the world. Far back, before even history was written, little boys in China, Persia, Japan, Babylon, Rome and Greece, which are some of the very oldest countries in the world, learned to count on frames very like this I bring you."

"Did their frames have nice red and green beads just like ours?" Jack asked.

"The very first arithmetic of all," said daddy, "was probably a tray bigger than this frame and filled with nice clean sand, on which the ancients made figures when they had to reckon. But sand can get spilt, so as years went by they strung pretty colored beads on wires held tight in a frame."

"How could children count then?" asked Evelyn.

"Units, tens, hundreds, thousands—just as children begin to learn in schools now," daddy explained. "Each bead or each color meant a unit or a ten. The very interesting and strange thing is that there is so little difference between the ancient counting frame and ours right here. The ancients had a name for theirs that you may like to know."

"Yes—yes!" cried both Jack and Evelyn.

"They called it an abacus," said daddy. "And many a little Chinese lad, in his beautiful embroidered silk coat, sat with his legs curled under him and learned to count and pay for imaginary things. It is believed that China was the very first country to make an abacus, and I will tell you something for a surprise now. There are still parts of China and Persia where the people still use the abacus."

"Grownups—not children, daddy?" asked Jack.

"Yes, grownups, who have never been to school when they were children and are yet bright enough to buy and sell and make money to support their families. I once met a man who had just returned from a corner of China, where he had sold much cotton. He told me that the Chinamen who live in these little, out of the way towns are very quick at counting money on a frame, and that they will give you figures as fast as a white man can reckon.

"By tomorrow night, when I come home, I want both you children to make up a game by which you can learn to count one thousand rapidly."

"Units, tens, thousands—I spy!" cried Jack.

Married Life on $80 a Month

BY MRS EVA LEONARD

The Ellsons Chase Gloom From the Sutner Household.

"We will have to buy coal this week, I am afraid," said John Sutner as he filled the baseburner. "I did hope we could make this last the week out."

"I dread to think of winter coming on and no money to make us comfortable. It takes quite a little money to get ready for winter," continued John after a pause.

"It is strange that we never felt it before, and we are no poorer than we have been ever since we were married. It is because we never faced facts before, I suppose," remarked Molly, drawing the darner out of the stocking she was mending.

"It is a pity we had not faced them a little sooner before we got over our heads in debt." John put the coal scuttle in the kitchen and sat down by the stove with his feet on the fender.

"There is one thing we ought to remember: we belong to the great majority," he continued.

"What do you mean?" asked his wife, looking up listlessly from her work.

"By far the biggest half of the world exists on a bare ration; has absolutely no margin for accidents. The loss of a day's labor means hunger not a week off," he continued bitterly. "Oh, we've got company enough, if that is any comfort."

"It isn't, though. I would rather think we were the only ones in want." Molly's tone showed that her stock of courage was running low.

"So would I, for it would mean that a cog had slipped and not that the whole blooming machinery of life was dead wrong. When a big per cent of the people in this rich country are pinched for necessities, there is something wrong."

"That is no news. I have been hearing that ever since I was a girl. The knowledge has not seemed to help to straighten things out," said Molly wearily.

"Didn't someone knock?" asked John, rising.

"Come in, come in," Molly heard him saying a moment after. Then the gay laugh of Olive Ellson floated out to her. She had fled with the basket of darning to the bedroom and was brushing her hair hurriedly before the mirror.

"How kind of you to come in," she exclaimed as she took Olive's wraps. "John and I were sitting here boring each other to extinction. You have saved our lives."

"Let's have a game of cards," suggested the doctor. "It will send us to bed ready to sleep. We may even be able to join the limited company of immortals who get up cheerful, and sometimes take an interest in life before breakfast."

It was wonderful to see the change that came over the gloomy, worry-driven Sutners in the presence of the happy Ellsons, who seemed to have cheer kneaded into the very core of their being so that they leavened the whole lump of any society they entered.

"After they have been here I begin to feel that life may hold something worth while for even us," said Molly, smiling at her reflection in the glass as she combed out her hair for the night.

"It is a fact that some of the color has washed out," was John's cheerful answer.

AND THE WORST IS YET TO COME--

The store's advertisement is the store's daily message to you—and there is not often a day in which there is not something new and interesting in that message.

NOVEL WAIST ATTRACTIVE.

No. 9175.

There is perhaps no part of the wardrobe that a woman likes to see well stocked than the shirtwaist section. They can be so varied for various occasions that it is almost imperative to have a liberal supply on hand. The above Ladies' Home Journal Pattern, No. 9175, offers a novel and attractive suggestion for a waist with the pointed flaps giving an overlapping surplice effect. It is gathered back extending over the front to form a shallow yoke, has convertible collar, full-length sleeves and turnback cuffs. Cuts in 7 sizes, 32 to 44, size 36 requiring 2¼ yards of 36-inch material.

Patterns can be purchased at the store of A. E. Force & Company.

Y. M. C. A. RACERS HIT FASTER PACE

Turn in 169 New Members for Second Day of Big Contest.

TOTAL REACHES 265

Monday evening's Report Will Be Biggest of Entire Campaign—Chairman Runyon Challenges Chairman Gavett.

A little better speed was developed by drivers in the Y. M. C. A. automobile race during Saturday, the second day of the event, and the twenty-four teams participating gladdened the hearts of Secretary Estes and Chairmen MacArt and Albin by reporting a total of 169 new members as a result of Saturday's work.

This makes a total of 265 for Friday and Saturday and it is promised that more than 200 new members will be turned in at the dinner of Monday evening, so that the limit of 800 set as a minimum for the contest will be more than half reached.

If any of the workers were disappointed by the comparatively poor showing of Saturday, they made capital of it by determining to make Saturday's work good enough for the two days and they were rewarded by the enthusiasm that greeted announcement of the total.

The Saurer team increased its lead during the second day's run. After a record for the first day its members turned in twenty-two new members Saturday and they retain the red pennant which is to adorn the table of the leading team throughout the six day contest. Capt. Zimmer and his team-mates have come to look upon this pennant as their property, and are determined to possess it permanently, but the Packard team, the Overland, the Velie, Hudson, Lozier and others are pressing closely and they promise a real race for the last three days of the contest.

As an added incentive to good work upon the part of teams in Divisions 1 and 2, Chairman Runyon, of Division 1, Saturday night challenged Chairman J. W. Gavatt, of Division 2 on the returns of Monday evening. The losing division is to turn over to the winner five boys' memberships secured. It is not a gamble, explained Assemblyman Runyon, in issuing the challenge, but merely friendly rivalry. The challenge was promptly accepted. These two divisions are running close and the race will be a warm one. Saturday evening the totals were 63 for Division 1 and 66 for Division 2. Judge Runyon announced that his division would set a new record for two days on the course when it reported Monday evening.

Reports of the teams made Saturday evening follow:

Packard 13, Overland 17, Buick 1, Studebaker 5, Mercer 5, Saurer 22, Hudson 11, Velie 15, Abbott 10, Stutz 9, Winton 9, Lozier 12, Renault 2, Fiat 5, Locomobile 4, Marion 6, Oakland 2, Ford 5, Saxon 2, Hupmobile 8, Dodge 2, Reo 3, Maxwell 1.

The speaker for Saturday evening was W. D. Murray, president of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Mr. Murray has been an interested attendant at all meetings since the contest began and has been active in advising the leaders, but could not be persuaded to make an address until Saturday night.

He called the attention of the workers to the big work being done by Y. M. C. A. members in the world especially in war territory just now. He told of men with families who had left wife and home in this country to go to European battlefields on short notice simply because they were told that unfortunate war victims there needed them. All men were proud, he said, to belong to an organization that accomplished big things and all men should prize a membership in the Young Men's Christian Association above all other earthly possessions.

As an evidence of the spirit that was necessary to win in a contest such as is being conducted, Mr. Murray pointed to Yale's victory over Princeton Saturday. He told of the humiliation of the team in all of its first games with smaller colleges, and of the determination of the men to win no matter what the handicap. They worked and fought, he said, and they defeated Princeton in the biggest game of the year. Some of that spirit in the Y. M. C. A. contest would result in a thousand members in the six days, he said.

Chairman MacArt explained the importance of each solicitor seeing only those for whom he had assignment cards. When this rule was violated, great confusion resulted, he said, and he pointed to several instances in the first two days of the campaign. Other details of the work were discussed by him.

Saturday evening's dinner was attended by a crowd almost as large as that of Friday night. At least two hundred men were in the banquet

HEAR WILSON PLANS TO OPPOSE "JIM" MARTINE

Fielder and Grosscup With President to Confer About Senatorship This Week.

A Washington despatch to yesterday's New York Times said that New Jersey politics and candidates for United States Senator will be discussed at the White House on Wednesday by President Wilson, Governor Fielder and State Democratic Chairman Grosscup. The administration is expected to lend its influence to defeat Senator Martine in the primaries and the leaders will go to Washington to learn if the President has any choice for the nomination. Mr. Martine has opposed the administration on several occasions.

The administration would like to have Lindley M. Garrison, secretary of war, enter the Senatorial primaries. But Mr. Garrison will have none of it. Others mentioned, whose names probably will come up at the White House conference on Wednesday, are Governor Fielder, Chairman Grosscup and Frank S. Katzenbach.

PRAISES THE WORK OF THE Y. M. C. A.

Father Bogan Makes Some Pertinent Remarks Regarding Local Campaign.

In answer to a request for a pulpit expression of his opinion of the Y. M. C. A. anent its present activity, Father Bernard M. Bogan said yesterday at St. Mary's: "I look upon the Y. M. C. A. as an excellent organization that is doing much good in the community. Its efforts to secure many new members should be fruitful in bringing young men under its restraining influences and presenting many social and educational advantages.

"As a business proposition, the members may expect to get much more than the mere nominal society dues may pay for.

"As a religious organization, it is, of course, frankly Protestant. The test of admission for active membership is that applicants should 'profess to love and publicly avow their faith in Jesus, the Redeemer, as divine, and should testify their faith by becoming and remaining members of churches held to be evangelical;' and on this test, Catholics are excluded from active membership. Here Christianity is made the qualification for active membership and Protestantism is made the test of Christianity.

"In other words, no one must be an active member unless he is a Christian, and he must show his Christianity by being a Protestant. While the logical sequence of the 'Portland Test' so worded is a grievous offense to all Christians who are not Protestants, and especially to Catholics who surely have the right to the name Christian, it must be owned that the grievance rests largely on the wording of the 'Test.' No sane Protestant denies Christianity to a Catholic. He may be accredited with adoring a hundred pounds of painted putty; of paying tribute of divine adoration to the Virgin Mary —'our tainted nature's solitary boast' the mere natural child of Joachim and Ann—yet the Miracle Mother of the Son of God. Scarred and crippled in defence of his country, he may not be a patriot; red-written though his record be in the test-blood of loyalty, he may still be spat upon by the hero stay-at-homes as a traitor, but the wildest ravings of the religious fanatic have yet to deny him Christianity.

"And so, despite the wording of the requisite for membership, he is admissible to a lower rank though not of active membership from which his non-sectarianism (for he is of no sect) debars him from arising to any paying office in the association to which his ability might entitle him. With this kindly inflicted stigma upon his religious belief to be worn as a badge of tolerated membership, the Catholic young man who would accept it, would deserve no better place than would be assigned to him. He is evidently not wanted.

"Yet, as an organization of Christian men, frankly Protestant in religious belief, it has a place in the community where, should occasion ever require it, it shall find its Catholic friends eager to lend the influence of their organizations in the discharge of every civic duty."

M'CANN IS SLATED FOR LICENSE PLUM

Democrats Believe That Third Ward Man Will Be Named Tomorrow by Governor.

Leaders of the Democratic party in this city are looking forward to the appointment by Governor James F. Fielder tomorrow of James J. McCann, of 611 Division street, as local agent of the State Department of Motor Vehicles. The Plainfield Democratic Club met Saturday night to endorse a candidate for the plum but at that time it was stated that the appointment was already settled upon and as a consequence no action was taken.

Mayor Leighton Calkins early last spring requested State Motor Vehicle Commissioner Dill to appoint a local agent and it was promised that the announcement would come in the fall. No further action was taken however, until Mayor Calkins called Commissioner Dill's attention to the promise several weeks ago and it is believed that the appointment of Mr McCann will be the outcome.

Many candidates circulated petitions for the appointment and the vacancy has been the subject for much keen competition. While the appointment of Mr. McCann was not generally expected up to Saturday it is believed that it will prove a popular one.

Mr. McCann has been a member of the city and county Democratic committees and has served on the local election board for a number of years. He has been actively identified with the Democratic party in Plainfield and was one of the members of the small Board of Freeholders, which was later legislated out of office. The city committee held a special meeting Saturday night, when it was expected that P. J. Reville would be endorsed for the appointment. A letter was received from County Chairman L. T. Russell, stating that Mr. McCann would be appointed tomorrow.

Mr. Reilley was employed by the Lehigh Valley Railroad for twenty-six years and for a number of years they lived at South Plainfield. They moved to Plainfield four years ago and have since been living on North avenue.

CORNER-STONE OF EDIFICE LAID

Interesting Ceremonies Mark Event at Netherwood Reformed Church.

IMPRESSIVE ADDRESSES

Dutch Arms Band Features Exercises With Several Selections—Local Ministers Take Part in Attractive Program.

The cornerstone of the Netherwood Reformed church was laid yesterday afternoon in the presence of a large company of people, representing most of the churches of Plainfield. Just as the services were beginning rain began to fall. This made necessary a change in the order of exercises, and kept many people away who would otherwise have been present. The actual laying of the cornerstone was hurried through at the beginning of the service, and then as many of the people as possible crowded into the old building for the remainder of the program. In spite of the unpleasant conditions everything was successfully carried through. The Dutch Arms Band opened the exercises with appropriate selections, after which the audience joined in singing "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow." On the tower platform, where the cornerstone was to be laid, and which was decorated with American flags, were assembled the ministers of the city churches.

The Rev. John Y. Broek offered the opening prayer, after which Miss Blanche Kelley, of New York city, sang a solo. Mr. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, then laid the cornerstone, using the liturgy of the Reformed church and being assisted by Rev. Edward S. Ralston, the pastor of the Netherwood church. The following articles were placed in the stone: A Bible, the year book of the Reformed church in America, lists of the officers of the Netherwood church, the officers of the societies of the church, of all members of the church from its beginning, of all officers and members of all the departments of the Sunday-school; a folder issued at the beginning of the church containing names of its first officers; a photograph of the Rev. and Mrs. Royal A. Stout, photographs of the Rev. and Mrs. Edward S. Ralston, a photograph of the Rev. John Y. Broek, a program of this service of laying the cornerstone, coins of the current year, clippings from Plainfield newspapers describing the beginning of the work six years ago, roster of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R.; the Plainfield Courier-News of November 13, 1915; the Plainfield Press, of November 13, 1915. After the ceremony the children of the beginners department of the Sunday-school marched up singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and strewed flowers about the base of the tower.

The audience then adjourned to the old building, which was filled to its utmost capacity, many being unable to get in. There the program was continued with a solo by Miss Kelley. After this the Rev. Samuel L. Loomis, of the Congregational church of Westfield, an old friend of Mr. Ralston, brought the greetings of the Congregational churches. The Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, in a happy

SHOOTING UP PARTY LANDED IN CELL

Three Are Fined When Arraigned Before Judge DeMeza in the City Court.

Charged with carrying concealed weapons, Michael Petro, of West Second street, was fined $10 by Judge DeMeza in the city police court this morning with the option of spending forty days in the county jail, and John Rusko and Andrew Harak, his two companions, were fined $5 each on disorderly conduct charges. The trio was arrested by Patrolman Thomas Flatley last night at Plainfield avenue and West Seventh street after rumors of a murder had been circulated through the West End.

Sounds of pistol shots attracted Flatley to the vicinity of Plainfield avenue and Seventh street and when he arrived there he was told that three men had fled in the direction of South Plainfield. When he overtook them he found that all three were partially under the influence of liquor and brought them to a call box to summon the patrol. While they were waiting Rusko broke loose and got away, being caught some time later under a front porch on West Seventh street.

When searched at police headquarters a fully loaded pistol was found on Petro's person and he admitted shooting it off on the street. He explained his act by saying that he was aiming at some cats.

PERMIT IS GRANTED TO PILLARS OF FIRE

May Conduct Revivals in Front of Mayor Calkins' Home if They So Desire.

Mrs. Levina Leach, the sixty-one year old leader of the Pillar of Fire sect in this city, called upon Mayor Leighton Calkins this morning and asked for a permit to be allowed to conduct street meetings in Plainfield. The same was granted but not to the satisfaction of the petitioner. The Mayor consented to meetings being held by the Holy Jumpers in front of his residence, but refused a permit for any other part of the city. Mrs. Leach explained the purpose of the revival meetings by stating that they were held to "catch sinners as they pass." She was of the opinion that there would not be enough sinners in the vicinity of the city executive's home to warrant holding a meeting, intimating that an audience of listeners would not be available. The Mayor settled this question, however, by promising to sit on his front porch while the meetings were in progress and further declared that he believed that a few of his neighbors might be induced to do likewise.

Although the Pillar of Fire representatives have called at his home on more than one occasion Mrs. Leach claimed this morning that she was not familiar with the location of the local "White House" and would have to investigate further before promising a revival to the good people of that section. She left the city building with the permit to hold meetings in this one location but gave no assurance that she would bring members of the cult there for a meeting

CHURCHILL BLAMES KITCHENER FOR FAILURES

In Sensational Speech Before House of Commons First Lord of Admiralty Defends His Action—Not Responsible for Dardanelles Enterprise or Antwerp Offensive, He Says, in Resigning—Germans Take 8,500 Serb Prisoners.

Paris, Nov. 15.—The first great co-operative movement against the Germans since the interchange of general staff officers between England and France is underway. From Arras to Ypres the Anglo-French troops have begun a closely linked offensive and French and British guns are pounding the German lines night and day. This operation evidently has a double object, first, the capture of Lense and Lille, second, prevention of the transportation of German troops from the western theatre to be eastern or into the Balkans. It is estimated that at least 2,000 guns are hammering away at the German trenches.

Churchill Defends Record.

London, Nov. 15.—Winston Spencer Churchill, former first lord of the British admiralty, made his speech of defense in the House of Commons this afternoon. Mr. Churchill put full responsibility for the disastrous Antwerp expedition upon Lord Kitchener, the Secretary of State, for war and the French government. The former first lord of the admiralty also denied personal responsibility for the Dardanelles enterprise.

8,500 Serbians Captured.

Berlin, Nov. 15.—The capture of 8,500 more Serbians and twelve more Serbian guns by the Austro-German and Bulgarian forces in the Balkans was reported today by the German War Office. In the west the Germans stormed 300 yards of French trenches north of Ecurie. The whole west bank of the Styr River in the eastern theatre of war is now free of Russians.

MISS HEAUME BRIDE OF WALTER B. LAW

Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph Officiates at Attractive Home Ceremony.

Miss Roina Christine Heaume, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel T. Heaume, of 1156 Myrtle avenue, became the bride of Walter Benson Law, son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Law, of Dunellen, at a pretty home ceremony performed at the home of the bride's parents, Saturday night at 7 o'clock. Rev. D. B. F. Randolph, pastor of the Monroe Avenue Methodist church, officiated at the wedding which was witnessed only by the immediate families of the bride and groom.

Miss Heaume, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a charming gown of white chiffon taffeta with an overdress of silk net. She wore a tulle veil caught up with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Hazel Olive Heaume a sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and she wore a pretty frock of silk shadow lace and carried pink carnations and sweet peas. Herbert Terry, of this city, was the best man. The latter also played the Lohengrin and Mendelssohn wedding marches as the bridal party entered the parlor. Miss Muriel Delany, a niece of the groom, and Miss Kathlyn Heaumé, a niece of the bride, acted as flower girls, each carrying gilt baskets filled with pink and white rosebuds.

The house was tastefully decorated for the occasion and the ceremony took place under an artistic arbor of autumnal foliage and chrysanthemums.

A reception followed during which a wedding supper was served by Mrs. Henry Johnson. Mr. and Mrs. Law left later in the evening for Washington and other southern points. They will be at home to their friends after December 15 at their newly furnished bungalow on Mountainview Terrace, Dunellen.

ESCAPE INJURY AS AUTO HITS TREE

Fred VanNess, of Cranford, Has Exciting Experience Returning From Trip.

With the glaring headlights of an approaching westward bound trolley shining directly in his eyes, Fred Van Ness, of Cranford, returning, Saturday evening, with a companion in his automobile from Whitehouse, where they had been hunting all day, steered his car into a tree almost opposite the residence of John Vroom, on Round Brook road. The car was fortunately being driven slowly at the time and the occupants were able to retain their seats, thus escaping injury. The knuckle holding the left front wheel of the car was broken and the mudguard on the same side badly bent. The car is at present undergoing repairs in Waller's garage.

On account of the sewer work which is in progress along the Round Brook road, Van Ness was driving his car on the wrong side of the road at the time. The tree stands at the angle point of a sharp turn in the road. The sewer work had not progressed as far as this turn in the road and Van Ness had time to cross over to the right side of the thoroughfare, but two red lights placed just ahead to mark a trolley switch, led him to believe that the sewer work was being continued from that point.

Although there is only a clearance of nine feet between the tree and the trolley rails, Van Ness says that he could have easily steered his car through in safety if the motorman had only turned off the headlight of his car.

NARROWLY ESCAPE DEATH AT CROSSING

Salvador and Michael Cure Slightly Injured When Engine Hits Wagon.

Salvadore Curo and brother, Michael, had a narrow escape from death at the Washington avenue crossing of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, Saturday afternoon, when the rear end of a wagon in which they were carting potatoes was struck by an engine with a caboose going west. Both boys were thrown out but fortunately only sustained bruises. The horse also escaped injury. The wagon was wrecked and its load of potatoes scattered all along the track.

This crossing is unprotected and for years has been looked upon as dangerous. The boys' vision of the approaching train was obstructed by a string of side-tracked freight cars. Transcontinental Terminals

AMONG the many wonderful things worth seeing at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, which President Hadley of Yale has described as "the most beautiful and inspiring exposition the world has ever seen," the Transcontinental demonstration of the Bell System has won distinction and has been awarded the Grand Prize of Electrical Methods of Communication.

For the first time, perhaps, thousands who have visited the Bell Telephone Exhibit have realized what the wonderful long distance development of the Bell System means to them personally; how it links them to their home interests no matter where they are, and increases the range of their social and business activities.

One of the practical results of this striking demonstration of long distance development will be a larger use of the Bell long distance and toll lines which unite 9,000,000 telephones covering the whole country.

SAYS WE BECOME CRANKS ON HOT WATER DRINKING

Hopes every man and woman adopts this splendid morning habit.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice the drinking of phosphated hot water before breakfast, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons in the bowels which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clear the ashes from the furnace each day before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clean the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who have their turn at constipation, bilious attacks acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store but it is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.—Adv.

"HIGHER GROUND" SUBJECT OF TALK

William D. Murray Gives Inspiring Address Before Mothers' Congress.

"Higher Ground" was the subject of the talk delivered by William D. Murray, of this city, before the second day session of the New Jersey Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations, held in the State schools, Trenton, Saturday. In an inspiring address, Mr. Murray dwelt upon the necessity of a close relationship between the parent, teacher and child to bring about the best results in the building up of child character. He commended the organized effort of mothers and claimed that better results can be obtained through organized effort than through the effort of the individual.

Two other excellent addresses which featured the morning session were delivered by Dr. Calvin N. Kendall, State commissioner of Education, and that by Miss Jane D. Davis, county attendance officer of Monmouth county. The former spoke on "Two Agencies for the Training of Children," and the latter on "Two Views of Our Children in School: The Parents' View and the Teachers' View."

During the business session in the morning the following committee reports were read: "Child Hygiene," Mrs. Alexander Marcy, Jr.; "Home Economics," Mrs. Herbert E. Parker, of Plainfield; "Parent-Teacher Associations," Mrs. William A. Sandford, of Plainfield; "Country Life," Mrs. Augustus Reeve; "Education," Miss Lillie A. Williams.

Mrs. George S. Martin, of Mt. Bethel, addressed the afternoon session on "The Work of Parent-Teacher Associations in Rural Districts." Governor Fielder made an address on the co-operation of the school and the home. He emphasized the get-together idea for mothers and teachers, and said that attractive meetings should be arranged when mothers and teachers would learn from one another how co-operation of school and home could best be accomplished. The mother's part in the co-operative plan should be to instill the idea of attendance, neatness and obedience into the mind of the child at an early age, and so promote the spirit which will make for better citizenship.

During the evening program Henry Crofut White, chairman of the Plainfield Recreation Work, gave a talk on "Community Settlement," in which he spoke of the fine results of the movement for teacher, parent and children.

MANY ENJOY BIBLE TALK BY DR. WILBERT WHITE

The second lesson of Dr. Wilbert White's Bible class at Crescent Avenue church was well attended yesterday. About a hundred and fifty people were present and there was much enthusiasm. Dr. White is president of the Bible Teachers' Training School in New York and Plainfield.

In the introduction of the lesson, Dr. White gave a general plan of the Gospel, which he considers the perfection of artistic arrangement. An interesting diagram was placed on the blackboard, showing the divisions of chapters in this book into subjects.

Chapters one to twelve gave Christ's public ministry, and twelve to twenty revealed His private ministry. This first period was covered in three years, and in that time He was revealed through signs or miracles. The second period of private ministry took place in a few days and Christ was self revealed to individuals. Chapter five was taken as the subject for yesterday's lesson and it was studied with the thought that it was the summary of witness bearing. It was called "A Sign and Its Sequel."

The sign, or miracle, was the healing of the sick man. Its sequel was the charge, by the Jews, of Sabbath breaking. The challenge by Christ in reply to the charge was "My Father worketh even until now, and I work." Then came the claim: Sonship of Christ and Fatherhood of God (19-30). The corroborative testimony followed: First, John's witnessing, and then Divine witnessing.

This division of the chapter into charge, challenge, claim and corroborative testimony made a most interesting lesson. Dr. White is a clear thinker and his subject is handled in a most pedagogic manner.

Tues., Nov. 16—A. T. Stewart Memorial Day—at Wanamaker's

Tomorrow begins the twentieth year of the resurrection of A. T. Stewart in the pet project of his life, the new uptown Store at the Grace Church corner at 10th and Broadway.

When Mr. Stewart placed his feet and his brain on the whole block from Ninth to Tenth, Broadway and Fourth Avenue, to cover it with a six-story store, the town gossip ran wild that Mr. Stewart was making a mistake. "Too far up town," "a great folly," everybody said.

When the writer nineteen years ago picked up and put on Mr. Stewart's old shoes, and clumsily walked up to the doors to reopen them after they were thrice closed, owing to ill success, almost the whole city of merchants, manufacturers and well-wishing citizens and friends feared and prophesied misfortune because the Stewart Store was "too far down town."

But the wisdom of A. T. Stewart is certified to by the facts, which prove that the location was not too far up town in 1862, nor is it too far down town in 1915.

When A. T. Stewart erected this almost perfect business building, there was no way to get to it except by 'bus or carriage and horses. Today shows it to have more means to reach it than any other store in the city.

By Subway direct—from Manhattan, Bronx, Brooklyn — Astor Place Station within the Store.

By Third, Sixth and Ninth Avenue Elevated.

By all surface cars on Broadway (Seventh and Lexington Avenues included), all on Fourth and Madison Avenues and on Eighth Street—direct to our doors.

By Hudson Tubes, direct from New Jersey to Ninth Street.

By all stage and 'bus lines down Fifth Avenue.

By all trains entering Grand Central Station — under cover all the way (by Subway) to the Store.

By Pennsylvania Railroad trains by direct trolley via Seventh Avenue Brooklyn car.

By Long Island Railroad direct to Brooklyn Atlantic Avenue Station, thence directly into the Store by Subway; or into Pennsylvania Station.

By ferry and direct Subway from Staten Island.

Besides these steam, electric and trolley roads there are many days that four hundred automobiles stop at our doors, for this is the automobile age.

When that ship in 1823 brought over the ocean from Belfast it brought in that one young Irishman one of the best cargoes that ever came to the port of New York—a man whose intelligence, spirit and labors from an early date, impressed themselves first on the great metropolis and later upon the entire merchandise world.

It was inevitable that his liberal education, energy and personality should be recognized as fitness for leadership.

He became New York's first merchant, and added to the fame, wealth, employments, transportation facilities and popularity of this city which he loved.

He stood, too, for business principles which he guarded from violation.

The old merchants of New York and the younger merchants owe something to the memory of this man of progress, who so greatly served the city in his day and generation.

To make a beginning we shall christen this Sixteenth day of each November, being the day in 1896 when we first put up the sign, Formerly A. T. Stewart & Co.—

The A. T. Stewart Memorial Day

We shall celebrate it by endeavoring to make the store of today much better than it was in his time, and what he would like to see it if he were living.

The one thing Mr. Stewart believed in far above location was the Right Kind of Merchandise

About all things Mr. Stewart knew merchandise. He studied the people and prepared steadily and surely to provide what was most desirable.

He was the best judge of merchandise in his time and no other man, so far, we believe, ever so nearly approached him in correct judgment as the late Benjamin Altman did, who coupled with good judgment a great love for the goods he dealt in.

There is one other man in New York with similar gifts, who does not know we are saying this, and whose name we are not permitted to mention.

The celebration of Stewart Day, tomorrow, Tuesday, November 16, therefore focuses around these two things:

1. Our regularly prepared stocks of merchandise in all sections of the two buildings totalling nearly seven million dollars in value.

2. Ninety offerings of specially prepared merchandise at special prices—one for each year which has elapsed since Stewart opened his store, 1825.

Choose your own hour of the day, at your leisure; stroll over the two buildings and see and enjoy without any obligation to buy.

[Signed] John Wanamaker

CO-OPERATION URGED AS TRADE BOOSTER

L. S. Ayer Offers Timely Suggestions at Round Table Club Dinner.

Co-operation between the wage-earner and the shopkeeper was the topic of an interesting informal talk given by L. S. Ayer, superintendent of the Saurer plant of the International Motor Company, at the dinner of the Round Table Club at the Hotel Kensington today. Mr. Ayer offered a number of suggestions showing how the merchants of the city can reap a real benefit through the trade of the employed men in the local industrial plants. He pointed out that in the case of the concern he represents it is the aim to employ the best skilled help, the class that will count for something in a community, and he thought that the company was meeting with success here.

He also called attention to the fact that the company pays monthly to its employes here about $85,000 and in his opinion 80 per cent. of this money is expended in Plainfield not more than 20 per cent. being taken away by men who live out of the city.

Mr. Ayer said that he had felt heretofore as though the company's plant, as well as its employes, were "just outside" the city and that they were not always appreciated as being a part of the town. He wanted to disabuse those present of any such idea, for it had always been his aim to bring the plant and its men in touch with the city in every way possible. He thought that there were many ways in which the merchants could help to advance this interest among the employed men of the city and at the same time increase their trade.

Following Mr. Ayer's talk there was an informal discussion among the merchants of the various points brought out by the speaker and the gathering proved to be one of the most helpful of the several that have been held thus far.

BOARD OF HEALTH SERVES NOTICE ON THE SHERIFF

Sheriff Charles Sebring, of Somerset county, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city police court this morning, charged by Inspector William Addis, of the Plainfield Board of Health, with allowing waste water to accumulate on the premises owned by him at 210 Watchung avenue. The board alleged that several notices have been served on the sheriff but that he has ignored each.

Following a conference between the board officials and the accused the sheriff asked the court for an adjournment of two weeks which was granted. The defendant claims that certain litigation now pending in the District Court will clear up the difference with the Board of Health.

Temperance Sunday was observed at the session of the Hope chapel Sunday school yesterday afternoon. "Jack" Martin, a local boy, and a member of the St. Paul American Baseball Club, was among the speakers. "Jack" related the experiences of several baseball players who indulged in strong drink, and showed how those in that profession who were total abstainers fared better than those who were either moderate or heavy drinkers of intoxicants.

William Doig spoke on the evils of intemperance, while the members of A. A. Palmer's class of boys also took special part in the exercises. Special music marked the service.

BOOKER WASHINGTON DIES IN ALABAMA

Great Negro Educator Hurries Home to Spend Last Moments in the South.

Booker T. Washington, head of Tuskegee Institute for Negroes, and the greatest educator of his race that ever lived, died yesterday at Tuskegee, Ala., a few hours after arriving from New York.

Washington was in ill health when he left the east, but insisted on returning to his home. He was aware of his serious condition and said that he wanted to die in the south, where he was born and raised. The negro educator took charge of Tuskegee Institute in 1881, being its founder. He had earned his own education by work with his hands. From a little shanty in the Alabama woods his school grew until it now owns 3,500 acres, 100 buildings, and boasts more than 1,000 students. Its property is worth almost $1,000,000.

NEW JERSEY WINS SUIT FOR MORRIS CANAL TAX

Washington, Nov. 15.—Under a decision today of the U. S. Supreme Court in the so-called New Jersey tax case, which has been on the docket for the last seven years, the State of New Jersey will obtain the sum of approximately $750,000 in taxes upon the Morris canal. The question at issue was whether the State could tax the canal, which is now leased by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, in view of the original exemption of the canal company from taxation. The lower court decided in favor of the State. This ruling was affirmed by the U. S. Supreme Court today.

U. S. COURT UPHOLDS LIQUOR SHIPPING LAW

Washington, Nov. 15.—In an important decision today the U. S. Supreme Court decided that Joe Freeman, a resident of Kansas, can be indicted under the federal law penalizing C. O. D. shipments of intoxicating liquors from one State into another. Freeman had shipped to him from Joplin, Mo., six unlabelled trunks containing a quantity of intoxicants. He was indicted in the U. S. District Court for Kansas, but that court sustained a demurrer to the indictment holding that the defense was committed in Missouri, where the unlabelled trunks were delivered to the railroad and that he could only be tried in that State. The government contended that it was a continuing offence and could be tried in either State.

FEDERATION OBSERVES "HOME MISSION WEEK"

This is Home Missionary week in Plainfield religious circles and members of the local Federation of Women's Missionary Societies are busily engaged carrying out a special program for the occasion. The devotions today and tomorrow, as they were on Sunday, consisted of home prayer. An interesting meeting will be held Wednesday in the Young Women's Christian Association parlors, when Mrs. S. E. Warder will address the assemblage. The services Thursday, Friday and Saturday will be in the home circle, in addition to an interdenominational meeting in the First Baptist church Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, with Mrs. Edward J. Ralston presiding.

At this meeting Rev. Jonathan C. Day, D.D., will speak on "A New Challenge to an Old Church." Mrs. Robert Giddes will render the offertory solo.

A Home Mission rally for young people will be held Friday at 3:30 o'clock in Y. M. C. A. parlors. Rev. R. S. Y. Pierce will deliver an illustrated address on "Spreading the Light of Life." All these meetings will be instructive as well as interesting and the members are anxious for as large an attendance as possible.

Y. M. C. A. WORKERS PARADE TOMORROW

Will Have Auto Procession Through Downtown Streets at 8 P. M.

With the victorious Saurer team leading, contestants in the Y. M. C. A. membership campaign will parade through the streets of Plainfield at 8 p. m., tomorrow evening. It is expected that fifty automobiles will be in the formation. More than thirty have already been entered and it is expected that more will be added today and tomorrow.

Teams will ride in machines that they represent in the race for members. The parade will be headed by a band, followed by President Murray, Secretary Estes and Chairman MacArt and Albin, after which will come the Saurer team in a Saurer truck, both Plainfield products. Cars will follow in the order in which they stand in the contest, and it will require about thirty-five to carry campaign workers, in addition to officials and others who will participate in the parade.

Red fire, torches and pennants will help attract attention to the procession. The parade will be in the nature of an advance celebration of a successful ending of the campaign although it is hoped that it will arouse additional public interest in the contest and result in many new members being secured Wednesday which is the last day of the contest.

The Rev. William T. Bolt, of Round Brook, will deliver the address at tonight's dinner. Tomorrow night the members will hear W. J. Couse, president of the Asbury Park Trust Company.

All of the workers are looking forward to the biggest dinner of the contest Monday evening and each team will strive hard to make Sunday and Monday's work put it on top.

manner, spoke for the Methodist churches. The Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong made a pleasing address of greeting for the Baptist churches. The hymn "Blest be the Tie that Binds," was sung. This was followed by a hearty word of congratulation by the Rev. Charles B. Condit, of Newark, the stated clerk of the Classis of Newark of the Reformed church. Mr. Broek followed with a genial address of good wishes. The pastor of the Netherwood church, the Rev. Edward S. Ralston, spoke a few words especially calling to mind those whose gifts had made possible the new church, the late Mrs. Susan P. DuBois, the friend of the church from its beginning, and remembering it with a legacy of $1,000, and Mrs. Ralph Voorhees, who had made the generous gift of $5,000 for the building. The hymn "The Church's One Foundation," was sung, and the benediction then pronounced by the Rev. Charles B. Condit.

PATROLMEN PUT THROUGH SHARPSHOOTING PRACTICE

Members of the Plainfield police department were lined up in the Company K armory on West Front street this afternoon and put through a revolver practice. This is in accordance with a recommendation made by Chief of Police Kiely last year and which was partially carried out last spring on a local gun club's range. It has long been the opinion of those interested in the police department that the local patrolmen should be instructed in this art and the Police Board is determined now to hold periodical drills in the armory or other available places.

This afternoon Lieut.-Colonel William Tewes, of Jersey City, instructed the men in the use and control of the firearms. He is a retired member of the State National Guard, Fourth Regiment, and is at present connected with the Peters Cartridge Company.

THE BEST FIGHTERS HAVE NOT SUCCEEDED

Edward Rawson, Prominent Educator, Gives His Views on the War.

"Arms and Armament from the point of view of a Fossil," was the subject of a spicy talk by Edward Rawson at the Friends' Half Yearly Meeting Saturday afternoon. He ventured to say that fossils have much to fear. "Those huge prehistoric reptiles—such as the Ichthyosaurus—wore two tons of scales for protection," he said. "Now, who has gotten the better of them? Those of finer organization. The strongest animals, the best fighters are disappearing. We shall not have lions and tigers long.

"Man has brains—the more highly developed have won out in the struggle for existence. Not the best fighters nor the most impregnable defenses have succeeded. Now the beauty of mathematics is that it is always absolutely true. Likewise history teaches moral truths. The nations that have depended on arms are those that have perished.

"War is wrong. But we have it only so long as the majority of people believe it necessary. If you are convinced a thing is wrong, no possible combination of circumstances should make you do it. Sometimes people say there are worse things than war. But you can't have war without having all the worse things along with it. It is an absurd proposition that you can lessen the evil by taking a hand in the evil. In the present war you do not go out to kill the madmen who brought on the war—but the peasants and shopkeepers.

"What of self-defense? One better die than do wrong. We admire above all others those who have died for their ideals. The highest function of the police is to protect—the purpose of the military is to destroy. Nine-tenths of the enforcement of law in this country is by public opinion. The building of a big army and navy has never made for peace. Germany says she had to strike first in the fear of being attacked.

"My fear," Mr. Rawson concluded, "is not that I get shot but that I shoot someone else. I put righteousness above allegiance to a nation."

Mrs. Henry Wells, Mrs. Carver, Daniel Willets, Robert Barnes, Mrs. R. D. Williams and others joined in the discussion. A farce, recitation and music made the evening session enjoyable.

ANNUAL APPEAL FROM STATE CONSUMER'S LEAGUE

The Consumers' League of the State of New Jersey makes its annual request during Thanksgiving to the public to secure better conditions for women and children who are wage-earners; to further the enactment and enforcement of laws for their protection; to increase the demand for goods made and sold under right conditions, and to abolish sweatshops, tenement labor and child labor.

The Consumers' League stands for healthfulness and righteousness in industry and urges upon every buyer responsibility for conditions in industry of which he does not approve; it urges upon employers a high standard of law-abiding, humane treatment of employes, and aims at the creation of standards, fairness in the consumer, justice in the employer and efficiency in the worker.

HEALTH OFFICERS OF STATE TO MEET IN JERSEY CITY

Jersey City, Nov. 15.—The Health Officers' Association of the State is planning for a meeting of the Jersey City Club Friday afternoon and evening. The committees of the organization will meet at 3 o'clock and an hour later the business meeting will start. The hour from 5 to 6 o'clock will be given up to a symposium on special problems. In the program it is said that "this is the time for town, township and borough boards of health to discuss their special problems and secure advice."

In the evening at the general session Dr. O. M. Leiser, of the New York City Health Department, who created a sensation in Rochester some months ago by his attack on patent medicines, will talk on "The Patent Medicine Fraud." "Alcoholism as a Public Health Problem," will be the topic of a representative of the New York City Health Department. The name of the speaker has not been announced.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

James J. Jeffries, former champion pugilist of the world, Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne will be starred today and tomorrow at the U. S. Astor Theatre in a splendid photo-drama by the Metro Company, entitled, "Pennington's Choice," a five-part subject. Jeffries portrays a minor part but is seen in an episode of much excitement when he and Bushman, both physicial giants, clash in a hot fist battle. Jeffries is bested by Bushman, because the latter is the hero. Beverly Bayne, one of the most beautiful women in motion pictures will also be seen in this production.

BOUND BROOK PROPERTY OWNERS GRANTED A RULE

Jersey City, Nov. 15.—In connection with a proposal to repave 2,200 feet of Main street, Bound Brook with asphalt block, Supreme Court Justice Charles W. Parker Saturday granted a rule to property owners petitioning in the name of W. T. Morecraft, which calls on the Mayor and Common Council of Bound Brook to show cause why a writ of certiorari should not be issued to bring the paving ordinance in review. The rule was made returnable two weeks from Saturday at the court house here.

The contention of the property owners that, inasmuch as a resolution to repave the street was defeated less than a year ago, the authorities had no right to bring it up before the lapse of a full year, which, they say, the law requires. The property owners point out also that they were assessed when the street was first paved and that it is unjust to make them pay now for repaving.

COMPLAINT DISMISSED.

Because the complainant failed to appear in the city court, George R. Naylor, of West Front street, who was arraigned on a reckless driving charge, was dismissed by Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning. Naylor's car hit Mrs. Hyman Sadler last Monday morning on West Fourth street. The victim has fully recovered.

E. F. PARVIN ATTACKS LAFOLLETTE BILL

Plainfield Man Tells of Objections of Ship Owners to New Law.

Emerson E. Parvin, of Watchung avenue, this city, secretary of the International Mercantile Marine Co., made a bitter attack on the new La Follette seaman's bill at a meeting of the New York Academy of Political Science held Saturday.

As an instance of the working of the new bill, which went into effect a week ago, Mr. Parvin read a telegram from San Francisco describing the departure of the steamer Magnolia, of the Pacific Mail, which told of numerous delays caused by seamen exerting new rights given them under the LaFollette bill. He declared that the bill was "an act to discourage American merchant marine, to cause irritating controversies with foreign nations, and to ensnare the votes of organized labor."

"It seems as if the limit of folly had been reached in this law and in the excuses made for it," he continued. "The Secretary of Commerce reproached the Pacific Mail and other American lines for selling their ships on a good market, when every man of practical common sense has come to the conclusion on reading the law that ocean lines on the Pacific cannot operate under it except at a loss, because of its great increase in the cost of operation. Secretary Redfield appears to be angry that men with their fortunes at stake should be guided by their business judgment and the letter of the law. He insists that they should have waited to see how the law was going to be construed and how it was going to work out, which would have resulted in the shipping lines running for some months at a loss and in selling probably on a bad market.

"In other words he asks the steamship companies to ruin themselves, by trusting to the hope that the Secretary of Commerce would construe away the plain meaning of the law, and then come to Congress for redress. Congress would probably have little consideration for companies that could be guilty of such amazing folly."

E. church, will preach the sermon. Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, of the First Baptist church; Rev. J. Y. Broek, of Trinity Reformed church, and Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, as well as other ministers, will assist in the service.

COL. HAVERS TO LECTURE ON MODERN PHOTOGRAPHY

The third of the series of public lectures which are provided by the Board of Education will be held in the High School auditorium on Thursday evening, at 8 o'clock. Dr. Maxson succeeded, early in the year, in securing the services of Col. E. A. Havers, who has a national reputation as a photographic expert, and Col. Havers will deliver an illustrated lecture on "The Marvels of Modern Photography."

This lecture embraces art in photography, natural history, architectural detail, photography in peace and war, photographing under water, and a most interesting scientific description of the history of photography. Col. Havers is well known on the lecture platform and his strong personality, combined with a wealth of good stories, promise to make this event a most pleasing one in the series of public entertainments now in progress.

HELPING Y. M. C. A. SOLICITORS.

Every man in the city has a part in the campaign for new members that is being conducted by volunteer workers for the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. There are many who would give their time and energy to the cause but feel that they cannot afford such a sacrifice. They can be of service, however. A few minutes each day given to putting the public in the proper spirit for the reception of a solicitor may mean a membership. If every man in the city, whether a member or not, will but tell his neighbor of the wonderful work of the association, its elevating Christian influence, and its noble accomplishments in making many boys clean physically and mentally, he will add to the total of new members secured. Many times the solicitors must waste a half-hour or even more in their arguments to a prospect and then many are forced to leave him unconvinced simply because they caught him at a time when he was not open to their persuasion. A friend who lunched with him might have swayed him by a few words, but he did not think of it. You can help, and it is your duty to yourself, your city and your fellowman.

CHURCHILL ON HIS DEFENSE.

Winston S. Churchill is the most picturesque figure in English public life. He was one of the British war lords when the European war began and he was made the scapegoat for the blunders committed which necessitated his translation to civic functions, eventually in his resignation and his purpose to go to the front in Flanders as a soldier. Today Churchill will tell Parliament and the country why he left the cabinet.

The two principal reproaches for Churchill are the futile Antwerp expedition and the Dardanelles campaign. In his public utterances the former first lord of the admiralty was vain-glorious. He could see nothing but success for British arms. He strongly underrated the power England was dealing with, says the Newark Eagle. He had no vision of the events that followed the unsuccessful onrush of the German legions in France and the battle of the Marne. He humiliated England by the beggarly aid he sent to Antwerp, and the long-delayed naval campaign without land troops in the Dardanelles was a costly exhibition of shortsightedness.

It will be interesting to read Churchill's explanations to the Commons today, but his career in the cabinet has shown that he will be of much more use at the front doing a soldier's duty than in a council of war or in charge of England's navy.

GOLDEN LIBERTY.

They are going to give the Statue of Liberty a coating of gold paint. This is not entirely out of place when we think that out of this enlightened land of civilization there are going ship loads of shells, powder and cannon each day to create waste among our neighbors across the ocean—all because of an insatiate greed of gold. It will carry to those immigrants who come to America seeking freedom a new idea of liberty, and one far from wrong, a liberty which must wear a washing of gold if it is to be preserved.

During the eight first months of 1914 this country exported $156,000,000 merchandise to Germany. It sent $11,600,000 in the same months of 1915, a decrease of $144,400,000; but for the same period, our exports this year to Norway, Sweden and Holland (the only gateways to Germany) increased $114,800,000 It is on these figures that England bases the charge that we are violating neutrality, ignoring that we are sending the Allies a greater part of their war munitions, in addition to all the foodstuffs they will buy.

RECREATION NOTES

The Public Speaking Club will meet this evening at the Washington School. The members hold discussions and debates upon interesting subjects of the day. Every meeting is thoroughly enjoyable and worthwhile. New members will be most welcome.

The Athenians will meet tonight at the High School gymnasium for basketball practice.

The Recreation Club will meet tomorrow evening at the High School gymnasium.

The Zephyrs will meet tomorrow evening in the High School gymnasium for gymnastics and basketball practice. There will also be a short business meeting at which the constitution of the club will be passed upon.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

If the long line of patrons noticeable at the front of Proctor's Theatre just before the matinee today is any indication it appears that the popular local playhouse will play to all of its capacity during the presentation of the sensational film feature "Carmen" and the delightful vaudeville entertainment that has been arranged for the first half of the week. "Carmen" is a vampire type and to make this photoplay as effective as possible, William Fox, the producer, secured Theda Bara, who is considered the greatest emotional screen actress of the age.

In addition to the feature photoplay there will be a splendid vaudeville program of unusual excellence and variety, the headline act of which is Tuite's Collegians, a company of six versatile entertainers who are capable of presenting a whole show themselves. There will also be Mazette, the wizard of the violin, and incidentally a singing and dancing comedienne of note. A decided novelty will be presented by the Australian LeBrauns and their famous skating skit.

The last half of the week America's foremost screen comedian, Charley Chaplin, in "A Night at the Show," his latest success, will be the film feature. There will also be a Pathe special silent drama, "The Perils of Temptation." The vaudeville entertainment will include Hadji Nassar Arabs, a whirlwind troupe of Arabian wonders, who present a tumbling act of rapid-fire caliber.

MRS. WEIRS TO SPEAK.

In garb she was a model—she sure

One fault alone I noted—she wore

Her dainty Oxford bowknots and

I said: "She is too modest. This long skirt is a pose.
No prudish manner ever with such a profile goes!"

A breeze came by and showed me
the reason, pretty quick:
It wasn't she was modest—her ankles were too thick!

Popular Intelligence

Popular intelligence is what there isn't much of.

The best joke, aside from its being such a slander on the Deity, is the old saying, "Vox populi, vox Dei."

To blame the Almighty for some of the things the people do at election time is something fierce to have to answer for.

Just as an instance, in the justly celebrated state of Ohio, a few years ago the question of dropping the word "white" from the voters' qualification, as anciently stated in the Constitution, was submitted to the people.

Mind you, colored people had been voting in that state all the years since the Fourteenth Amendment had been enacted, and always will.

The change proposed was only to make the wording of the state Constitution true up with the existing condition.

It was no political issue—it was merely a typographical error to be corrected.

But did the people of Ohio vote to eliminate?

No, indeed!

They voted sternly against eliminating that word "white"!

No negro domination for them!

All over that state, hordes of voters viciously put a mark on the NO.

That was vox populi, clear enough, but it would be horrible to intimate that the Lord had no more sense than that.

So the word "white" remains meaninglessly in the Constitution of that state, and nothing has been changed, except that the majority of the lay voters of Buckeyedom have demonstrated their boneheadedness.

Popular intelligence is responsible for belief in bad luck signs, such as black cats, going under ladders, starting a job on Friday or the thirteenth, and all such Thomas J. Rott as that.

"Vox populi, vox"—no, we won't quote it further.

We would be afraid of being struck dead if we did.

Eh, What?

What's become of the humor there used to be in the "what's-become-of" joke?

The Thoughtful Burglar

The burglar crept about the house,
Nor flashed his 'lectric torch.
He was afraid that he might rouse
The soundly sleeping-porch.

The Real Need

"Would you be so kind as to explain——" began the new-fledged traveling salesman as he approached the veteran, railway guide in hand.

"Sure! thing you know," said the kindly oldster, turning to a page laden with stations and figures.

"No, no! Not that," said the younger man. "The thing I want explained is the 'Table of Explanations,' on page 2."

That's How

"Doctor, do you really believe golf is a cure for insanity?"

"Not exactly. It is merely that, when a number of men are playing golf it is harder to pick out the crazy ones."

The Real Human Creed

With deep respect I'll speak his name
So long as he will boost my game.
But when he quits—I—golly day—
They ain't no tellin' what I'll say!

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Taking A Tonic Seriously

WHEN you feel "run down" you generally think you need a tonic. Maybe your doctor thinks so too; and then again perhaps he will take the trouble to determine what runs you down.

Just what is a tonic?

We don't know, although we have prescribed barrels and boxes of tonics in our time. Patients will have their tonic whether they need it or not. A tonic is the only way to hold some patients until one has an opportunity to study them a little and determine what treatment, if any, they really require. If a doctor were to tell the truth all the time he would have to retire from practice; people simply wont have the plain truth. They feel so sure they need a tonic.

Presumably a tonic tones the system, whatever that may mean. We fancy the popular idea is that a tonic puts the "pep" into the tired business man, gives the worn-out woman renewed life and makes ailing folk in general sit up and scan the headlines. Some tonics undoubtedly do these things—temporarily. A few doses of strychnine will excite signs of vitality in almost any person not utterly moribund, but that is as far as the effect goes. Of all the sadly abused drugs employed in the preparation of all-around tonics strychnine is the cheapest, the most reprehensible and the least necessary. Indeed it is an undebatable fact that strychnine, except for rare emergencies in the doctor's hands, is the one ingredient of tonics that never by any possibility adds anything to the strength, vitality or well being of the body. It does what a whip does for a tired horse climbing a long, steep hill—if you can sympathize with a horse under such circumstances.

There are three occasions when a doctor prescribes a tonic:

1. When he desires to retain the patient pending a diagnosis.
2. When the patient wants a tonic and the doctor hasn't time to explain what the medicine is for.
3. When the persuasive drug agent assumes the position of preceptor to the family physician.

Any one complaining of "that tired feeling" or a "run down condition" should not take a tonic too seriously.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Eye Tooth

Please give your opinion in the paper as to whether the extraction of an eye tooth in a girl of seventeen would cause the eye on that side to sag in the socket?

Answer—If the dentist thinks extraction advisable, let him proceed. Your eye will not sag.

The Good Physician At Work

I have been to two doctors, writes Mrs. H. W. W., who suffers from nocturnal attacks of difficult breathing. The first thought it was my stomach. The second examined me with his instrument and told me it was my heart. It palpitates and flutters at times too. But my teeth are very, very bad, and the doctor wants me to have them treated by the dentist. Would it be safe to do so?

Answer—By all means. You have a good doctor on the job. Do what he tells you if you want to get better.

Vest Pocket Essays

THE FURNACE

AT this time of the year the furnace begins to come bitterly to our attention. It is a peevish ruin which makes its lair in the cellars of plain people and contributes to the horror of winter by declining to give forth heat in a blizzard because the chimney wasn't manicured inside during the autumn.

The furnace is composed of a large cracked firebox surrounded by a sheet iron hogshead. It is operated by a system of checks and drafts, although one may, of course, pay cash and get just as good results. It is connected with the various rooms in the house by large tin pipes, which serve to transmit cuss words from the cellar to the upstairs, and it is connected with the chimney by a pipe which serves to transmit heat into yon high heaven. When a furnace is working vigorously a stratum of warm air a mile high over the house is sometimes produced. Thus the furnace is the sparrow's friend, but until some means of locating the living room directly over the house is devised it will not be doing its full duty toward humanity.

The hot-air furnace is so named from the manner in which it is sold. We are led to believe, when buying a No. 13 furnace on an Elast, that it will readily heat a 9-room house so thoroughly that a coat and vest will be entirely superfluous, even on the front porch. This is only partially true. The furnace will not heat the house by means of the pipes and registers, but if sufficiently flattered and encouraged, it will eventually ignite the floors and make everything lovely and warm until the fire department arrives.

A furnace can be readily operated during the winter by one man if he makes arrangements to have his meals brought down cellar to him. By shoveling your spring overcoat, your club dues, your summer vacation, and your winter's theatre tickets into your furnace you can keep it burning all winter except on zero nights. A furnace is quite hardy and by wrapping an old carpet around it on very cold days you can keep it from becoming dangerously chilled!

Some people claim that they can run a furnace all winter on $24 worth of coal, and that by putting in two shovels full in the morning they can maintain a fierce heat until evening. Do not worry about these statements, however. Go ahead and discount them with claims of your own. This is a free country and everybody can lie in it.

Views Of The Press

A Poet's Dream Has Become A Reality

IN a recent issue of The Chronicle there appeared a detailed and most interesting account of a fleet of aeroplanes belonging to the French army ready for action.

Some of them carried three-inch guns and all of them were equipped with the latest appliances for dealing out death and destruction.

The picture drawn by the press correspondent was so amazing as to be well-nigh incredible, yet it was a fearful, ghastly fact and added—if that be possible—new horrors to war. Yet it was but the realization of a poet's dream.

Alfred Tennyson lived to be an old man. He was one of the world's great and real poets. He has written lines that will live as long as the thoughts of men are preserved in printed speech, and in that great poem, "Locksley Hall," are found gems of poetic beauty which shine with unquenchable lustre.

He said:

Love took up the glass of Time
And turn'd it in his glowing hands.
Every moment, lightly shaken,
Ran itself in golden sands.

He said, too:

Love took up the harp of Life
And smote on all the chords with might;
Smote the chords of self that trembling
Pass'd in music out of sight.

And when he wrote these matchless lines, he wrote for himself passport to enduring poetic fame. The verse in the same great poem, which forecast that which has come to pass, was the one in which he spoke of:

Heard the heavens fill with shouting,
And there rained a ghastly dew
From the nations' airy navies
Grappling in the central blue.

Men read the line and passed it over as but the outburst of poetic fervor, of "fancy in fine frenzy rolling," but the poet, endowed by the divine with the gift which is born in a few of the favored ones of earth, caught a vision of what was to be, and to-day that vision has become a reality. The dream of the great singer has materialized and that of which he sung men see, and, seeing, shudder and grow pale, for grim death rides on the "sightless coursers of the air" and destruction follows in the wake of the winged navies, which, with well-nigh lightning speed, mount far up toward the "central blue."—Houston Chronicle.

People's Legal Friend

BY E. R. BRANSON

Suspicious?

Q. A young man has been in the habit of acting as the confidential adviser of his father, who is in enfeebled health, and the father has grown to depend upon the son's suggestions and advice in business transactions. The father lately transferred some property to the son, of considerable amount, and the other relatives do not view the matter with favor. Do you believe the transaction would be upheld in the courts?

A. The facts as you have given them are not of such a character as, in themselves, to raise a presumption of undue influence. Such facts, however, could be taken into consideration in connection with other facts as bearing on the question. Whether undue influence existed would be a fact to be determined, like any other fact, from all the surrounding circumstances.

The Debtor's Dodge

Q. If a man should sell his property, when he is heavily indebted, would the sale stand good in law?

A. If the transfer is voluntary, there will be a presumption of fraud. If he should be insolvent, and his act tends to hinder or delay his creditors, the presumption will be very strong—in some cases conclusive.

Rules For A Subscribing Witness

Q. Where a subscribing witness is necessary, in the case of a legal document or paper, is it essential to have his evidence in order to show that the document or paper was really signed as it purports to be?

A. It is the usual rule that, where the statute requires the attestation of a subscribing witness or witnesses, the testimony of such witness or witnesses must be produced in order to show that the instrument was duly executed. If it is impossible to secure such testimony, as where the witnesses are dead, the next best proof, such as proof of the handwriting of the witnesses, will be essential.

The Telegram That Didn't

Q. I sent an important message to a telegraph office. The company failed to transmit and deliver it, saying that certain conditions arising from causes beyond its control prevented the sending of the telegram. The company did not notify me of such fact at that time. Wasn't it the company's duty to do so?

A. Yes. The company should have notified you as promptly as possible in view of existing conditions.

An Offer Rejected

Q. If one makes an offer to buy something, and the offer is not accepted, isn't he at liberty to withdraw the offer?

A. Yes. The offer may be withdrawn at any time before it is acted upon. The fact of such withdrawal should be made known to the other party.

Dodging A Debt

Q. If one should owe a debt, and should pay the creditor an amount less than that actually due, the creditor receiving and accepting it, wouldn't this extinguish the debt?

A. Not necessarily. It would not be conclusive upon the creditor.

Mr. Branson will be glad to answer all questions. If your question is of general interest it will be answered through these columns; if not, it will be answered personally if stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed. Address all letters to E. R. Branson, care of this newspaper.

The Life Line

BY LAURA KIRKMAN

The "Just This Once" Person

We go home with him to dinner. As we reach the vestibule, we stop to wipe our muddy feet on the outside mat. But our host forges ahead into the hall with a gesture of impatience. "Oh, come on in!" he throws back, "I guess we won't hurt the floors this once!" No. He won't hurt the floors; he'll hurt only himself. It's on just such little yieldings that the "just this once" habit thrives. Many a thief would not now be behind the bars if he had been in the habit of resisting the little temptations. The "just this once" victim is on a dangerous road. He's got moths in his clothes.

The "Easy" Parent

His children certainly love him. He is as popular with them as young people of their own age. He is good fun Never has he been known to spoil sport. He is more like one of themselves than like a parent. But wait. Wait until that child wants counsel; he will turn then to the man who has been exacting with him—his teacher—his minister—his neighbor. He will put serious matters into serious hands. Hard truth is what he wants then, not leniency. Let the lid-is-off parent take care! He's on the shelf with the graphophone.

Every man believes if he could get his just dues a banquet would be held in his honor.

Occasionally, the women get in free. But the men always have to pay.

Don't place too much faith in the left hind foot of a rabbit. Every rabbit has one, and you know what happens to the rabbits.

To a man, every woman is more or less attractive. But a woman never can "see" more than one man at a time.

Plenty of men marry homely women, but every man demands good-looking actresses.

Jasper Ellington, who, two months ago, took up the job of defending the motorcycle, already has more work than five men could do.

No other annoyance of travel equals that of being "entertained" at a private house.

The women often display a fine degree of courage, but few of them are brave enough to slide down stairs.

Current Poetry

The 'Phone Bell

She ran to cook his pancakes,
And the 'phone bell rang.
She rushed to start the coffee,
And the 'phone bell rang.
Breakfast he went without it;
"Good-bye," they had to shout it;
She would have wept about it,
But the 'phone bell rang.

She tried to dress the children
And the 'phone bell rang.
She went to wash the dishes,
And the 'phone bell rang.
The parlor needed dusting,
The chafing dish was rusting,
And the silverware disgusting,
But the 'phone bell rang.

The grocer stopped for orders,
And the 'phone bell rang.
A neighbor came for gossip,
And the 'phone bell rang.
She thought by being hasty
She could make some biscuits tasty
Her hands with dough were pasty,
And the 'phone bell rang.

All day the housework waited,
While the 'phone bell rang.
No time for rest or labor,
When the 'phone bell rang.
At last he came to fold her
In his arms. "Poor girl!" he told her,
For a second he consoled her,
And the 'phone bell rang.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

To sharpen the knives of food chopper, run pieces of sand soap through.

To clean wire clothesline when rusty take a greased cloth and rub it thoroughly. It will take rust off and won't bother you so much about rusting again.

Tablecloth Helps — Take three strips of linen crash toweling—plain or bordered, bleached or unbleached—as long as desired. Over and over stitch the edges together with a stout thread, rather loose, but shallow stitch. Hem the ends. This tablecloth will long outwear table linen of the same cost and is much easier to launder. Compared with oilcloth it is more elegant and more agreeable to the touch in cold weather, and is more likely to encourage careful habits at the table both in children and grownups.

Essence of Celery—Soak for two weeks half an ounce of the seeds of celery in one-fourth pint brandy. A few drops will flavor a pint of soup, equal to a stick of celery.

Aromatic Vinegars—Many a cook will serve mint sauce in the season when she can command the growing mint, yet never think of preparing a mint vinegar to make it possible to serve her favorite sauce at any season. To prepare the vinegar, wash the mint leaves, shake them dry and put into large-mouthed bottle. Fill the bottle with good cider vinegar, and at the end of a month strain off all the vinegar and seal it up in small bottles. For nasturtium vinegar proceed in the same way, substituting the green leaves of the nasturtium for the mint leaves.

THE TABLE

Meat Pie — One and one-half pounds veal breast cut in small pieces; cover well with water, let stew one hour; season well. Then add six potatoes and two onions cut small. Cook until all is tender. Make a crust of two [illegible] flour, pinch of salt, teaspoon[illegible] half of baking powder, one [illegible] on lard, enough milk to make soft dough. Roll out to fit baking dish, perforate as for pie, put in meat and potatoes, cover with crust, bake about twenty minutes.

Salmon, Shrimp or Lobster Salad—Take large can fish, remove bone, skin and liquid. Add two stalks celery cut up in one-inch pieces, [illegible] cup English walnuts, four hard-boiled eggs sliced. Then add generously enough of good rich boiled dressing to moisten. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves.

Boiled Salad Dressing—Two level tablespoons sugar, one level tablespoon flour, 1½ teaspoons mustard, one-third teaspoon salt, dash of cayenne pepper, three tablespoons melted butter, yolks of two eggs, one cup milk, half cup vinegar. Cook in double boiler. Just before using add one cup cream.

Ainse Seed Drop Cookies—Six eggs, one pound sugar, one teaspoon ainse seed, flour. Break eggs into large bowl, add sugar and beat mixture for an hour. Then add with the ainse seed enough flour to make a thick batter. Allow this to stand over night, during which time it will rise. In the morning drop by teaspoonful on greased cooky tins. Bake in moderate oven. These are delightful for lunches or parties, and keep fresh indefinitely.

Buns—One and one-half pints yeast sponge, one pint lukewarm water, two-thirds cup soft lard, one cup granulated sugar. Sift in enough flour to stiffen. Let rise three hours. Mold about the size of a walnut and place on greased tins so they will not touch, and let rise four hours. Bake in quick oven about twenty minutes. When molding have some melted butter on a saucer and dip the top of the bun into it. This makes them a beautiful brown.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES

For Cold in Head—Place a little ground mustard in the bottom of shoes; will draw cold out of head in less than three days.

Home-Made Salve—Take one cup of elderberry bark, shave fine, fry in 1½ cups fresh lard till the bark becomes black. Strain while hot. Fine for burns and skin disease.

Remedy for Indigestion—Put one half teaspoon baking soda and ten drops of essence of peppermint in one-half glass hot water, and take full dose. Repeat in one-half hour if necessary.

For Young Mothers—If a mother nursing a baby gets a mixture to give the baby colic, let her take after the meal one-half teaspoonful in a half glass of sweet water.

JURY VIEWS LAND IN CONDEMNATION PROCEEDINGS

New Brunswick, Nov. 15.—A jury in the Circuit Court here this morning viewed land recently condemned by the joint sewer board for the trunk sewer from Plainfield to Piscataway township, and reported back to Judge Lloyd at noon to hear evidence in the condemnation appeal. The land was valued at $590 by commissioners and owners have appealed because they believe this valuation is too low. The jury will not report until late this afternoon or tomorrow.

MR. AND MRS. KLINE GIVE RECEPTION FOR THEIR SON

A delightful reception was given in Regina Mansion, Brooklyn, last night, by Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Klein, of West Front street, this city, in honor of the confirmation of their son, Morton Klein. Mrs. Klein was the hostess and she was capably assisted by Miss Stella Freeman and Mis Ada Black. The tables were tastefully decorated for the affair red and white carnations being used in large numbers. One hundred couples attended the function.

Among the Plainfielders who attended the affair were: Miss Jeanette Preger, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Fass, Mr and Mrs. Harry Dreier, Mr. and Mrs Jacob Abrams, Mr. and Mrs. S. H Schwartz, Mr. and Mrs. S. Schwartz Mr. and Mrs. Martin, Abram Schwartz and Henry Rosenbaum.

During the evening addresses were delivered by Dr. Martin, A. Fried Morton Klein, Rabbi Mason and Henry Rosenbaum. Harry Walter, of the Plainfield Hebrew School, under whom Supervisor Morton Klein was trained, acted as toastmaster and introduced the speakers.

RALPH BACHE RENEWING FORMER ACQUAINTANCES

Ralph P. Bache, a former local superintendent of the Public Service electric department, who left Plainfield eight years ago for Colorado Springs Colorado, is in town today renewing old acquaintances. Mr Bache was called east by the death of his father, Captain W. H. Bache who passed away last week in a hospital at Tampa, Florida, and whose funeral is to take place at the home of another son, in Bound Brook. Besides Ralph Bache, there are two sons, L. S. Bache and Dr. J. H. Bache, both of whom live at Bound Brook.

Although he went to Colorado Springs to take charge of a large electric plant, Ralph Bache held the position only a short time, resigning to take up wholesale farming by irrigation. For the past few years he has been confining his attention to the development of copper mines with the assistance of two partners His home at present is at McGill Nevada, and from which place he came to Plainfield. He will remain east for a week or more before starting back to resume work.

C. K. ARMSTRONG GIVES BLOOD TO CAMPBELL CHILD

After a cessation of several days because of unfavorable conditions with the patient, blood transfusion was resumed at Muhlenberg Hospital Saturday night, on Louise Campbell the eight-year-old daughter of Mr and Mrs. N. G. Campbell, of Newark. Four hundred cubic centimeters of blood, equivalent to one and a fourth pints of the fluid, was taken from C. K. Armstrong, of Newark, district passenger agent of the New Jersey Central and a close friend of the child's father. Mr Armstrong stood the ordeal very well and was able to leave the hospital yesterday none the worse for his experience. He was the only one of six volunteers examined whose fluid was of the proper specific gravity.

Dr. Edward Lindeman, of New York, who discovered the Lindeman process of blood transfusion and who is in charge of the operations on Miss Campbell, said after the undertaking Saturday that Miss Campbell had benefitted by the new blood but that her condition is still very serious. Her condition today was said to be favorable for more transfusion and it would probably be undertaken within the next twenty-four hours.

JACK MARTIN'S TIMELY ACT PROBABLY SAVED MANY LIVES

Action on the part of Jack Martin Plainfield's baseball representative in the minor leagues, probably prevented a disastrous fire on Cricket Field Saturday afternoon, and possible loss of life. A stray match had been tossed in a pile of dry leaves near by Mayor-elect William L. Smalley's automobile and had started quite a blaze when noticed by Martin.

The bonfire was directly in the path of a line of nearly one hundred machines and if allowed to burn a few minutes longer would probably have spread to the gasoline of Mr. Smalley's car and an explosion would in all likelihood have followed.

SHE WAS A PRIZE.

"Are you familiar with Dante, Miss Kittish?" asked Mr. Treeway.

"No; but I can make pumpkin pie that fairly melts in your mouth."

"Will you marry me?" asked the young man, eagerly.

SCIENCE VS. LOVE.

Not long ago, when swain was mad
His passion to make known,
He hired a buggy—or he had
Conveyance of his own;
With Lover's zest and manly pride
He took the dear one out, to ride.

How charming was the moment when in some green lonely lane
He dropped the reins, and boldly then
Spoke out his love and pain;
Her waist his arm could circle, and
Her hand was in his other hand.

Well, lovers still may love the same,
But in an auto? Nay!
What man dares play the same old game
In the same brave old way?
Instead, he's shrinking from her touch
And wishing she'd not talk so much.

He's speeding up.....he's slowing down.....
He's watching out.....the wife
He pounds the gong with grit and frown,
He has not time to smile,
Much less to sigh, to plead, or kiss—
What sort of courtship, pray, is this?

Worse still, when aeroplane, so brisk,
He steers on fitful breath
Of shifting wind, in constant risk
Of broken bones or death—
What man could love's wild depths explain,
Careering in an aeroplane?

Shall science alter passion's laws?
And, later, shall there prove
No need of love-making, because
There won't be any love?
By logic's light, it seems to me,
This must, alas—the upshot be!

COMPLETE EXTINGUISHMENT.

Rupert—It was a strange case! He left the club one night to go to the opera and was never seen or heard of afterward!

Harold—Disappeared as completely as if the earth had opened and swallowed him up, eh?

Rupert—More so, if possible. In that case he might have left his hat above ground, or there might have been a crack left to show where he disappeared; but this fellow, mind you, disappeared as completely as if he had married an authoress.

HIS COMMENT.

Farmer Honk—'Squire Pushalong started as a poor bound-boy, and now at the age of forty-eight, he's got the biggest farm in the neighborhood, with a fine house on it; he's got good teams, money in the bank, daughter in boardin'-school, son in college, and so forth; and is figgerin' to goin' to the legislature.

Farmer Bentover—Gosh! It pays to be prosperous don't it?

WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN.

Mrs. Van Flashington (at the Charity Ball, condescendingly)—Do you think you can do proper justice to my gown and my jewels, Miss Wright?

Woman Reporter (meanly)—I fancy I wasn't a circus press-agent two years for nothing!

NOWADAYS.

Willis—Bump has an elegant home, hasn't he?

Gillis—Yes; it has all the comforts of traveling.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Party
The Animal
Crackers Had.

"A STORY, daddy, a story!" cried Jack and Evelyn when daddy sat down in his armchair.

"One night at the very stroke of midnight the animal crackers decided to have a party. So they kicked and they kicked till they burst a hole through their paper bag and tumbled right out on to the kitchen floor," daddy started off.

"'Heigh, ho!' bellowed the elephant, stretching his trunk, which had been very cramped in the bag. 'This is more like the jungle!' He ran around between the chair legs, imagining they were tree trunks. 'First good drink I've had in a century!' roared the lion, lapping up a few drops of water under the sink. 'Hoorah,' neighed the horse, 'but this is a fine race track!' and he trotted up and down a stripe of the linoleum on the kitchen floor.

"'If we only had some music we could dance,' suggested the giraffe, and, with his long neck, he set the coffee mill grinding, which really ground out a very pleasing waltz. So the elephant grabbed the lady dromedary and wrapped his trunk around her bumpy waist. The lion chose the dog for a partner and stood him up on his hind legs so he would be tall enough to grasp. The horse stopped trotting and bowed to the cow, who clumsily courtesied and took his foreleg. And the clever giraffe wound his neck lovingly around the lady zebra's, swinging her off to the delightful music of the coffee mill."

"Who waltzed with the squirrel?" asked Evelyn, who always chose the cracker squirrel first for supper.

"The cracker rabbit, of course," said daddy. "Then the animals all changed partners, and the elephant took all the small ones on his back and danced a polo to opera music that the coffee mill happened to remember. Then, just to show off, the lion tangoed with the cow, and every cracker of the bag was having just the jolliest fun, when the sun peeked in at the chink of the window.

"'Sunup!' trumpeted the elephant, looking wildly around for the door. But he was too late. The sunshine took all joy and motion out of them, and all the animals keeled over and lay limp and lifeless on the kitchen floor.

"'My soul!' cried the cook, coming down a few minutes later, 'but these rats do make a muss of my kitchen! I shall have to get a nice tabby cat or a good rat trap.'

"She grabbed her broom and swept the poor animal crackers up into a cruel heap, which she then dustpanned into the garbage pail."

"That was a lovely, funny story, daddy!" cried the children.

Married Life on $80 a Month

Through Olive Ellson Mollie Sutner Gets a New Silk Dress.

"This little dress is one that my sister sent to me. We have always exchanged our discards. It gives us both a greater variety." Olive spread out a dark blue foulard before Molly Sutner. "There is not much wear in it, as you can see that it has begun to break." Olive held the goods up to the light.

"That will never show, and you can wear that a great deal this winter. It is a lovely piece of goods," commented Molly, taking a fold of the silk between her fingers.

"The pity of it is that I can not make use of it this winter. Jessie would not have sent it to me if she had known." Olive paused and looked down. Molly made no reply, so Olive leaned over and whispered something in her ear.

"Indeed! How lovely." Molly smiled into her friend's happy eyes.

"And so," continued Olive after an expressive silence, "I have no use for the dress. It is rather narrow in the skirt and will be out of the question next year. I was thinking——" Olive paused embarrassed. "Will you promise not to be offended at what I say?" she continued after an awkward pause.

"Offended! How could I be offended at anything you would say," replied Molly in surprise.

"That is true." Olive looked brightly into her friend's face. "We are such friends. You have let me share your intimate life. I have not been able to help much, but it was not because I did not want to. Now I think I can see a way to give you a little pleasure and am half afraid to speak because you might not understand. I would not hurt you for anything." Olive paused and took Molly's hand in hers.

"You could not hurt me; I know your good heart too well."

"Thank you. That is a real compliment. I will tell you what I had in my mind. I was thinking that you are about my size and with a little altering this dress would fit you very well. No one here has ever seen it, and you could wear it to our little neighborhood club meetings and look very stunning. Would you take it?" Olive looked anxiously into Molly's face.

Molly flushed scarlet, and looked down.

"I have hurt you after all," exclaimed Olive, laying her hand on her shoulder.

"No, dear friend, I understand the kind heart that prompted the offer. Let me do something to help you in payment. Then I can take the dress and enjoy it." Molly held the soft blue folds of the silk against her face. "I used to be able to wear dark blue very well."

"You can yet. It is very becoming. As to helping, there are lots of things you can help me make before next fall. Now try it on. I want to see how it fits you."

The change was soon made, and Olive expressed herself as greatly pleased with the effect.

"It will have to be shortened a little and that will give a new look to the hem, and as you are such a little thing we can have a few more gathers in the back by making it smaller around the waist. It is very becoming." Olive could not have been more pleased with the most elaborate costume for herself.

"I am especially pleased, because John always used to notice my clothes and I have had none for him to notice for a long while." Molly was in a flutter of excitement.

"I'll pin it up ready for you to hem before you take it off. Then you can have it ready to wear right away." Olive dropped down on the floor to hang the skirt.

"Thank you, dear friend. Your loving thought of me is the greatest part of my pleasure," said Molly as she ran down the stairs.

P. H. S. LOSES SECOND GAME OF SEASON

Phillipsburg Backfield Plunges Through Red and Blue Line to Victory.

Bringing the best team to Plainfield that has appeared on Parker Field this year, Phillipsburg handed Plainfield High School its second defeat of the season Saturday. The score [illegible] to 0.

The Red and Blue line would not hold when assailed by the heavy plunging backfield of the visitors. The home players put up a game fight and made repeated marches toward their visitors' goal, but when they lost the ball on mispLays, which were frequent, they were helpless.

The locals' only real chance for a touchdown came in the fourth period when Davidson fell on a fumble on the 25-yard line, after Noonan had kicked. Line plays were tried and the visitors' line held, but the Red and Blue players managed to get the ball in the middle of the field and Noonan tried a drop kick from the 20-yard line. It went under the cross bars only a half-foot too low.

Team work featured a greater part of the fracas and there was little chance for anyone to pull a sensational play. Man for man the Red and Blue line was as good as that of the visitors, but the backfield was no match for the heavy hitting Phillipsburg backs. Noonan was switched over from fullback to quarter and plainly showed that he was not accustomed to leading an eleven, although his running with the ball was excellent. It was the first game this few minutes. Whelan put up an as a result he was tired after the first few minutes. Whelan put up and excellent game at center and also showed up pretty good when he filled Noonan's shoes at quarter during the last few minutes.

The score:

P. H. S.	0	0	0	0	0
Phil. H. S.	7	0	13	7	27

CITY FIREMEN HAVE HANDBALL COURT

The athletically inclined members of the Plainfield fire department attached to headquarters on East Second street have completed a fine new handball court in the rear of the department building and will commence this week a series of games. The boys are highly enthusiastic over the outlook for some good contests as several of them are experts and are rapidly getting the others into shape.

The new court has an alley twenty by thirty feet. It was designed by Harry Wierenga and John Guinee, and they supervised its construction, the firemen doing the entire job. It was painted a nifty green last Saturday and harmonizes with the attractive surroundings of the firehouse yard. The boys have been busy all through the past summer bringing the lot up to grade, a noticable drawback in days agone. They have also just added a very pretty rustic fence at the top of the terrace descending to the rear of the headquarters building, separating the structure from the handball court. The fence was made of white birch saplings and is decidedly artistic. The city officials and others are highly pleased with the effect and have complimented the boys on their handiwork.

The firemen feel very grateful to Tax Collector [illegible], who has given them a complete set of handball paraphernalia, including balls, gloves and other necessities.

WATCHUNG HUNT'S TWENTY MILE CHASE

Many Spills but Majority Remount and Finish the Run.

Several spills marked the week-end run of the Watchung Hunt Club Saturday, which was the longest one of the season, but no one was seriously injured and a majority were able to finish. The hounds were met at the Old Meeker Inn near Springfield, and the line led back of Roselle, through Westfield, Mountainside and Scotch Plains, and finished at the Netherwood Water Tower, a distance of about twenty miles.

The hounds led a fast chase from the start and the run included jumps over numerous streams and the Cranford river. Many automobiles followed the huntsmen and enjoyed the sport immensely. These riders finished. R. C. Finch, M. F. H., A. C. Fox, H. W. Evans, Matthew Colford, S. D. French, Col. C. E. S. Bellows, Lawrence Smith, Huntsman Harrison and the whip.

BAKER WILL NOT PLAY IN NEW YORK

Home Run King Denies Stories of His Signing With Yankees.

Media, Pa., Nov. 15.—"Home-Run" Baker has put a crimp in the talk of a trade which will send him to New York next year by declaring that he will not play in New York. This he told Manager Frank Miller, of the Upland Club, of the Delaware County League, with which he played this last season, and John P. Crozer, millionaire backer of the club, while on a visit to Manager Miller this week.

Baker asserted that there is just one big league team with which he will play, if he goes back into organized ball, and he said which team this was. He asked that the name of this club be not mentioned, however, and neither Manager Miller nor Mr. Crozer will tell which it was. There is a possibility that Baker again will be with Upland next year, Manager Miller asserts, as the heavy hitter was well satisfied with the money paid him by Mr. Crozer. Just how much he has been paid has never been made public, but Baker has made enough so that since the season ended he has purchased another farm at Trappe, Md., and a seven-passenger automobile.

A warm personal friendship has grown up between Baker and Mr. Crozer and if it is possible to keep him with the Upland team Mr. Crozer will willingly pay a much higher figure than he paid last year.

FITZ SAYS IT'S A GOOD THING HE DIDN'T LAND

Robert Fitzsimmons, once champion pugilist, was in the First Criminal Court in Newark, Saturday, before Judge Ungar, charged with assault upon James Hendricks, of Dunellen. The quarrel took place in the saloon at 64 Market street, at which the former champion makes his headquarters in that city. On the night of Ooctober 28, Hendricks went into the place and served Fitzsimmons with a dispossess notice on Fitzsimmons' farm in Dunellen. The plaintiff in the action was Dr. Cornelius Hendricks, a brother of the man assaulted. Hendricks asserted that he was punched in the jaw and in the solar plexus.

Fitzsimmons, on the stand, said that after he read the paper in question and a letter which came with it, he had stood up, and Hendricks came over and said:

"You know what that means, don't you?"

Fitzsimmons' reply was, he said, "Yes, it means that Dr. Hendricks will never get that farm." Fitzsimmons admitted that he applied an objectionable epithet to the doctor, and that Hendricks resented it and struck him in the face with his clenched fist.

"My lip bled for twenty-five minutes," the former pugilist said. "I started a swing for his jaw, and if I had landed he would be asleep yet. I realized that and let the blow go to the solar plexus, and I must admit that he was pretty dazed when he went out."

Fitzsimmons was found guilty, placed on probation for one year, and ordered to pay 50 cents a week until he had paid $10 to recompense Hendricks for the $10 he expended in doctor's fees.

—It there's a new owner in charge of the little store down the street, the chances are that a "Business Opportunity" advertisement has been "at work."

BACK FIELD STARS ARE VERY SCARCE

1915 Football Season Produces but Few Great Men.

CAPTAIN MAHAN STANDS OUT

Harvard's Leader In Class by Himself. Barrett of Cornell Another Great Player—Real Strength of the Big Elevens Seems to Be In the Line.

Where are the backs of yesteryear? Where are the DeWitts, Coys, Phillbins, Brickleys, Hardwicks, Bradlees, Whitneys, Curtises, Snows, Sprackling and Butlers? Gone, all gone, are the familiar faces, and none appear, alas, to take their places!

In the eastern theater of war this year of 1915 just two men stand out above their fellows in the back field. Harvard has one in Eddie Mahan. Cornell has another in Charley Barrett. Look over the elevens of the eastern colleges and see how many names besides these two are worth remembering.

There was a third star in the eastern firmament, of course. Yale had Legore. But that is another story.

Different Last Year.

Only last year there were so many back field stars that the question of selecting the quartet to form an all eastern eleven was a bewildering task indeed. Yale had Legore; Harvard, Hardwick, Bradlee, Mahan and Logan; Dartmouth, Ghee, Whitney and Curtis; Washington and Jefferson, Spiegel and Fleming; West Point, Pritchard—stars enough to dot the Milky way.

This year the strength of all the big elevens is found in the line, and in the center of the line at that. There is a dearth of great ends as well as stellar backs. There are no Merrillats and Hardwicks, Brauns and O'Hearns, Higginses or Coolidges—that is, none has flashed across the margin of the game thus far.

Tackles, Guards and Centers.

Dartmouth, Cornell, Harvard and Yale all have their main strength in their tackles, guards and centers. Mahan, in the Harvard back field, stands out. So does Barrett at Cornell. But if asked where the real power of his eleven lies Sharpe or Haughton would doubtless tell you, as Hinkey and Cavanaugh will, "In the line."

Princeton is an exception. The Tiger veterans are back fairly men save for Gennert at center. But none of the backs are great backs as [illegible] Stevenson is a crewbut of a doubtful exception.

Just as sports move in cycles, so do the fortunes of sporting teams. There is a period in football when ends are as common as golf balls and Yale's Legore friends. Then they are as scarce as teeth of the hen variety. So it is with great backs and great line men.

Apparently this is the year of the linemen. Many big games have yet to be played. During them great backs and ends may flash from obscurity to gridiron immortality. Football fame is now and then a matter of seizing a single opportunity rather than maintaining a high standard through seasons of play. Sammy White of Princeton swept to the crest by seizing a fumbled ball and beating Yale a few years ago. But that is not the way Hestons, Coys, Brickleys, Legores, Mahans, Whitneys, Kilpatricks, Shevlins, Merrillats and such were made.

The scarcity of great backs this year is attributed to various causes. Some maintain that it is due to the modern style of play. This is mostly drivel, though, as under the present code Brickley, Mahan, Bradlee, Hardwick, Legore, Whitney, Snow, Curtis, Spiegel, Fleming, Barrett and a host of others were developed.

There is no way of ascertaining the reason for the shift. It must remain as great a mystery as "Who pushed Billy Patterson?" or "What is an amateur?"

JEANNETTE TO QUIT RING.

Colored Heavyweight Is Now Running a Jitney Line In Hoboken.

Joe Jeannette, the colored heavyweight, has decided to retire.

"Willard has drawn the color line, and that about lets me out," said Jeannette. "There is no one for me to fight any more, and so I have quit the ring game for good."

Jeannette is running a line of jitney autos in Hoboken, N. J., and is said to be doing well.

Handicap Billiard Tourney.

The handicap billiard tournament at fifteen inch balk line, two shots in balk and two shots in anchor, will be held in New York, starting Nov. 15 and concluding Nov. 23. The number of participants will be limited to six. Each game will be 500 points. Willie Hoppe, the champion, will be the scratch entry.

WATCH THESE KICKERS.

Each of the leading college football teams has at least one bright star. Captain Mahan of Harvard is the mainstay of the crimson eleven. Yale is depending largely on the skill of Captain Wilson. Princeton's star is Captain Glick. Quarterback Barrett of Cornell is the real thing at Ithaca. The Navy has picked up a great halfback in Martin, a first year man. Neyland and Olphant are among the best players at West Point. Gillo is Colgate's crack halfback. Michigan still relies on Maulbetsch behind the line. Brown has a sterling player in Pollard, and so on down the line, the small elevens promising to develop material of excellent quality this season.

HALFBACK PAYNE BEAT O'DEA'S MARK.

Mark Payne, halfback on the Dakota Wesleyan eleven, in the game with the Northern Normal school at Mitchell, S. D., recently broke all previous records for drop kicks when he booted the ball over the bars from a distance of sixty-three yards.

This is the longest drop kick in football annals. Pat O'Dea, the famous Wisconsin end, dropkicked a distance of sixty-two yards in a game against Northwestern on Nov. 25, 1898.

On Nov. 30, 1882, J. T. Hazall of Princeton kicked goal from placement for a distance of sixty-five yards in a game against Yale.

WILL SAM CRAWFORD GO?

Some Question as to Whether Detroit Team Would Part With Outfielder.

Though there has been some criticism of Sam Crawford's playing during the past season, the report that he will be let out probably is not based on fact. Crawford still is one of the best hitters and the most popular of the Tigers in Detroit. He has an ideal disposition and has been in the game for Detroit for so many years that he is idolized there, and the club would not think of letting him go to some other team.

Crawford, in fact, would not tolerate being peddled about, for he has been of a saving disposition and is well supplied with this world's goods. He is one of the few players who can retire and live easy for the rest of their days.

"Getting along" with half-competent help, in home, office, store or factory, is a poor plan—a poor business policy.

WYOMING SAILORS YIELD A 6 TO 3 VICTORY TO PLAINFIELD FOOTBALLISTS

An eleventh hour flash of speed in which the toe of Jack Ricketts and the nimbleness of Lou Brown were predominant factors, gave Holy Cross a notable 6 to 3 verdict over the U. S. S. Wyoming eleven on Cricket Field, Saturday afternoon, three field goals comprising the contribution to the score items of the respective sides. The right punch at the proper moment won the game, Ricketts' field goal in the last few minutes of play sewing up the issue for the Plainfielders after little Lou Brown had carried the ball down the gridiron for forty yards, placing it in the best available spot for a three-point boot.

The victory of Holy Cross detracts in no way from the portion of praise due to the sailors. The visitors were glorious in defeat and must be credited with the best football, when all around performance is to be taken into consideration. It was plainly a Holy Cross day and for this reason much of the battling was done in the Wyoming team's territory. When in possession of the pigskin the tars ploughed big holes in the red and white defense and exhibited a style of football that has seldom been seen in this vicinity. As exponents of the close game, the shipmen played it to perfection. Their machine worked with clock-like precision and each ball carrier was given splendid interference. A slight weight advantage also aided the well groomed sailors to hold their own and time and again Holy Cross backs were thrown behind the line of scrimmage for losses. The representatives of Uncle Sam's navy knew how to handle the ball and exemplified the good coaching that they have been given on the ship's deck. Every man had his little part to play and there was little individualism on the surface of the Wyoming game.

Holy Cross once more demonstrated that it was not a team as football teams go. Efforts of certain individuals to crowd the limelight and failure to press toward the goal as a unit retarded the progress of the eleven on the field. Too often was it true that a man with the ball was not given proper interference and time and again the linemen on the side of the wing where the play was directed were caught napping. Slowness in getting started also detracted from the showing of the red and blue warriors' backs, on several occasions standing stock still in their tracks until they were downed by the opposition.

It was a case of employing strategy to overcome the speed of the sailors and to this fact only must be attributed the victory. With its many faults, however, the Holy Cross showed to good advantage, as would any team have to show in order to hold a squad like the representatives of Saturday. Coach Eddie Scallon's lads, [illegible] and [illegible] on the crest [illegible] of his charges but this knowledge will never be put to its best use until the players are made to understand that it's the team that is playing and not one great big "I."

Wyoming's tackles were given excellent opportunities to make spectacular stops simply because the Holy Cross runners were not supported by their teammates. In the open style of play the Plainfielders were far more proficient than their rivals and at times the localites put up an adamant defense when it seemed almost certain that the visitors were marching goalward. The trouble with this plan of battling, however, rested in the fact that it was short-lived and flashy, one or possibly two men coming out in the spotlight.

Besides shining in the final scoring, Ricketts and Brown did some good defensive work, completing a number of clean-cut tackles. High tackling proved to be one of the greatest faults of the Plainfield eleven, rival players being practically handed yards at a time because the red and white performers attempted to stop them by holds above the waist and around the neck.

Jack Caulfield's entrance into the game was featured by a burst of speed and some good offensive work. He carried the ball for several good gains and completed a number of good tackles. "Turk" Webster, "Shake" Clarke and Clif Smith also made some excellent stops, while Clarke carried the ball for twenty-five yards on a nifty forward pass. Jerry Manning and Jack Wilson did their usual good work in running the ball, but the latter was obliged to retire for two-quarters with an injured ankle. The appearance of Danny McAfee in a guard position for Holy Cross lent a tower of strength to the local line, his playing being about the best of any man on either side of the wing.

For the sailors, Brown and Kramer did the best work, the latter being disqualified in the fourth quarter because of rough tactics. Kramer is the 165-pound pugilistic champion of the navy and sought to demonstrate his knowledge of the self-defense art by tapping a couple of the Holy Cross players.

MAN ARRESTED HERE WITH A THREE YEAR OLD CHILD

Frank Nelson, who claims various places as his home, was arrested in this city yesterday in company with a three-year-old child whom he said was his daughter. The infant was turned over to Miss Mabelle Phillips, local agent of the charity organization, and she was placed in the Children's Home pending the disposition of the father's case in the city court.

Nelson could not give a satisfactory account of himself to Chief Kiely. He at first said he hailed from Camden, but when arraigned in the city court claimed to have come from New York and later from New Milford, Mass. He said that his wife was dead. When examined by Miss Phillips the little girl said that her mother was still living but that her father and she quarreled all the time. From this it was taken that the man might possibly be a wife-deserter and he was remanded back until tomorrow morning and in the meantime the police will investigate the case further.

GOOD THING HE DOESN'T GET MANY SQUARE MEALS

"I'se always does has hard luck after eating a square meal," explained William Washington, colored, when arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning to answer to a charge of setting the woods on the upper end of Park avenue afire. A few minutes before Maximus, Plainfield's strong man, had filled him up with eatables when he applied for alms.

"Dat dar man give mah so much to eat dat I jest had to lie down," said Washington. "I'se on mah way from Chicago to Philadelphia."

After starting a fire to get warm Washington fell asleep and was awakened when his coat started to burn. The fire department was called out and the arrest of the colored gentleman who claims prominence in the Quaker city, followed.

TRIAL POSTPONED.

John Murphy, of Oak Tree, was arrested here yesterday on a charge of disorderly conduct. Certain important witnesses were missing when he was arraigned in court this morning and as a consequence the case was put over until tomorrow. In the meantime he is being held in bonds of $100.

Miss Phillips was well known and leaves a large circle of friends at Dunellen, where for many years she conducted a large class in music. Her sudden death is greatly regretted and many from Dunellen will attend the funeral.

Mr. and Mrs. Burnett C. Kenyon, formerly of West Seventh street, have removed to Oak Lane, Philadelphia.

CAUGHT RECORD SIZE RABBIT.

One of the largest Jack rabbits ever caught in this vicinity was brought down Saturday near the South Plainfield coal storage plant by Clyde Savage, of West Fourth street, this city. The animal weighed ten pounds and measured a trifle under three feet in length. Savage was with two companions when he shot the rabbit and secured three others but all were much smaller. Prominent local hunters say that Savage's catch is undoubtedly the biggest of the kind that has ever been caught hereabouts and ascribed the animal's size to the breeding of Belgian hares released a few years ago by the State authorities.

GEORGE EAGER.

George Eager, the three-year-old son of Charles C. and Alice N. Eager, of 1416 West Fourth street, died yesterday afternoon at the home of his parents following a short illness. The service will be held from the late home tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rev. D. B. F. Randolph, pastor of the Monroe Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, officiating. The interment will take place in Hillside cemetery.

DEPEW OWNED TRACT.

Through a misunderstanding it was stated on Saturday's building page that Harry Marshall had purchased from Charles W. McCutcheon a plot of ground on Watchung avenue. The ground was secured from Henry Depew instead of Mr. McCutcheon.

Y. M. C. A. WORKERS TURN IN 621 NEW MEMBE RS IN FIRST 3 DAYS

Drivers in Auto Race Set New Record for Speed—Chairman Gavett's Division Wins Friendly Contest From Judge Runyon's Corps—1,000 is New Limit Set by Canvassers Themselves, Who Think 800 is too Easy.

Pilots in the automobile race of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. drove at a dizzy pace yesterday, and when time for the lap was posted last night some new records had been set up for association canvassers of all time to shoot at.

The Abbott team, under the skillful leadership of Captain G. M. Rittenhouse, pulled in at the end of the day's run with tires scorching, bearings burned out and joints creaking from the strain, but its speed-satiated driver and his companions were still able to smile when they saw their car ahead of the Saurer team that had led the field since the start. Captain Rittenhouse and his fellow-workers turned in a total of fifty-six new members at last night's dinner.

New members reported last night totaled 356, and the total for the three days is now 621.

Because of the wonderful showing already made and the progress of yesterday, those who are engaged in the campaign are not satisfied with the minimum of 800 new members for the six-day campaign. This limit was set by the association officials who inaugurated the contest, but workers set one for themselves last night. They will turn in 1,000 new members by Wednesday night, they said. Assemblyman William N Runyon suggested the new limit, and it was riotously adopted by the two hundred workers, who saw their former goal within easy distance and longed to set one harder to reach.

Judge Runyon, to whom failure has been a stranger, went down to ignoble defeat last night. At the dinner on Saturday evening Judge Runyon, who is chairman of division No. 1, challenged division No. 2, of which J. W. Gavett is chairman, to a contest on the returns for Sunday and Monday. His proposition was that the losing division make the winners a present of five boys' votes secured during the two days. The challenge was promptly accepted, and teams in the two divisions went to work with a new interest in their efforts.

ALL HONOR RECORD OF MAYOR CLARK

Presented With Gold Headed Cane by Residents of Borough.

As a token of the esteem in which he is held in the Borough of North Plainfield, citizens and residents of that district last night assembled in the Republican Club for the purpose of honoring Robert Clark, Jr., for four years Mayor and president of the club. Mr. Clark recently retired from the club presidency and he will end his term as Mayor with the present year. He did not seek re-election and will retire to private life on January 1, 1916.

Mayor Clark was last night presented with a handsome gold-headed cane by admiring constituents and friends, but more valuable than the material evidence of their regard was the expressions of confidence paid to his character and his record as a public official by the thirty citizens who attended the meeting.

President W. L. Smalley, of the Borough Republican Club, called the meeting to order at 8:15. The hall was comfortably filled, the audience numbering thirty. In explaining the purpose of the meeting President Smalley paid a personal tribute to Mayor Clark, giving him credit for many of the accomplishments of the organization during the past four years and attesting his honorable record in office.

The cane was presented by Howard Woolston. Mr. Woolston told of the many public improvements inaugurated by Mayor Clark during his term of office, and of the progress of the municipality during his administration. He said that Robert Clark had proven himself a true servant of the people, acting always with the interest of the borough at heart, and that he was leaving public life with a record as clean as that which he took into it.

After the address of Mr. Woolston each of the men present testified to the regard they held for Mayor Clark.

It was decided to make the Republican Club a permament organization by fitting up headquarters with forms of amusement for the members. Games will be put in and the club will be opened at all times. A meeting will be held next Monday night for the purpose of perfecting these plans.

MRS. SANDFORD TO SPEAK.

Mrs. W. M. Sandford, president of the Parent-Teachers' Association of Plainfield, will address the meeting in the Battin High School auditorium, Elizabeth, Friday, when an effort will be made to form a similar organization in that city. Her subject will be "The Aims and Purpuoses of a Parent-Teacher Association.

REED ARGUES FOR RIGHTS OF THE CITY

Case Against Public Service Electric Company on in Court of Appeals.

Arguments in the appealed case of the Board of Public Utility Commissioners and the city of Plainfield against the Public Service Electric Company are being heard in the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals today on a review of the order of the Supreme Court setting aside an order of the Public Utility Commission forcing the Public Service Electric Company to furnish light free of charge for buildings used for municipal purposes:

The principal argument for the city is being delivered by Charles A. Reed, corporation counsel. Mr. Reed, in arguing that conditions imposed upon the defendant company in its charter granted by the city were not gratuities, but obligations of the company to be paid in consideration of valuable rights given by the city, said:

"If then, the Legislature intended by subdision (d) of section 18 or by any other section of the Act of 1911, to revolutionize the long standing and well settled policy of the State in respect to such grants, and also to make unreasonable, conditions imposed upon them which were reasonable when imposed, is it not strange that clear, precise and unmistakable language was not used to express such intent? Stranger still that no member of the Legislature mentioned in debate while the bill was pending, that if enacted into law it would have such an effect. Most marvelous of all that the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, the chief beneficiary of such an act, which would relieve it to the extent of many thousands annually, never discovered the alleged intent until two years after the bill became a law?

"The act was heralded as a means of compelling public utilities to treat the public fairly. To give it the construction claimed for it in this case will make it a gift enterprise for the benefit of the corporations."

BOY FALLS UNDER AUTO AND LEG IS BROKEN

The six-year-old son of Mary Voscalifski, assistant janitress of the Somerset Street School, was run over and painfully injured by an automobile early this morning on the Greenbrook road, near Grove street.

The machine was driven by J. O Van Middlesworth, of Bound Brook Mr. Middlesworth picked up the boy after the accident and took him to his home on Grove street. He then called a physician, after which he reported the accident to Chief Weiss, of the borough police force. Reports of the accident secured by the police leave the driver blameless. The boy was riding on a wagon and jumped off in front of the automobile. One leg was broken and he was badly bruised.

OUR FUTURE PLANS.

Friends of the Daily Press will naturally inquire as to the future plans of this publication, in view of the announcement that the State Trust Company has purchased and will tear down the building at the corner of Park and North avenues, where the Press has been published for over a quarter of a century.

Above the first floor the largest part of the building is occupied by the Press, and the lease does not expire until April 1, 1917. The publishers have, however, anticipated that the property might be sold, and have already begun negotiations for a location for a new home for the Press upon which a proper building exclusively for our purposes may be erected. These plans will be carried out, and further announcement will be made later.

JURY AWARDS $1,200 FOR LAND FOR SEWER

Judge Coddington Wins Victory in Condemnation Case in Circuit Court.

A jury in the circuit court sitting on the appeal of John H. Sebring and others from a valuation placed on land needed for the new joint sewer from Plainfield to Piscataway township yesterday allowed the property-owners $1,200. The original valuation placed on the land by the condemnation commissioners was one dollar a front foot, or $580. William A. Coddington represented the complainants.

The victory is a pleasing one to property owners in the vicinity of the Sebring farm because they are contesting the locating of the sewer and have instituted proceedings in chancery court to force a change in the plans. It is believed that this case will be affected by the decision of yesterday.

An outlet pipe has been run for 580 feet through the Sebring property with an outlet on the property line. Judge Coddington's claim for damages for his client was based on the fact that the meadow land was hurt because of the ridge across it caused by the sewer pipe, and because of the sewer outlet, which would make the property undesirable for any purposes. A jury visited the property yesterday morning. The entire afternoon was given over to arguments and examination of witnesses. Many men from Plainfield were called to testify. Among them were Charles H. Lyman, H. P. Limbarger, J. D. Vail, N. B. Smalley, George W. Harris, A. B. Spencer, W. H. Abbott, C. D. Manning, M. F. Gano, F. J. Hubbard and W. S. Wheeler.

TRANSFER TROOP D HEADQUARTERS

Governor Orders Hoboken Members to Report in This City Hereafter.

WILL RECRUIT HERE

Lack of Interest on Part of Hudson Contingent Responsible for Change—Plainfield Organization is a Prosperous One.

Jersey City, Nov. 16.—Governor Fielder yesterday signed an order directing that the headquarters of Troop D, New Jersey Cavalry, be transferred from Hexamer's, in Hoboken, to Plainfield. This action was taken on the recommendation of Adjutant-General Wilbur F. Sadler and Captain Borden, of Plainfield, head of the troop.

The transfer of the headquarters will mean the practical disbanding of the Hoboken, or Hudson county, section of the troop.

Lieutenant Thomas F. Meaney and Sergeant Steil have been the mainstays of the Hoboken end of the organization.

There are four troops of New Jersey cavalry, namely, two in Essex, one in Red Bank, and Troop D, which was made up of Plainfield and Hudson county men.

When Troop D was organized some time ago it comprised a large contingent of Hudson county young men, led by Lieutenant Meaney, and also Arbitration Board Unable to Adjust Differences Between Masters and Hodcarriers.

The question as to whether local hodcarriers are to have $2 or $3 a day for feeding concrete mixers for local master masons is no nearer settled today than it was the middle of last June. The Joint Arbitration Board met last night at the Building Trades Council Hall to consider the question, which has been before the organizations for the past five months, but went no futher than to refer it back to the commitees from the union and the masters' association which has been spending much time recently drawing up a new working agreement.

The question of wages for this type of work is a live one at the present time, as considerable concrete work is to be done on the new storage warehouse on East Third street, and Samuel W. Rushmore's new fireproof dwelling on Belvidere avenue. B. F. Tallamy & Brother and William H. Dennick, the only two local mason contractors who have concrete mixers, have these two large contracts at the present time. Whether the fact that the wage question is still hanging in the air will hold up the work on these structures for the present is not known.

The problem of wages will continue to be discussed at local labor meetings during the rest of the week. The Hodcarriers and Building Laborers' Union is to meet on Thursday night, the Building Trades Council on Friday night, and the Master Masons' Association on Monday evening of next week.

Should any effort be made on the part of the contractors to pay hodcarriers anything under the union rate of $3 a day, it will mean that both of these buildings would be declared unfair to union labor by the local Building Trades Council. The storage warehouse structure is now ready for the pouring of concrete for the floor of the first story, and the laborers are awaiting any step which the contractors may take in the matter.

STATE TRUST CO. PURCHASES SITE TO ERECT MODERN BANK BUILDING

Acquires Vanderbeek Property at Park and North Avenues Now Occupied by the Plainfield Daily Press, T. S. Armstrong and Moraller & Son—Present Building to Be Replaced by Handsome Three Story Structure.

The most important realty transaction announced in Plainfield in many years was completed yesterday, when the State Trust Company bought the property located at the corner of Park and North avenues, now occupied by the Plainfield Daily Press, T. S Armstrong and Moraller Brothers. Until yesterday the property was owned by Vanderbeek W. Shotwell, who purchased it from the Vanderbeek estate a few months ago for $41,700, and it is said that in the latest transaction the consideration was about $45,000.

After the present leases have expired it is the company's plan to tear down the building now standing there and to erect a modern bank building, the basement and first floor of which will be utilized for the bank's purposes, while the second floor will be divided into suites of offices, and on the third floor there will be a well appointed lodge room.

The location chosen by the company for its new building is convenient both for the commuter as well as for the bank's local clients, and was selected as being the most available site in the city for serving both.

On September 16, 1910, The State Trust Company first opened its doors to the public for business, and its growth has been so steady that at the present time its deposits amount to almost $900,000, while its total assets have gone well beyond a million dollars. The bank is to be congratulated upon such a prosperous growth, which has taken place under depressed business conditions, as well as in the face of the fact that its present banking quarters have compared unfavorably with those of some of their competitors. What has been accomplished under such adverse conditions forecasts the greater progress of the company when its new banking home is completed.

The officers of the company are: R. Henry Depew, president; E. F. Feickert, vice-president; M. C. VanArsdale, vice-president; H. C. Nash, secretary-treasurer, and the directors are: Dr. Frank C. Ard, George L. Babcock, Samuel Bingaman, George S. Clay, Dr. J. H. Cooley, R. Henry Depew, Dr. A. H. Dundon, A. D. Edgar, Edward F. Feickert, W. A. Garrigues, George M. Holstein, Alex. Milne, William Newcorn, Seymour Perkins, A. W. Ransome, M. C. Van Arsdale, J. V. E. Vanderhoef and J. A. Van Mater.

WM. S. TYLER TO RETIRE AS ANTI-T. B. PRES'T

Notifies Executive Committee That He Will Be Unable to Serve After This Year.

William S. Tyler, president of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield, notified the members of the executive committee at their meeting last night at the Babcock building that he would be unable to serve after this year. As Mr. Tyler has played an important part in the upbuilding of the league, and has assisted materially in bringing it to a sound financial footing, much regret was expressed at his decision. Miss Mabelle Phillips, who had temporarily accepted the secretaryship following the resignation of F. W. Iredell, also resigned, and her place was filled by the election of James Boyd Potter.

President Tyler reported that he had received a check for $5,000 from the estate of Mrs. George H. Babcock, which is to be added to the funds of the league. It was voted to procure a set of cards for the guidance of those who visit the clinic. Dr. Frederic Hughes reported that the local physicians are to meet on Saturday to formulate plans for tuberculosis week, which starts December 6. He said that in all probability the clinic would be kept open every night that week, and on two afternoons. In a few days a publicity campaign will be started in the local papers to educate the people to the importance of this work.

Treasurer James W. Murray, who presided in the absence of the president, appointed William S. Tyler, Miss Mabelle C. Phillips, Leslie R. Fort, Samuel Rothberg and Stephen H Voorhees on the nominating committee for next year.

The report of the tuberculosis nurse showed that she had twenty-five cases on October 1, and seven have been reported since, a total of 32. Two of these left town, one was admitted to a sanatorium, leaving twenty-nine under her care on November 2. She made 248 visits, of which 203 were to homes, 36 to the open-air school and nine to the clinic.

Dr. Hughes made an exhaustive report for the clinic, showing that thus far this year the clinic has been open 86 days, with 101 registered patients, making 573 visits, the average being ten new patients per month, who made 57 visits. It was a significant fact that the educational work of the league has reduced the number of persons afflicted from an average of 30 per month in 1913 to 10 this year.

SPOKE ON "OPPORTUNITY."

ELABORATE PLANS FOR CHARITY BALL

United Hebrew Organization to Give Its Annual Affair November 24.

Preparations are under way for the United Hebrew Charity Organization entertainment and ball which is to be held in the Knights of Columbus Hall on Wednesday night, November 24.

Hyman Adelberg, chairman of the committee of arrangements, is striving to make this event one of the best ever given by the organization. Talent of exceptional merit has been secured for the occasion, among which will be a quartet from Plainfield Lodge of Elks, No. 885, who have volunteered their services. A varied program offered by professional entertainers will be a feature of the function.

The proceeds of the affair will go into the general fund for the charitable work connected with the organization. Returns from sale of tickets are coming in fast and it is hoped that a sufficient sum will be realized to take care of the poor during the hard times of the coming winter.

The United Hebrew Charity Organization of Plainfield was formed June 1, 1914, since which time considerable money has been spent in the maintenance of a sheltering home for wanderers and wayfarers, thus relieving the merchants of the city from continuous dunning by those who come into the city for relief. The greater portion of the funds are spent in the relief of the poor, furnishing employment to those who need it and all other forms of charity connected with the Jewish inhabitants of the city of Plainfield. The main effort of the organization is to endeavor to make its families self-sustaining after temporary relief has been furnished and to provide permanent relief to those who require it, thus relieving the city and other charitable organizations of the necessity of aid and assistance.

The organizers of the movement have been very much encouraged by the liberal support which they have received in carrying out the object of the formation of this organization.

The committee in charge comprises Hyman Adelberg, chairman; Jacob A Fass, William Schloss, Samuel Schwartz and Samuel Rothberg.

MANY ATTRACTIONS AT MOOSE BAZAAR

Dancing One of the Features of Affair Being Held This Week.

With its maze of fancy booths, Teddy bears, dollies, whose raiments rival the robes of an Indian princess; a doll board, where you get a chance to win a "girl" with flaxen hair and rosy cheeks already to be hugged and never say "you mustn't;" hair curlers for bachelors, smoking jackets for spinsters, and other things without name and ambiguous purposes, the annual fair of Plainfield Lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, is one of the most pleasing attractions of its kind held in Plainfield this season. The attendance nightly taxes the capacity of the large hall on Front street and keeps the dancers filled from 8:30 until the dancers get tired out.

Besides the attractions mentioned the women try to make you feel at home buying badges, securing emblems and other things, while Scott's orchestra enlivens the occasion and makes it impossible to refrain from "shakin' a toe."

There is a well arranged program for each night, with dancing a feature. Miss Gladys Mead and Miss Gladys Stites are the candidates for the most popular young woman's prize, which will be either a gold watch or a diamond ring. They are running close and it will not be until the last vote is counted that the winner will be known. Naturally there is a lively spirit of friendly competition between the respective admirers of these young women and the hustle for votes resembles the women's suffrage campaign. Then the man selling the greatest number of entrance tickets gets a $10 gold piece.

Saturday night will be children's night when the juveniles will own the hall, during the early hours, at least, and each child will receive a handsome souvenir of the occasion. Mrs. Thomas Dorgan will have charge of the children's reception and distribute the souvenirs.

The opening of the fair was marked by an attendance far in excess of anticipations. Fully 350 persons visited the hall and took part in the gaities. The attendance last night was also large.

The fair is under the direction of a committee combining the members of the clubhouse committee and the good and welfare committee of the lodge, together with a women's committee. The former committee is headed by George J. Egel, dictator of the lodge, and composed of these members: M. J. Whelan, secretary; J. Kirkpatrick, George Ball, D. Mullowney, J. Dahl, Thomas Dorgan, P. Johnson, J. G. Robinson, Frank Farraro, Tony Farraro, J. T. McCarty, G. R. Beggs, Thomas Parsons, James Dunnis, Charles Pagliucca, Edward Nye, A. Bozack, Harry Morse, James Passady, Edward Coughlin.

The members of the women's committee are: Mesdames Fred Eckhart, W. L. Allen, Charles Pagliucca, Robert Casey, T. Walsh, A. Stites, L. Stites, Etta Seeling, Miss Gladys Stites, Miss Gladys Mead and Mrs. Thomas Dorgan.

The committees are emphatic in their appreciation of the generosity of the merchants and others who contributed so liberally articles suitable for prizes and souvenirs. They are also grateful to the public for support so far given.

The fair will continue every night this week, closing Saturday night with a general good time.

BALL OF FUR TURNS OUT TO BE "BRER POSSUM"

Residents of a house located at 921 Madison avenue were yesterday afternoon attracted by a ball of fur rolling around the front lawn, the object giving the appearance of something having life but exhibiting no signs of legs or eyes. When a small colored youth was delegated to see what the mysterious object was it suddenly turned over and rolled over again, apparently dead.

A long bushy tail projected from one of the ends and the colored youth grabbed this, dragging the ball of fur to the house. It was soon found to be an opossum and the colored boy began smacking his lips over the prospects of a 'surenuff feed.

It has been placed in a wire cage and will be exhibited in the show window of Thorn's bicycle store on Park avenue. The opossum is a large specimen and well fattened. What it was doing in the vicinity of Madison avenue is not known but it is thought that its mate may be somewhere in that section.

QUESTION OF LEGALITY OF ACTION BROUGHT UP

Another chapter in the marital troubles of John Schneider and Abby K. Schneider went unclosed following a hearing in the city police court this morning, Judge DeMeza being unconvinced that it was within his jurisdiction to dispose of the litigation and giving Swackhammer and Bird, attorneys for Mrs. Schneider, until next week to produce more substantial proof. For more than a year Mrs Schneider has been making a fight to gain her husband's support on the strength of a complaint filed with Overseer of the Poor Garret T. Dunham, in which it is claimed that she is indigent and likely to become a public charge. The defendant in the action is a chauffeur and figured some time ago in an alienation suit filed by his wife against his employer who lived in Fanwood. This was settled out of court by the payment of $500 to the plaintiff.

Testimony taken in the maintenance case indicates that Mrs Schneider is receiving the support of her son and daughter, besides her own income, the total amounting to over $20 a week. In view of this fact Judge DeMeza sees no immediate danger of her becoming a public charge and believes that it is not within his power to make an order that her husband pay her a stated amount each week, inasmuch as the couple have no children. It is the opinion of Judge DeMeza that Mrs Schneider is amply provided for and until such time as it is shown to him that she is likely to become a pauper he will not put the defendant under bonds to contribute to her support.

EIGHTEEN YEAR OLD BOY POPULAR WITH THE GIRLS

City Judge William G. DeMeza conducted a school of etiquette in the police court this morning for the benefit of eighteen-year-old Frank Winston, and if the youth profits by the lesson he will in the future call upon his young women friends at their homes instead of entertaining them on his own front porch. According to a story related in court by the boy's mother, two young women Gladys and Margaret Vail, called at her home last night and requested to see "Mr. Frank." The mother informed them that her son was too young to be "running around with girls" and that they would have to state what they wanted before seeing him.

The visitors, however, insisted on the mother producing Frank and their wishes were finally granted. Mother Winslow remained on the porch as a censor and was requested to go into the house. Upon her refusal to do this she was thrust in the doorway and the door was slammed in her face. After the popular Frank had bade his friends goodbye he came into the house and was subjected to a reprimand by his older sister whereupon he proceeded to "break up housekeeping." Besides overturning the dinner table full of eatables and smashing a set of crockery he took his mother by the shoulders and shook her. She then summoned a police officer and had him locked up.

In court this morning Frank told Judge DeMeza that the Vail girls had come over to find out whether or not he intended taking them to a local theatre last evening. The mother declared that the young women were of questionable character and in this she was corroborated by Lieutenant Maurice Higgins, of the police department.

"Frank," said Judge DeMeza "Hereafter pick better company. You may rest assured that the girl who will call at your home is not the girl you should travel with. It is the man's place to visit the woman's house and the woman should not be entertained at the man's house. A young snip like you should be thinking about helping your mother instead of taking girls to Proctor's and if we have any more trouble with you we'll send you to the reform school."

In open court Frank promised his mother that he would do better in the future and upon this condition he was given another chance.

MAN WHO HAD LITTLE GIRL TELLS CONFLICTING TALES

Failure on the part of the police to obtain a connected story from Frank Nelson, the man who was arrested here Sunday with a three-year old girl, led to his remandment until Thursday morning when arraigned before City Judge DeMeza for the second time this morning. The police are of the opinion that the man may be a kidnapper sought by the New York city authorities and they believe that the stories told by him are false. His statements have been very conflicting and do not tend to clear up the mystery surrounding the identity of the child.

In court this morning he stated that he came from Sayreville, Mass., while yesterday morning he said he came from New Milford, Mass., and New York city. When arrested he claimed residence in Camden, N. J.

He maintains that his wife is dead and that he has cared for the girl for two years. The child has been taken in charge by Miss Mabelle Phillips, agent for the local branch of the Charity Organization, and is at present in the Children's Home on Westervelt avenue. Miss Phillips has had her examined by a physician and it is said that she is in delicate health. The child claims that her mother and father fight all the time and that her father ran away from home with her.

STRIKERS LOOK FOR EMPLOYMENT HERE

Encouraged by the demand for machinists in other cities, particularly in Plainfield, 200 men of this trade in Trenton who went on a strike yesterday, believe that the trouble will be short-lived. Many of the strikers have already secured employment in this city and elsewhere, the Scott Printing Press Company and the Hall Printing Press Company being among those concerns which have engaged the Trentonians. The Plainfield concerns are paying $19.50 a week while the capital city workmen claim that their pay is very poor for the class of work they do and that their hours are too long.

L. Longley, employment agent for the Saurer plant of the International Motor Company, is known to have visited Trenton recently for the purpose of engaging skilled mechanics to work at the local plant. In an interview with a Daily Press reporter recently he told of visits to Trenton and declared that he expected to sign up a big squad to move here in the near future.

TO HOLD REUNION OF COOK'S TOURISTS

A reunion of the ex-members of Cook's Tour A to the Panama-Pacific Exhibition held during the weeks of July 3 to July 27, inclusive, will be held at the Cafe Boulevard, Broadway and Forty-first street, New York, on Saturday evening, November 20. A private room has been engaged for the evening and a dinner will be served at 8 o'clock.

Victor Budell, of New York city, one of the tourists on the occasion, is the chairman of the affair and he has sent out letters to all the members of the party, including the young women, winners of the Daily Press Panama-Pacific Tour and their chaperon. Miss Anna McGinnes, Miss Agnes Leighs, of Plainfield, and Miss Lorena Harris, of South Plainfield chaperoned by Mrs. George T. Leighs were the members of the Daily Press party and it is probable that all will attend the get-together party on Saturday night, when reminiscences of the western trip will be discussed and a general good time enjoyed.

The reunion will include members of the party from Brooklyn, New York city, Elizabeth, Bloomfield, Kenilworth and Westfield.

TRANSFER TROOP D

a number of men led by Captain Borden, of Plainfield. Borden was made captain, but it was arranged that the troop should have two headquarters. Arrangements were made to have the Hudson county members drill at Hexamer's, in Hoboken, while the Plainfield men were allowed to drill in Plainfield. Then, on stated evenings, the entire troop had to drill at the main headquarters in Hoboken.

It happened, however, that while the Plainfield end of the organization prospered and kept up a lively interest, the Hudson county end began to go down after its organization.

One after another the Hudson members dropped out, or fell behind in their dues.

Originally sixty-five had enlisted in Hudson county, but today there are only about seventeen left. At the meeting at Hexamer's on October 1 only eleven members reported. At the meeting on October 21 only twelve reported. At the meeting on October 28 only five reported.

Adjutant General Sadler visited Hoboken recently to make a personal inquiry, and he and Captain Borden concluded that the Hudson contingent was beyond salvation.

Major Bryant, commander of the squadron to which the four troops belong, has also been investigating the situation and he agreed with General Sadler and Captain Borden that as the Plainfield end of the troop was practically all that was left of it, the headquarters should be transferred to Plainfield. This means that the few Hudson members rather than travel to Plainfield to drill will now drop out, too, and the Plainfield men will make up the entire troop.

The Plainfield men are not discouraged and they say they will be able to fill the gaps with young men from Plainfield and vicinity. The average membership of a troop is 100.

Y. M. C. A. WORKERS TO PARADE TONIGHT

Headed by the Saurer team in a Saurer truck, teams in the Y. M. C. A. membership contest will parade the streets of Plainfield tonight to demonstrate their confidence in the success of the campaign now being conducted.

More than thirty-five machines have been entered for the parade and it is believed that many more will be on hand when the Boy Scout fife and drum corps starts the march at 8 p. m.

President Murray, of the association; Secretary Estes, Chairmen Arbin and MacArt and other leaders will occupy the first automobile, but the teams proper will be led by the Saurer truck. This organization has won the right to move first by its efficient work in the campaign.

There will be flags, pennants, fire and noise. So far as possible teams will ride in cars that they represent in the race for new members and in the order in which they stand in results posted on the score board.

The Boy Scout fife and drum corps of the Plainfield organization has been invited to lead the automobile parade. Scout musicians will bring their drums to the Y. M. C. A. and after having supper, will be accorded places in the auto line. The drum corps will be in charge of Scoutmasters W. F. Richards, of Hope Chapel Troop 12; Charles Richards, Champion Troop 5; Joseph A. Garner Troop 7. The scouts will report to the commissioner at 7 o'clock sharp at the Y. M. C. A.

May Be a Little Deep But It's Right

When you buy an Overcoat simply because it is $20, you are buying the price and not the Overcoat.

It is perfectly proper to put a limit of $20 on your expenditure, but why put a limit on the Overcoat?

Anybody will sell you a $20 Overcoat, but you don't want anybody's $20 Overcoat; you want the best Overcoat $20 will buy.

And that point of view will bring you to Rothberg's.

We have Overcoats at $15, at $20, at $25, but while the prices are the same as in other shops, the Overcoats are better — the ciphers correspond, but the cut differs—the cost is the same, but the investment is more profitable—because the basic idea behind every Rothberg production is, that it must be a bigger, better value than the average, or it cannot get into the Rothberg stock with a boat hook.

Open evenings.

CLUB WOMEN ENJOY PAPERS ON "RUSSIA"

The literature section of the Monday Afternoon Club had charge of the program of that organization which met in the parish house of the Congregational church yesterday afternoon. The department is taking up the study of Russia this winter and interesting papers on that country were read. "Education—Treatment of the Jews," read by Mrs. J. B. Patton, was handled in excellent style and proved of much interest. Mrs. D. H. Rowland read a paper on the "Social Customs."

During the session, Mrs. Henry D Hibbard, chairman of the literature department, gave a delightful account of her trip to the Panama-Pacific coast, from which she recently returned. Her description of the exhibits were most interesting and she was especially enthusiastic about the trip.

Next Monday the art section will conduct the session, during which Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman will read an interesting paper on "The Kremlin—its history, architecture and interior decoration." The talk will be illustrated.

The next public lecture scheduled by the club will be given in the Parish House on Monday afternoon, November 29, at which time Prof. Stuart Tyson, of Princeton University, will deliver a talk on the following subject, "Value of Modern Critical Study of the Bible." Plainfielders will recall Prof. Tyson, when he appeared at the Grace Church Parish House during the Lenten season last year in a series of talks on the Bible. The lecture will be open to the public on the payment of a nominal fee.

MISS EMILY C. MARCH BRIDE OF J. N. RUTLEDGE

Miss Emily C. March, of the borough, but formerly of Boston, was married at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon to Joseph Newman Rutledge, of Franklin avenue. The ceremony took place at the home of Mrs. C. P. Walrod, of 98 Westervelt avenue, and was performed by Rev. C. S. Gillespie, pastor of Grace M. E. church. There were no attendants, the wedding being a very simple one, with only relatives of the two families being in attendance.

At the conclusion of an informal reception, Mr. and Mrs. Rutledge left for a southern trip to last about two weeks. They will be at home to their friends at 98 Westervelt avenue after December 15. Both of the contracting parties are well known throughout the city and borough, this being especially true of Mrs. Rutledge. She has been engaged in evangelistic work for a number of years and has been prominent at Grace M. E. church, where she has been a factor in promoting its religious endeavors.

URGE PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN FOR BORO

Several interesting communications were received by the Dunellen Board of Trade at its meeting last night, including one from the New Jersey Housing Association, in which the work being done by this organization was set forth and offering to furnish a speaker at some future meeting of the Board. The matter was laid over until the next meeting.

The Grandville Chemical Company, in a letter, sought information about vacant factories in Dunellen and possible sites for its business, which it explained, required enlarged quarters. The communication was turned over to the committee on manufacturing industries.

Still another communication from the H. E. Lesan Advertising Agency, of Detroit, asking for information about the borough, was read. It was voted to place the concern on the board's mailing list.

Under the report of committees the special water meter committee reported progress and was granted further powers. In calling for the report of the publicity committee, President J. G. Walters said that it was the opinion of Mayor Latham that the extensive improvements about completed were ready for an advertising campaign. It was the opinion of the members that the Board should issue a booklet advertising Dunellen.

15 YEAR OLD BOY IS DEAD FROM POISONING

Butler Jennings, the fifteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jennings, of Dunellen, died at 5 o'clock this morning from blood poisoning and pleurisy. Two weeks ago the boy sustained scratches from a fall and it is believed that the blood poisoning resulted from this injury. He did not tell his parents of the accident until he was dangerously ill.

The boy was in the fourth grade in the Lincoln School and was a particularly industrious youth of great promise.

Besides his parents he is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Joe D. DeGraf, of Plainfield, and Miss Edna Jennings, of Dunellen, and four brothers.

Funeral services will be held from the residence Friday afternoon, the Rev. E. R. Brown officiating. Interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

—It there's a new owner in charge of the little store down the street, the chances are that a "Business Opportunity" advertisement has been "at work."

—"Bargain hunters" never get out of touch with the "For Sale" advertisements. And bargain hunters are not all of the gentler sex—not by any means.

AMUSEMENTS.

DAN KEIDERLING BEGINS LIVERY MANAGEMENT TODAY

Daniel Keiderling, who has been connected with the local fire department for nine years and served as driver for Chief T. O. Doane during practically all that time, retired from the service today. He will at once take charge of the Central Livery stable at 200 West Second street which he recently purchased, and which he will add to the business of the City Livery and Boarding stable at 138 and 140 East Second street which he has owned for some time. The two places are to be managed by Mr. Keiderling at their respective locations but under the name of the City Livery and Boarding stables. The genial driver's retirement from the city's fire fighting force was received with regret by his fellow members but he begins his new undertaking with the best wishes of all for prosperity and success.

The selection of a driver for Chief Doane to take Mr. Keiderling's place has not been decided upon as yet but it is probable that one will be named within the next few days. No new appointments to the fire fighting corps will be made for the present although it is understood that two new men are to be added about the first of the year, both of them being to fill vacancies.

MORE EVIDENCE NEEDED TO DETERMINE VERDICT

On a State complaint charging him with larceny of tools, in which Councilman Theodore Martin is the complaining witness, Edward Horton, of this city, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city police court this morning but because of the conflicting nature of evidence the case was postponed until Friday morning when additional testimony will be introduced. A kit of tools which Mr. Martin claims is his property was produced in court, it being alleged that Mr. Horton, who is a former employe of Martin's stole them.

The accused stoutly denied the charge and produced bills to show that he purchased them from the Warner-Wingate Company, of Cortland street, New York city. Mr. Martin's witnesses were positive in their identification of the particular articles but it was argued that the same could have been purchased by the defendant.

GIVE RECEPTION FOR MISS QUICK

Mrs. E. Gertrude Quick, of 836 Central avenue, gave a charming reception at her home yesterday at which her daughter, Miss Dorothy Quick, was formally introduced to local society. The affair was attended by many people from Plainfield and other places to the number of more than 200.

Mrs. Quick and her daughter were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Quick's mother, Mrs. Charles Aaron. The color scheme in the decorations was pink and the parlor and dining room looked beautiful in a mass of cut flowers with pink roses predominating. In the library the coloring gave way to yellow and there were masses of chrysanthemums, together with roses and carnations. The callers came during the entire afternoon and following the introduction refreshments were served by a New York caterer.

Miss Quick wore a coming out frock of white panne velvet which proved most becoming. Her mother wore blue panne velvet and her grandmother a most attractive gown of black panne. Miss Quick, who was graduated from the Plainfield Seminary in 1913, has been decidedly popular with the younger social set and one of the season's debutantes will add to her social prestige.

HUSBAND'S LOVE FOR TENNIS DISASTROUS

Claiming that his wife left him on July 7, 1912, because he refused to stop playing tennis, C. Leslie Dodge of 137 Berckman street, this city has made application through his counsel, Robert Newton Crane, to the Court of Chancery for a decree of absolute divorce from his wife, Mrs Marcella Esther Dodge, whom he married on June 27, 1908. Testimony in the preliminary proceedings was taken in Elizabeth this morning before former Vice Chancellor William Magie, sitting as an advisory master. Mr. Crane appeared at the hearing in behalf of Mr. Dodge and the defendant in the action was represented by James J. Quill, although apparently no effort was made to contest the action.

The specific grounds on which the petition was lodged with the Court of Chancery alleges desertion, tennis playing being one of the reasons advanced for the differences standing between the couple. Prior to July 1912, Mr. and Mrs. Dodge lived with the former's mother, Mrs. Josephine Dodge, in this city, and the latter corroborated in every detail the testimony given by her son at the proceedings this morning.

Mr. Dodge is well known in Plainfield and has been active in local tennis circles, being recognized as an enthusiastic devotee to the pastime and a formidable contender for local laurels. He is employed as an accountant in Bayonne. Coincident with his employment in that place is the fact that Mrs. Dodge has established a residence there since her removal from Plainfield.

AMERICA'S ATTITUDE IN WAR DENOUNCED

Preaching to his old congregation in the Bloor Street Baptist church at Toronto, Ont., Sunday Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, of Watchung, strongly denounced America's attitude toward Belgium and declared that he was prepared to meet Dr. David Starr Jordon in debate, and "the sooner the better."

Dr. Eaton said in part:

"I am not neutral and never was. There are people holding up their hands hyocritically and saying, 'stop the war.' I hope to God it will never stop until it is settled to the last litch. A peace this side of the establishment of justice would be a worse crime than war itself.

"America is getting nothing out of the war but money and doing nothing except slapping the Kaiser on the wrists occasionally. I believe if the day Belgium was ravished he United States had begun to mobilize her men she would have been infinitely better and saner, more Christ-like and more Saxonlike than she is today, even if she had been crucified like the rest of the nations by entry into the war.

"Think of the United States—100,000,000 people—rich with all the gifts and dedications of race and industry, development and culture, and that she is getting nothing out of the war except money and doing nothing except writing a few notes and slapping the Kaiser on the wrist occasionaaly."

GIVE THEM A BOY.

Soon age will be upon all of us, and instead of serving the world we will exact service of it. Those who long for happiness and rest in their last years among men must make sacrifices now.

The gold that we gather must be given up at the grave. Our memory will linger for a few years, perhaps, among those that loved us, but we cannot hope to be remembered long. It is only through our influence upon the lives of others that we may make the world better for our having been a part of it, and leave a monument to our life that will withstand the wear of time.

If every man could pause on the threshold of eternity and look back to a successful Christian life of his own creation, there would be no sorrow, no fear, in death. After you have lived your life, would you not be able to face the dark unknown that lies beyond with greater courage, if you knew that you had builded one noble character among your fellowmen? Would you not be happy, in your winter years, to point to some sucessful man, a citizen in the eyes of men and of God, with the knowledge that without your help he would never have really lived?

You can do it. You know some boy, some friendless youth, who is beginning life's struggle under a handicap. If you do not know him, he is near you and can easily be found. For the insignificant sum of $5 you can give him a membership in the Young Men's Christian Association, where he will be surrounded by influences for good, and taught physical and moral cleanliness, and possibly he will become a greater man than you can hope for yourself. He will learn honesty and fairness to men and he will learn Christianity, and when your usefulness is ended he will be an influence for good in the lives of other men. He too, will reach some youth without friends and rescue another from an immoral and unclean life and the work will go on forever, because of you.

The Plainfield Young Men's Christian Association is conducting a campaign for new members, and it wants boys. It wants to reach those that need guidance and the strength of years so that it can make real men of them.

Give them a boy. Go out into the streets, if you do not know one, and pick the dirtiest, meanest, most friendless that you can find and give him a membership. Watch him grow and develop and when you are called to account for your life among men you will find that he has balanced many of your misdeeds. It will be a wonderful investment, "a far, far better thing that you do, than you have ever done."

SENATOR W. W. SMALLEY.

Anyone posted on political affairs in this State knows that the Newark Sunday Call hits the nail squarely on the head when it says that if there is any value to a record as a first class business man in connection with the position as State Treasurer, friends of William W. Smalley, State Senator from Somerset county, believe that he will have a good chance for the place. They also point out that Senator Smalley has had some excellent service on the appropriations committee and therefore he has a splendid knowledge of the financial needs of the State. Smalley is serving his second term in the State Senate, and some months ago, when there was a lot of "favorite son" talk for Governor, he was spoken of as avaliable. Before he was elected to the State Senate Smalley had four years in the Assembly, where his record was very creditable. He is president of a national bank at Bound Brook, where he is engaged in business, and he takes a prominent part in the Board of Trade of that place. When a young man he had seven years' experience in a banking institution in New York, and he is well posted in financial matters.

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON.

When life went out of the body of Booker T. Washington the greatest mind the colored race has produced ended its work, and the greatest friend the negro has ever known ceased his efforts to uplift them. Washington gave his whole life to the education of his brothers and he did more to lead them out of ignorance and crime than any other man that has ever lived, not excepting Lincoln, who freed them. He taught them that they were to grow better, not by any sudden shift of society, but by doing the task before them with every energy, no matter whether it was in the cotton field of the south or the factory of the east, and by a reconstruction within, not without. Which would be a good lesson for all men, whether white or black.

Tell Him So

If a friend of yours does well,
Tell him so.
Don't go raise a jealous yell—
Tell him so.
He'll be glad to know you're glad,
Glad it doesn't make you sad.
Finest fun you ever had—
Tell him so.

If you like your brother's work,
Tell him so.
Drive away the doubts that lurk—
Tell him so.
He may feel that he has failed,
By grim doubt may be assailed.
By your word he'll be regaled—
Tell him so.

If you think his work is punk,
Tell him so.
It will rouse his fighting spunk—
Tell him so.
Tell him he is in a rut.
He'll just think you are a nut—
Maybe knock your block off! But
Tell him so.

Missing Trains

In order to miss a train, all one has to do is to ask a hotel clerk and not look up the time-card or telephone the depot.

This method will get you to the station a very few minutes after the train has henced.

When you find the train has gone, try to act as if you didn't care.

The people who linger about the depot will guess your guilty secret with the accuracy of a busy Bertha.

And you hate them for it.

What business had they hanging around a station, anyway, after the train has gone?

They did it just on the off chance of enjoying some fool's discomfiture.

Why don't they believe that you had rushed into the station, bearing two suit-cases, just to weigh yourself on the depot slot machine?

The ticket agent and the baggage man, of whom you finally bring yourself to ask some more questions, after having scolded them for your mistake, answer you with a gentle patience which is the most insulting thing they could use on you.

Finally, after reluctantly admitting to yourself that you were wrong, and that nobody on earth was to blame except your fool self, you gather up your stuff, make what arrangements you can to retrieve your bonehead-play, and disappear.

And never tell anybody the real truth about it afterward.

Scared Him

"You have so much personality!" said the fawning young man to the billionaire.

The rich man jumped ten feet straight up, and cried:

"I have no such thing! I am misrepresented!"

"Why, I had always thought you had great personality!"

"O that! Lord, man! How you scared me. I thought you were an assessor and said 'personalty.'"

Reasonable Creatures

We go to our tailor who has to have business in order to live and say:

"I want something that will hold its color and shape."

"I have it."

"I want something that won't bag at the knees."

"I have it."

"I want something that won't show dirt or gather dust."

"Got it, sir."

And he measures us for a suit that will fade a little, stretch a lot at the coat-pockets, bag at the knees a great deal, gather all the dust that comes its way.

Because the tailor is a liar?

Nah, because we are a fool to ask for something common-sense ought to tell us doesn't exist.

The Wet Antiseptic Dressing

AS IN the operating-room, so in general surgical practice and domestic surgery, antiseptics have very little practical use. It is a great mistake to keep bathing or applying to a wound antiseptic substances in the vague belief that they hasten healing. On the contrary most antiseptics tend to delay healing, because they destroy new tissue and skin cells even more readily than they destroy germs.

Certainly no antiseptic other than the first aid iodine swabbing should be applied to the ordinary clean wound in household practice. If we have any excuse at all for the use of antiseptic substances in the after-care of wounds it is for the protection of others than the patient himself. If a wound is infected—dirty, secreting pus or matter—then the use of antiseptic dressings is advisable, not because the antiseptics can appreciably alter the state of infection within the tissues, but because the discharges are rendered less dangerous to other individuals, and because antiseptics tend to prevent unpleasant odors.

The wet antiseptic dressing is deservedly popular in the treatment of infected wounds and burns. A wet dressing, for some reason or other, gives more comfort than a dry dressing, and besides it is more absorptive, it drains away the septic discharges better than a dry dressing does. In a dry dressing there is a tendency for the discharges to desiccate and scab over, obstructing drainage and bringing about an inflammatory reaction in the wound.

There has been too much popularity for the wet bichloride (corrosive sublimate or mercury) dressing. This antiseptic is too poisonous for domestic use. It should never be kept in the house. As a safe substitute, with equal antiseptic value, we would suggest a teaspoonful of tincture of iodine to the pint of water for moistening dressings; or a tablespoonful of boric acid to the pint of water (boiled); or a chinosol tablet in a pint of boiled water.

Wet antiseptic dressings applied hot and changed every few hours do all the good a poultice can do, yet do not encourage bacterial activities by furnishing food as poultices do. The painful, infected wound responds promptly to hot wet antiseptic dressings.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Pills Versus Gallstones

Mother is taking some pills containing menthol, phenolphthalein, acid sodium oleate and sodium salicylate, being told they will dissolve gallstones. Also she takes vegetable cathartic pills and corn-silk, saw palmetto, uritone and sandal wood in a liquid which is said to wash them away. She is getting very weak. An X-ray photograph showed about twenty stones present.

Answer—She will get weaker before she realizes that these medicines will not dissolve or wash away her twenty gallstones. Then she had better call in a doctor.

THE ROOTER

THE rooter is a sort of human cataclysm who supplies the calliope effect at our football games. He is composed of a vast howl, enclosed in a thin rim of face, and decorated with a fringe of wildly moving arms and legs.

It is the mission of the rooter to win games for his college. The team itself also has a small part in the job, but the big work is done by the men with the steam-siren lungs. This is easily proven by the fact that after a great football game, only a few players are disabled, while upwards of 11,000 rooters may be unable to talk for a week.

The rooter is quite different from the baseball fan. The fan goes to baseball games because he enjoys them and yells because he feels like it. But the rooter leaves a cozy room, and goes to a football game in zero weather, because it is his duty to help the team. He stands two hours, freezes an equal number of feet, and unravels his throat from the sternum to epiglottis, because if he were to stop yelling at a critical point and go home to warm up, the fullback would falter, the line would dissolve, the team would lose, and life would become a ghastly nuisance.

The rooter does not depend on individual effort, however, to win his games. He is a beautiful example of the benefits of combination. No rooter would think of working without a cheer-leader or yell-master. The yell-master is the mahout of the college yell. He is a lithe young man with a number 37 mouth, and revolving arms and legs. With a small cane decorated with a pennant, he stands in front of a thousand open mouths and braids up the sounds which issue into an harmonious whole which he directs at the enemy from the front or the rear, as occasion may demand. He controls his yell, as if he was running it through a nozzle. He shuts it off, draws it out, feeds it up with college songs, changes records, pulls out a new patent ear-buster when the team falters, and finally at a critical point yanks his machine to its feet, pulls out every stop, revolves his arms and legs until he is only a light blue haze and turns on pandemonium. A good yell-master will frequently blow his team forty yards down the field by hurling a 1,000 lung power yell at it just when it is needed. Big colleges win in football, not because the arms and legs which attend them are of any exclusive patent, but because in football Providence is on the side of the college with the most lungs.

Rooting is the most useful feature of football. While the game itself may develop a few hundred pairs of arms and legs, rooting is developing the lung capacity of 50,000 young people. One may become a good rooter by practicing at home. Go out every evening and spend a few minutes talking with a friend in the next county. Continue until he asks you if you think he is deaf. Then go joyously to college and enroll. The team needs you.

Protective Colors In War

WITHIN the memory of men not yet old the military uniform was a brilliant bit of apparel, visualizing in color and ornamentation the glory that was the traditional characteristic of the soldier's life. The more spectacular its appeal to the eye the more it was considered suitable to its purpose. This practice was generally continued in Europe for many years after our own Civil War, in which the blue of the North and the gray of the South perhaps marked the first conspicuous effort to obtain something like a neutrality of tone in the clothing of troops.

Yet this was probably influenced more by the question of relative serviceability of fabrics than the direct purpose of making the soldier an inconspicuous object to the enemy. In later years much scientific study has been devoted to the problem of devising color schemes calculated to render the fighting men as nearly invisible as possible at a distance. The subject has been studied with particular interest during the present war, and many suggestions have been advanced. One of the most radical of these involves a complete revival of the plan of brilliant colors, but it would nullify the whole meaning of the word "uniform." The proponent would have the men garbed in different colors, one in red, the next in blue, the next in yellow and then one in bright green, and so on, the contention being that at a short distance these vividly contrasting hues would neutralize one another and achieve the ideal in inconspicuous tone.

This scheme seems visionary, however, and it apparently would prove fatal to small detachments of troops, or to the individual soldier separated from his fellows. Thus far the khaki uniform seems to have come the nearest of all devices to achieving the desired purpose, and yet this has several defects to which attention has been directed by a London expert, who expresses the fear that the neglect of certain spectral principles has cost the lives of many soldiers.

Nothing can be better than the khaki coat, he says, for all-round concealment, as its color is a near imitation of the coat worn by so many wild birds and animals. But the matter of color is not the only point; it is also necessary to neutralize the shadows. Nature almost invariably does this, so it happens that nearly all land birds and animals are white or whitish on their under parts and darker on the back. The service cap is the weakest part of the khaki uniform. Seen in perspective the flat top of the cap forms a bright line and just beneath it is a broad black line formed by the shadow of the projecting crown. It is claimed that these two conspicuous horizontal lines are visible when the rest of the soldier may be merged into the color of the background, and it is suggested that to neutralize the effect the crown of the cap should be considerably darkened while the under surface should be snow white.

So we see that for his better protection in war man is compelled to go back to nature and learn the devices with which the wild birds have been equipped. Modern military science involves an artist's scientific study of the natural laws of color and chiaroscuro.—Providence, R. I., Daily Journal.

A Receiver's Restrictions

Q. Does a receiver have the right to act in states other than the one in which he was appointed?

A. As a general proposition, the rights of a receiver are confined to the jurisdiction in which he was appointed. Sometimes, however, his rights and powers are elsewhere recognized.

Thy Neighbor's Cook

Q. If one's servant has been wrongfully induced to quit the service by another person, couldn't such person be sued for damages? A. Yes.

That Private Road Question

Q. There is a private road across my land, some of my neighbors having the right to use it. I have been told that it is my duty to put up gates. Is this correct?

A. Whether this duty devolves upon you must depend upon the circumstances. Sometimes this is expressly provided for; in other cases the duty arises impliedly; and in still other instances there is no such duty at all.

Proving A Published Notice

Q. Where a legal notice is published in a newspaper, what method is adopted to prove such publication?

A. The statutes of the different states frequently provide the mode of proving publication. Often this is done by requiring the affidavit or certificate of the publisher or one of his authorized agents, showing that the statutory provisions have been duly observed.

His Own Customer

Q. Does a real estate broker have the right to purchase the property which he was employed to sell?

A. Ordinarily, he has no such right.

Conventional Interest

Q. Will you kindly enlighten me as to the meaning of the term "conventional interest"?

A. It is the rate of interest agreed upon between the parties to a contract. Sometimes there is an express agreement, and sometimes the amount is impliedly agreed upon.

Delivery Not Legally Necessary

G. When one person sells goods or personal articles to another, is he under a legal obligation to send them or take them to the purchaser?

A. No, as a general rule. He may of course so obligate himself by an agreement to that effect.

Private Use Of The Street

P. Does a city have the right to grant permission to use part of a street for the purpose of having access to certain floors of a building, such floors being below the street level?

A. It is usually held that a city may grant this permission, but that the permission may be revoked at pleasure.

Wife As Husband's Agent

Q. May a wife act as the agent of her husband in business transactions?

Step Lively

There is a deal of valuable life philosophy in the famous phrase of the Street Car Conductor—"Step Lively, Please!" He knows. He is "on the Job." Schedules must be met. The crowds must be kept moving. The minutes must be counted. And so it's—

Step Lively.

The life of each of us is but the snap of a finger after all. There could be no better motto for anyone than to Step Lively. Step Lively. Do your work so well to-day that the one who follows you to-morrow may be able to pick it up where you left off and because of your good work as creditably to pass it on to the one who follows him. Step Lively, though. Life lasts but a little while.

Step Lively.

When an Idea crops out from your Brain, Step Lively, put it to some use, or else to-morrow or a minute later some other Brain will have hatched the same Idea, mayhap. If a noble, unselfish impulse stirs you, Step Lively, enact it. Is your Eye set upon things higher up? Do you see the figures outside your Pay Envelope expanding? Step Lively. Step Lively. The whole world is fond of those who Step Lively, who do not "fall asleep at the switch" and who do not block the Crowds, but who move on, and ever—

Step Lively.

Current Poetry

The Heaving Chest

While in a jitney show I sit
And watch the fleeting drama flit,
With wonderment I am possessed
To note the leading lady's chest.

Whatever cards the fates may deal,
It may be woe, or may be weal,
With passionate, dramatic zest
The leading lady heaves her chest.

If it should threaten in the plot
That she must shoot, or else be shot,
With one hand clutching at her breast
The leading lady heaves her chest.

Or should the rent collector call
And grimly camp within the hall,
Milady shows that she's distressed
By labored heavings of the chest.

Or yet again, if it should chance
The hero falls and tears his pants,
Ere starting on a needle-quest
The lady halts and heaves her chest.

And when her troubles all are past,
When true love claims its own at last—
She snuggles to her lover's vest
And pelts him with a heaving chest.

L'ENVOI

With jits ungrudingly I part;
But, prince, I'm yearning for a rest
From constant heaving of the chest!

NEWS AND VIEWS

Conducted by

THE W. C. T. U.

Never has a National W. C. T. U. convention been enlivened by so many interesting "current history" numbers on the program. Telegrams received by leaders of the delegations and through the courtesy of the Associated Press representatives told of victories for prohibition and law enforcement and upon being read from the platform by the presiding officer called forth enthusiastic applause.

One day the chair announced word had just been received that the National Association of Railway Commissioners, then in session in San Francisco, had recommended that the States enact laws prohibiting the drinking of liquor on railway trains. The convention immediately ordered the sending of a telagram of congratulation to the association.

On another occasion there was read a telegram sent by the Chicago Herald in reply to an inquiry made by Miss Helen L. Hood, president of the Illinois W. C. T. U., which told of the beneficial results of the enforcement of the Sunday-closing order by Mayor Thompson. The message was as follows:

"Only six saloons open in Chicago yesterday. The 7,146 others locked and barred, their curtains raised signs removed and interiors in plain view. Twenty thousand saloon employes had day with families. Forty-seven arrested for drunkenness Saturday and sixteen Sunday; usual number of arrests for drunkenness for same two days, 243; no suicides, usual number two to three. Movie theaters filled to capacity. Church attendance considerably increased. Cafes practically deserted. Reported saloons on outskirts of city did increasing business. Hotels and clubs not centers of law violations. Hotel owners said exceedingly small number of guests stored liquors in rooms. Private lockers in clubs suffered little invasion. No arrests ordered during the day for keeping open. Violators' names taken and evidence secured to be presented to mayor. Police captains all over city reported quietest day in years. Almost no disorder. Sunday closing looks like big success. Large employers reported Monday that working forces displayed highly increased efficiency as compared with other Mondays. Chief of Police Healey predicts that there will be little or no difficulty in enforcing the law and that Sunday closing in Chicago has come to stay."

Another piece of live news came in the form of a telegram from Springfield, Ill., dated October 13, to the effect that the second attempt to have the Illinois woman suffrage law declared unconstitutional met with defeat when the State supreme court refused permission to Chicago attorneys to file a brief relating to the suffrage law in connection with another suit.

Upon learning from Mrs. Mary W. Alderson, president of the Montana W. C. T. U., that on that day Richland county, Montana, was to vote on the question of outlawing the saloons the convention suspended business to engage in prayer for a victory for the prohibition vote. Great was the rejoicing the next day when a telegram was received announcing that by a vote of two to one the liquor interests had been defeated, Richland being the first county in Montana to take such action—and the women voters had a large part in it.

John Sullivan has signed a contract for a five-year lecture tour, his theme to be total abstinence from the viewpoint of a pugilist. As quoted in a recent number of The Outlook, he says: "I am leaving the farm to say to the young men of the United States: 'Leave liquor alone. Liquor leads to bad companions. Bad companions lead to evil places. Evil places lead to disease and disease destroys the home and the nation.'"

At the National Safety Council meeting in Philadelphia recently, J. C. Rose, chief claim agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, insisted that no man who takes one drink of liquor should be licensed to drive a motor car.

The legal advisers of Yale University have advised the corporation that the liquor law, which went into effect November 1, prevents the clubs and societies at Yale from serving alcoholic liquors to their members; in other words, Yale will be put in the "dry" column.

Another "victory" for the Ohio personal liberty forces like the one of November 2 will prove the destruction of the liquor business in the Crusade State. The defeat of the so-called stability amendment, forbidding the submission of a constitutional amendment which has been defeated, twice at the polls until six years after its second defeat, and the greatly reduced majority against the State-wide prohibition amendment are indications that are prophetic of victory when the issue again comes before the people. In reply to a request for an explanation of the result of the election, Mrs. Florence D. Richard, president of the Ohio W. C. T. U., wired:

"The defeated brewers' Stability League amendment cut in two wet majority of a year ago. 84,000 wet majority last year; 40,000 this year. Seventy-four of the eighty-eight counties voted for prohibition. Cincinnati alone keeps State in wet column. City vote was very heavy, rural vote light. There is nothing discouraging in the result."

A former president of Ohio W. C. T. U., Mrs. Frances Ensign Fuller, writes: "We feel that the result of the November 2 election is only a delayed victory and will press on undaunted until Ohio is a prohibition State."

The explanation of Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, who has been doing valuable campaign work in the State, sizes up the situation: "If Ohio goes wet and stays wet, there is only one reason for it—there are too many suits of clothes walking the streets without men in them!"

SERVICE OF TRIBUTE TO THE CHURCH CHOIR

A noteworthy service will be held at the First Baptist church tomorrow evening, the program being planned by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, as a personal tribute to the choir, whose efficiency is fully recognized in this city and whose reputation extends beyond Plainfield. Fred Hummel, the well-known violinist, will be present, as will, also, Miss Helene M. Bennett, instructor of physical culture in the schools of Glen Ridge, this State, a young woman possessing a remarkably attractive personality and an equally fine Christian character.

Each of these musicians will render three selections. The service, while musical, will be decidedly devotional and a treat will be in store for those who are present. A cordial invitation is extended the public generally and those who have so often enjoyed the music at the First Baptist church can avail themselves of this opportunity to show by their presence their appreciation of the work of that choir.

The violin selections will be as follows: "Arioso," Handel; "Slumber Song," Weitzel; "Beceuse," Renard. The vocal numbers: "O Lord of Life," Salter; "O Lord Be Merciful," Bartlett; "Spirit of God," Neidlinger.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

When Manager Michael Shannon of the Plainfield Theatre, announced last week that he would give away a horse at his usual Friday night country store, there were many persons who thought he was straying from the truth. He convinced them, however, that he was a man of his word and, having established that fact, he now declares that his new vaudeville bill which began yesterday for the first half of the week, is the biggest and best that was ever brought to this city. The audiences yesterday afternoon and last night backed up his statement, declaring that it was a show worth double the money.

To begin with, the Broadway cabaret success, "Too Much Ginger," took the houses by storm. Twelve girls are in the act, and they do nothing but sing and dance, because they know how to do both. This offering has been appearing at Broadway's leading restaurants, and comes to Plainfield exactly as it is shown on the big White Light thoroughfare. This number was closely followed in popularity by "The Great Shangha Mysteries," a Chinese illusion act that is positively as mystifying as it is original. Five people are required to present it, and the act is backed up by a special costly scenic setting.

"Hotel Nearly," described as "an effervescent, exhilirating, appetizing vaudeville cocktail in one gulp," was presented by Ross and Stuart and proved a scream. The audiences not only liked the gulp, but eagerly called for more. Charlie Cole and Harry Wood proved a laughable combination of singing and talking sailors carrying their own scenic background, while Bruce and Barnes also produced roars of giggles by their comedy variety skit. The program was rounded by Ross and Troler presenting all the latest modern dances exhibiting unusual cleverness in the most difficult steps. This bill will be continued today and tomorrow with special photoplay features augmenting each program.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Hank Fritz Practices Being A Carpenter.

"TWO of the most interesting things on Uncle Ben's farm I have never told you a word about," daddy smiled at his children.

"Oh, tell us, daddy; please tell us!" they shouted.

"One is Bibbley Wah's dollhouse and the other is Anne's nephew, Hank Fritz. Hank had a kind, gentle disposition like Anne's and always did as he was told. On the farm, where everybody was good to him, he got on very well, but out in the world I much fear selfish people would have made his life miserable. Anyway, he did Uncle Ben's chores faithfully, and he was a great comfort to Anne, who loved him very dearly. He was all she had left of her very own. Now, about the dollhouse I could tell you a week of stories. Uncle Ben and Hank made it with their own hands, and it had an upstairs and a downstairs, a truly chimney and a real fireplace of nice little stones that Bobbie and Jim picked up. In their long trips over the huge farm every time they saw a pretty stone about as big as an orange they brought it home, and the whole front of the fireplace was of pretty glistening white quartz, pink feldspar, greenish mica, pudding stones and granite streaked yellow by iron."

"What's a pudding stone, daddy?" asked Jack.

"A white quartz with little purple stones mixed in it, just like raisins in a rice pudding," daddy explained. "So that every rainy day, when the children used the dollhouse most, they could have no end of fun remembering all the lovely hours they had roamed over the farm with Uncle Ben and Old Ned by the stones in the fireplace before which they played. There were two bedrooms upstairs big enough for the kiddies to walk around in and downstairs the big play room with the fireplace and a real kitchen with a stove where Anne taught them all sorts of lovely ways to cook against the days when the boys would go camping."

"Tell us how the dollhouse looked outside, daddy?" asked Evelyn.

"It looked just like a tiny real house, with a red brick chimney and little green blinds on the four windows, where the sun always shone inside. It was painted light yellow, with a white door that had a real lock and key.

"On its walls inside were lots of shelves for playthings and all the pictures the children loved best framed in wood cut in Uncle Ben's forest. One of the jobs Hank Fritz had all winter was to make picture frames for the dollhouse. Uncle Ben was trying to make a carpenter of him, you see. He was only seventeen, rather slow to learn, and he had the funniest, longest legs. But tomorrow night I will tell you what he did to make Bibbley Wah happy in the dollhouse," daddy promised.

Married Life on $80 a Month

BY MRS. BYRON LEONARD

Once More John Sutner Turns His Wife's Joy to Tears.

"I stopped to have you see if I looked all right. I am going to the office to see John and show off my new dress." Molly Sutner was pink with pleasure, the pleasure of being well dressed, and it had been an increasingly rare pleasure of late years.

"No one would ever guess the dress was not made for you," said Olive, "and that shall be our secret."

"I have thought of a way that I can pay you for the dress. I can embroider all your flannels. It is off of a piece with the rest of my education, that though I cannot do plain sewing decently I can embroider very well. If I do that I shall not feel quite so much like a pauper."

"Now stop talking like that; that old dress was not worth anything anyway. I'll let you embroider one skirt just to have some of your work on things I love, but——"

"I insist on doing all the flannels," persisted Molly, as she went down the walk.

"Come back this way and tell me what your husband said," called Olive as the figure in dark blue closed the gate.

"All right." And she walked briskly down the street, leading little Jack.

She had never been to the office before, and had to inquire her way to her husband's desk at the cashier's window.

"So this is the wife of the man whose wages are garnisheed for debt, is it?" was the mental comment of Tyler as he watched the stylish little figure out of sight. "That is something worth calling Jaynes' attention to." His lips compressed in a sinister smile.

Molly gave a comprehensive look in Julia Osgood's direction as she crossed the room to her husband's desk.

"John," said Molly in a low tone, "I thought I'd come in and show you my new dress." John looked up from his work with a start.

"Papa, is it time to go home?" said little Jack in a tone distinctly audible in the quiet room. All eyes turned toward John's desk.

"Hush, dear," whispered Molly, seeing a black frown gathering on her husband's face.

"You do well to come down here to advertise your extravagance. It will be a nice recommend to Jaynes. He believes it dishonest to spend money except on necessities when in debt, and he is watching us to see whether to keep us in his employ or not," he exclaimed in a fierce whisper.

"I haven't been extravagant," began Molly, winking back the tears of cruel disappointment. "Come, Jack, we'll go now," and she turned and left the office.

"Was that your wife?" asked Julia when she could make an errand to his part of the room.

"Yes."

"Why didn't you introduce me? She is a stylish little body," continued Julia admiringly.

"Do you happen to remember that I am in deep financial trouble? Well, do you see why?" He made an expressive gesture with his hands and shoulders.

AND THE WORST IS YET TO COME--

If values and prices ruled about alike in all stores at all times, there would not be any such thing as store competition. And, as finding desirable values would require no especial knowledge or insight, store advertising would be superfluous.

HOT TEA BREAKS A COLD—TRY THIS

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.—Adv.

Live News From All Branches of Winter Sports

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Jack Ricketts came out of Saturday's Holy Cross game with all the laurels and a black eye. Scoop Muir suggests that he split up the laurels and keep the black eye. It looks good.

Cramer, the 165 pound champion prize fighter of the navy, mingled pugilism with football in the Wyoming issue, fanning several of the Holy Cross players who happened to tread his toes. The Holy Cross eleven is unanimous in its opinion that as a football player Cramer is a worthy exponent of the pastime that put Fitzsimmons on the map.

Having failed to make good at baseball and football the local policemen have taken to sharpshooting. Is this an insult or a compliment to the marksman's frolic?

Bob Fitzsimmons remarked in a Newark court the other morning that had he handed a punch on a certain gentlemen's jaw that same gentleman would never have lived to tell the tale. We might add that had the New York State Boxing Commission consented to allow Ruby Robert to stop a few white hopes one time last winter Robert would have been keeping the grasshoppers company himself by this time.

Bob Fitz isn't dead as far as hitting the white lights are concerned, but he'd like to kill off his association with the sheriff down Dunellen way.

Johnny Kling is threatening to pull a Jimmy Callahan stunt and there are reports that he has signed with Cincinnati for next season. It's a good story for sport writers to fill dull winter periods with but it will fade with the first warm rays of spring. Even back in 1913 when Kling played his last game he was an old man, as age goes in baseball. His bald head was the subject of jests from bleacher gods and even managers wondered if he would last through the season. Johnny was a great catcher in his day, but he is past forty now, and after a two year lay off it would be almost impossible for him to get the old whip in shape. If he does heed the call of the diamond, Cincinnati will get first call on his services, but it is doubtful if he would be worth a season's salary. Kling is one of the few oldtimers who doesn't have to play baseball for a living, as his pool room in Kansas City is a paying proposition, and he ought to be able to get thrills enough for an old man out of managing a bush league team.

Sport writers and football experts are figuring that Scovil will be in condition to get into the game for Yale when the Bulldog meets Harvard in its next game, and they call it good luck. Legore was the Bulldog regular at fullback when the season opened. He was thrown out by the eligibility committee because of some food he permitted a hotel to give him during the baseball season last year, and the coaches had to call in Scovil to fill the gap. Injuries forced him to remain out of the Princeton game, and a youngster named Guersney volunteered for service. Guersney was not considered a star by the Yale coaches, but he could kick with accuracy and they let him play. He won the game. If Yale has hard luck this week and loses Scovil, she will be forced to put Guersney in at fullback again and will have a chance of beating Harvard. Some logic.

Holy Cross made almost one hundred dollars on its game of Saturday with the team from the Battleship Wyoming and yet some Plainfield people are opposed to Wilson's proposal for a larger navy.

As proof that Yale's victory over Princeton was not a fluke Tom Shelvin offers the fact that he bet $250 against $1,000 on the Bulldogs. How was he to know that the Tiger claws had been dulled and that Rush's men would make seven fumbles? If Yale really wants recognition in eastern football let her do the same to Harvard. There will be a test of her new found fighting spirit and strength.

Yale man collapsed in the boat race with Columbia last Friday. He probably dreamed the result of Saturday's football game.

Plainfield High School's defeat at the expense of Phillipsburg Saturday afternoon, while it did not come as a genuine surprise, certainly put a big crimp in the hopes of the players. Despite the fact that Phillipsburg had cleaned up on about everything it fell across prior to coming here Plainfielders were keyed up for a decision and a victory for the red and blue would have gone a long way toward instilling the localites with a little encouragement for that Rahway tilt.

A Plainfield hunter admits shooting a rabbit weighing ten pounds and measuring three feet from tip to tail. It's a good thing he admits culpability, for there are some few among us who believe that a bunny that size shouldn't be wandering around loose anyway.

"WILLIE" HOPPE ASTOUNDS "FANS"

Defeats Yamada in First Leg of Match by Score of 500 to 168 in Fine Style.

Playing billiards so consistently perfect it seemed to the spectators as if an automaton were wielding the cue instead of a mere human, "Willie" Hoppe, champion, defeated Koji Yamada, the Japanese expert, 500 to 168 in the first match of the 18.2 balkline handicap tournament started last night at the New York Theatre Building. Yamada actually made 43 points during the six innings he strode to the table, his handicap being 125, while Hoppe played from scratch.

In the first two innings Hoppe, with a marvellous display of finished billiards, collected 410 points, getting 132 in the first inning and 278 in the second. In the collection of these two runs Hoppe displayed a skill so marvelously perfect the crowd applauded at first and then merely smiled, as if the perfection of Hoppe was beyond them.

One man said that the fascination of billiards was because the shots looked so simple with Hoppe playing them. But his neighbor objected, saying that it was exasperation and not fascination in the case of Hoppe's opponents. Hoppe's execution was so superlative it seemed the ivory spheres were connected with an elastic band which expanded and contracted at the will of the champion. He never moved the second object ball more than the distance required, and his command of the first object ball and the cue ball was such that after each shot the three were in perfect accord with the player's will.

K. C. BOWLERS ARE LED BY PATERSON

Plainfield Five is Way Down at End of First Week of League.

Although only a week old, the Knights of Columbus State Bowling tournament has already proved to be a very interesting battle for first place honors, the top rung of the league standing now being held by Paterson with three victories and no defeats. A triple tie is seen in the race for second place, Jersey City, Star of Bethlehem and Bayonne being the quintets thus placed, each of them standing two victories and one defeat.

Individual honors that have been captured for the week have been captured by Cribben, of the Star of Bethlehem Council, who has hit for an average of 214 and is also high individual man with a top mark of 255, made in the contest with Bayley Council, on the Elizabeth alleys. Flanagan, of Jersey City Council, is also hitting the pins hard, as is also most of the rest of the men in the tournament.

Tonight—Reds vs. Blues.

GET 621 NEW MEMBERS

There wasn't a chance for Judge Runyon's division after the first two teams had been called by Chairman Gavett. Judge Runyon's teams turned in a total of 96, which was a new record for the campaign until Chairman Gavett's teams reported. They won by more than 100 votes, turning in 198 new members for the two days.

In his graceful acceptance of defeat Judge Runyon led three cheers for Mr. Gavett and his team captains and members. He then paid a sincere compliment to the efficiency of J. A. MacArt, who is in charge of the campaign. He said Mr. MacArt had suggested the challenge to him, leading him to believe that it would be a "cinch." He said that he now knew Mr. MacArt better, and that he was convinced the art in his name was but an abbreviation for artful. Judge Runyon said he was in the position of the man who walked into a strange store and announced that he could whip any man in the house. After no one accepted the challenge, he declared he could whip any man in the State, then, gaining confidence, he made it any man in the country whereupon an insignificant little individual who had been standing near him during the entire performance promptly knocked him down. As the braggart got to his feet, he said, "I tried to take in too much territory."

Returns from the first two divisions occupied most of the interest last night because of the added rivalry caused by Judge Runyon's challenge. They reported as follows:

DIVISION 1.

Packard	10
Buick	12
Studebaker	10
Mercer	5
Overland	22
Saurer	37
	96

DIVISION 2.

Hudson	23
Velie	24
Abbott	56
Stutz	21
Winton	37
Lozier	37

The division pennant was easily won by Chairman Gavett's division. Three teams were tied for the second team pennant. Saurer, Winton and Lozier each turned in 37 new members for the day's work. As many of those of the Winton and Lozier teams were blocks of boys' membership given by one person Captains Probasco and Blair agreed that the pennant should go to the Saurer team because the 37 of that body represented the greatest amount of individual work. Each membership was a senior one, and each one meant an individual effort on the part of a team member. To the Saurer team also goes the honor of leading tomorrow night's parade. The Abbott team will come second.

Reports from teams in division 3 and 4 follow.

DIVISION 3.

One of the most pleasing features of the campaign to all who are interested in the work of the Young Men's Christian Association is the number of boys' memberships that are being turned in. In his address at the initial dinner Secretary Estes said that a boy's merbershhip was the "sweetest" of all, because it meant a chance to come into the life of some future citizens when the Christian influence of the association would be most beneficial.

Each night, and almost with each team report, there is a wonderful tribute paid to the influence of the association for good. Last night three different team captains told of meeting men who admitted that they owed everything good in their lives to an early association with Y. M. C. A. work. One of them came to New York from Canada when but eighteen years of age. He is now one of the leading publishers of New York city. He was directed to the Y. M. C. A. by a woman he met on the train, and he went there immediately. The secretary secured him a position, loaned him books, and advised him through his early fight in the big city for success. When approached by Captain Rittenhouse this man gladly gave a check for 15 boys' memberships to be given to deserving youths. Two similar experiences were related during the evening, and the recital of each left every man in the house glad that he had a part in the work, no matter how small.

A boy's membership brings but $5 to the association, but all of the officials rejoice more over one of this kind than they do over two from men of middle age, because they want to reach young men at a time when they are susceptible to influences for good.

The Rev. William T. Boult delivered a stirring address following the dinner. He said that while all men admired and respected a master of art or of words, it was the master of men who was really king, and that every man was measured by his influence over men. Dr. Boult encouraged the workers to a greater spirit of "I can," assuring them that they could accomplish wonders if they only went at their work with a determination to do it. He was given three cheers when he had finished.

ART IN HIS NAME STANDS FOR ARTFUL

Y. M. C. A. Campaign Manager Proves His Right to Leadership.

Some of those participating in the membership campaign of the Young Men's Christian Association wondered for the first few days why it was necessary to bring an outsider here to supervise the contest, but they wonder not longer. The question, "Who is Mac Art?" was answered at the dinner of Monday evening and the answer leaves no room for doubt.

A man who can turn in more than 100 new members in a strange city by simply whispering to an acquaintance of a few days for two minutes is a campaign manager of ability, agree the canvassers, and this is what Mr. Mac Art did. Ask Assemblyman William N. Runyon.

At Saturday night's dinner Mr. Mac Art whispered in the ear of Judge Runyon that it would be an incentive to greater effort on the part of workers in the two divisions if he, as chairman of division 1, would challenge Chairman Gavett, of division 2, to a contest on the results reported Monday night. Judge Runyon issued the challenge, which was promptly accepted, and the two divisions went to work with a determination to win out. The result is well known, and that two minutes conversation of Chairman Mac Art resulted in the addition of 100 members for the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. who might otherwise have been missed. At least they would hardly have been reported last night. Judge Runyon now says that the Art in his name stands for Artful.

The incident related is but one of the innumerable things that Mr. Mac Art has done to promote and preserve interest in the campaign, and without interest on the part of the workers it would be an ignoble failure. He first demonstrated his mastery of such work through the inside organization, such as prospect lists, cards and record envelopes, and since the work really started he has been at the right hand of every man engaged in the canvass through day and night.

"While all Plainfield should be proud of the result, because all had a part in it, and I do not wish to detract one bit from the loyal and efficient work of Chairman Albin, Secretary Estes or any man who has given his time and effort to the canvass, I am afraid that we could never have done it without Mac Art," said one of the Y. M. C. A. leaders last night, and most of those who have watched the contest closely agree with him.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

A trio of the best known personages who ever have appeared in photo-dramas were seen in the Metro production of "Pennington's Choice," at the U. S. Astor Theatre yesterday. They were Francis X. Bushman, Metro's handsome leading man; James J. Jeffries, former champion pugilist of the world, and charming Miss Beverly Bayne. The most exciting episode in this extraordinary film is a fight between Bushman, the hero, and Jeffries, the villain. They tustle with almost superhuman strength for a long time, and Bushman is finally victorious. The big pugilist, who was sent into retirement by a punch from Jack Johnson, makes a very good movie actor. "Pennington's Choice" is an excellent example of the progress being made by the Metro Company, which now is considered one of the world's leading picture making concerns. Tomorrow Violet Heming, now appearing in "Under Fire," at the Hudson Theatre, New York, will be seen in "The Running Fight," a nerve stirring Paramount production.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

"Carmen" more than lived up to its reputation when presented at Proctor's last night and from all indications the theatre will not be large enough to accommodate the crowds who will desire to see this remarkable photo-play feature.

The vaudeville for the first half of the week is exceptionally good and includes Tuite's Collegians, a rollicking farce-comedy, presented by six versatile comedians; Mazette, a wonder violinist, who sings and dances, and the Australian LeBrunns, a decided novelty. Tomorrow night will be the big "Bazaar Night," which takes place every Wednesday, and in addition to the excellent gifts to be presented to the patrons the management announces the introduction of some comedy stunts.

The program for the last half of the week has been selected for its variety and excellence and the features will include Charlie Chaplin, the screen's favorite comedian, in his latest "A Night in the Show," and the splendid three reel Pathe feature entitled "Perils of Temptation." The vaudeville program will include the Hadji Nassar Arabs. The toy matinee will take place as usual Saturday. The kiddies look forward to this new innovation for the reason that in addition to the special gifts presented from the stage, each of the kiddies gets a present upon leaving the theatre.

WORLD'S CHAMPION WILL PERFORM HERE

J. L. Malone, Billiard Expert, in Exhibition Match at Elks' Club Tomorrow Night.

Plainfield Elks and their friends will be given an opportunity tomorrow night to witness one of the greatest demonstrations of the pocket billiard game ever given in this vicinity, a match having been arranged to be played in the Watchung avenue clubhouse between J. L. Malone, former pocket billiard champion of the world, and a well known local amateur. Mr. Malone has been engaged in overhauling the tables in the Elks' home during the past week and has given nightly exhibitions of the scientific points of the table pastime. Those who are familiar with the work of the Plainfielder who will oppose him claim that the localite is capable of giving a good account of himself and the match should be productive of some keen competition as well as intricate shots.

During his career as a billiard player Mr. Malone has performed in sixteen countries and has established an international reputation for himself as a demonstrator of fancy and instructive shots. He held the pocket billiard title of the world for many years until defeated by a challenger, Alfred DeOro.

Those who have seen him perform at the Plainfield Elks' club hall him as a marvel with the cue. Many of the shots he has executed for the benefit of admiring watchers have been little short of miraculous and he has exhibited an ability to do almost anything with a cue ball. Many of his favorite shots were originated by himself and some have never been duplicated by other billiard experts.

J. D. MOORE SUCCUMBS TO STROKE OF PARALYSIS

Through communications received in this city yesterday it became known that J. D. Moore, formerly of this city, died at his late home, 738 Monroe avenue, Scranton, Pa., Monday, November 8, following a stroke of paralysis which he suffered on Saturday night while attending a dinner party. The funeral service was held at the late home last Thursday. Mr. Moore is survived by his widow, and J. C. Moore, of Watchung avenue, this city, is a brother.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore were residents of this city for many years, residing at 910 Putnam avenue until their removal to Virginia nearly four years ago. A year later they removed to Scranton, Pa. Until his retirement from business four years ago, Mr. Moore was engaged in the banking profession in New York city. His death comes as a shock to his hosts of friends in this city.

Rev. Henry J. Watterson, of Westfield, Officiates at Home Ceremony.

Westfield, Nov. 16.—Miss Grace Isbelle Grover, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Grover, of 428 St. Mark's avenue, this place, and Lewis G. Callahan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius H. Callahan, of Pacific street, Brooklyn, were married at 8 o'clock last night at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. Henry J. Watterson, pastor of Holy Trinity Catholic church, Westfield, performed the ceremony in the presence of about one hudred guests from this place, Brooklyn and New York.

The bride was gowned in white chiffon over white satin, trimmed with duchess and rose point lace. She carried a bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by three matrons of honor, Mrs. Martin J. Green, Mrs. Bartholdi Sheilas and Mrs. Arthur B. Maillefert, all of Brooklyn, the last named being a sister of the bride. They were gowned in yellow satin, trimmed with gold lace and carried yellow chrysanthemums.

The best man was John S. Walsh of Brooklyn, and the ushers were Charles S. Callahan, brother of the bridegroom, and William S. Grover, brother of the bride. The home was attractively decorated for the affair, yellow being the prevailing color.

Following the ceremony there was a reception, during which congratulations were offered and supper was served. Later in the evening the couple left on a trip. They will reside in Flatbush upon their return. The bridegroom is connected with a manufacturing concern in Brooklyn.

The bride, during her residence in Westfield, has been prominent in the younger society set. She is a graduate of Erasmus Hall, Brooklyn where she and her parents reside before removing here. She was the recipient of a large collection of gifts

RUNYON STILL IN RACE FOR SPEAKER

Will Fight Against Odds Until Victorious or Defeated.

STILL HAS FAIR CHANCE

If Leaders Keep Hands Off Alliance Between Dalrymple and Pilgrim Can Be Broken—Caucus of Assemblymen at Trenton Tuesday.

Assemblyman William N. Runyon, of Plainfield, is still a candidate for speaker of the next New Jersey State Assembly. It has been reported that Judge Runyon was out of the race because of the unholy alliance made in the interest of the candidacy of Assemblyman Pilgrim, of Essex.

With characteristic courage, Judge Runyon refuses to quit until he is beaten. He does not even admit that he has lost, but is just getting ready to put up a hard fight for the honor.

A caucus of Republicans for the purpose of agreeing upon leaders in the House will be held in Trenton within a short time, probably next Tuesday. It will be called to order by Assemblyman Conrad, of Ocean county, who is dean of the Republican members of that body. This caucus is to determine the will of the majority of party members as to candidates for speaker, majority leader, clerk and other positions attendant upon the coming session.

It is in this caucus that Judge Runyon must make his fight. Through a trade with Alfred W. Dalrymple, Assemblyman Pilgrim has gained what appears to be a majority of Republican votes for speaker. The agreement is to put Mr. Pilgrim in the chair and elect Assemblyman Cates, of Camden, floor leader for the Republicans.

Assemblyman William N. Pierson, of Union, attended a gathering of politicians at the State House yesterday, in which the aspirants aired their ambitions and paraded their wares. He went as the representative of Judge Runyon, who is too busy trying to secure new members for the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. to give his personal attention to his candidacy just now. Mr Pierson carried the announcement that Judge Runyon was still in the fight, and would be in it until the dead and wounded had been counted and that he would either be found victorious or among the dead.

The preliminary gathering was but a caucus of the Stokes faction of the Republican party. Alfred N. Dalrymple, ex-Governor Murphy, and Baird lieutenants from South Jersey were not present and participating.

The situation as to the candidates for State treasurer was unchanged. State Chairman Bugbee was the only active candidate for the treasurership at the State House and continued his canvass for the position. The absence of the anti-Stokes men was regarded as significant, in that they must be planning a new line of attack to spring next Tuesday. The situation seems to be that if the big leaders keep their hands off Runyon would be speaker and Bugbee treasurer.

MUNICIPAL FRANCHISE TAX SHOWS INCREASE

The State Board of Taxes and Assessment have levied assessments under the municipal franchise act. Based on gross earnings the assessment this year amounts to $1,505,-836.96, or $40,192.73 more than the tax levied in 1914.

The amount to be paid locally is as follows: Union county, $101,-035.65; Somerset, $10,800.16; Middlesex, $50,394.67.

While this tax is levied by the State Board it is collected by local tax officials.

HUMAN ENIGMA NOT SHAKEN BY GRILLING

Frank Nelson Maintains Stiff Upper Lip—is Sent to Jail Pending Investigation.

Because of his stubbornness in refusing to give a connected account of his family genealogy, Frank Nelson, the man who was arrested by Patrolman Martin Welsh, Sunday afternoon, with a three-year-old girl in his possession, will have to spend forty days in the county jail. Such was the sentence dealt out by City Judge DeMeza in court this morning in order that the police department might have sufficient time to investigate the circumstances of the case.

Since being taken into custody Nelson has manifested little concern and when arraigned for the third time this morning he learned for the first time that he was in Plainfield. Despite the child's declaration that "mama and popper always fight," Nelson claims that his wife is dead and that he has cared for the little girl since she was one year old. Captain John J. Flynn, of the local department, has subjected Nelson to severe grillings, but he refuses to divulge anything that would be material to the police in establishing his identity.

He has claimed residence in numerous places but could not give Judge DeMeza the names of persons living at any one of the towns he says he has lived in. Suspicion that he may possibly be a kidnapper seems to be well founded and the local authorities are determined to give the case careful attention. The child is in the Children's Home and under the care of a physician.

JERUSALEM LODGE NEARS CENTURY MARK

Local Masonic Body Appropriately Observes 98th Anniversary.

Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., was ninety-eight years old on November 11 and the anniversary was duly observed at the regular communication of the lodge in the Babcock Building last night. There was no specially arranged program but the event received due mention by the officers.

It was in the fall of 1817 that Jerusalem was planned in the minds of a number of brethren and a petition was sent to the Grand Lodge of the Most Ancient and Honorable Society for Free and Accepted Masons for the State of New Jersey for a charter, which was granted on November 11, 1817, but it was not until the following month on St. John's night that the lodge was formally instituted, although considerable work had been accomplished before this time.

The first meetings were held in a building at the corner of Somerset and West Front streets, where the United Cigar Store building is now located.

Jerusalem Lodge, on January 1, 1915, had 282 members, but a number of names have been added since that time. The officers are: W. M., Fred I. Soper, Jr.; S. W., Samuel Hollingsworth; J. W., LeRoy De Camp; treasurer, Clarence Goss; secretary, Robert Kenny.

WILL AWARD PRIZE TO N. P. H. S. PUPIL

D. A. R. to Stimulate Interest in Historical Subjects Connected With Revolution.

Continental Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, met at the home of Mrs. Henry A. Fiske, on West Seventh street, yesterday afternoon, when the executive board received and accepted two new members. Reports submitted during the meeting showed the membership and general activity of the club to be steadily increasing and the meetings becoming more interesting and instructive.

At the business meeting the members decided to hold monthly meetings from September to June, on the fourth Tuesday of each month. A $5 prize was voted to the North Plainfield High School, for the best essay on some historical subject connected with the American Revolution, and if the Plainfield High School pupils care to compete for a similar prize, the chapter will donate a second award. A committee was named to prepare a Christmas box for the Piney people and a sum of money was contributed for the purchase of necessaries.

Following the business routine, Mrs. J. Philip Bird read an interesting paper on the following subject, "Plymouth, the Cornerstone of the United States." Mrs. Bird spends her summers in Plymouth and as her ancestors were among the first settlers of that historic town, she displayed many interesting relics and views. Musical selections were given during the session by Mrs. Fiske, Mrs. Evans, Mrs. A. I. Coddington and the Misses Fiske. Refreshments were served in conclusion.

DIVORCE RECOMMNDED FOR LOCAL PETITIONER

Testimony offered by witnesses in the suit of J. Leslie Dodge, of 137 Berckman street, this city, for an absolute decree of divorce from his wife, Mrs. Marcella Esther Dodge, of Bayonne, which was heard by former Chancellor William Magie, sitting as an advisory master in Elizabeth yesterday, prompted the latter to make the recommendation for a decree. Robert Newton Crane, counsel for Mr Dodge, conducted yesterday's hearing and will apply for the divorce immediately on behalf of his client.

Mrs. Dodge, who formerly resided with her mother-in-law in this city was represented at the hearing by James J. Quill. It was alleged that she deserted her husband in July, 1912, her principal reason for this action being her objection to Mr. Dodge's practice of indulging in tennis.

HENRY LIEFKE WEDS MRS. AMELIA SMITH

Ceremony is Quietly Performed Monday Evening at Astoria, L. I.

Announcements were received here today of the marriage of Henry Liefke, of West Front street, and Mrs. Amelia Smith, of Astoria, L. I. The ceremony was quietly performed Monday evening at the parsonage of the Presbyterian church, Astoria. The couple sailed yesterday on one of the Clyde Line steamers for Florida, where they will spend their honeymoon. Upon their return they will reside at the bridegroom's home on West Front street.

Mr. Liefke has been a prominent resident of this city for many years. Shortly after coming here he established a bakery on West Front street, where John Wirth is now located, and later engaged in the real estate business with Eugene M. Laing, under the firm name of Liefke & Laing. Several years ago he served one term in the Common Council and is now a member of the Board of Assessors, representing the Fourth ward.

The bride has a number of acquaintances in this city, where she has visited many times, and she was a close friend of Mr. Liefke's first wife, who died a few years ago.

BIGGEST DINNER OF ALL TO END CONTEST

Dutch Arms Band Will Play at Y. M. C. A. Tomorrow Night.

As a fitting celebration of the successful ending of the Y. M. C. A. campaign for new members tomorrow night's dinner will be the biggest and best of the series.

It is announced that the full Dutch Arms band will play during Thursday night's dinner and that a special program will be prepared. A speaker has not yet been named but Secretary Estes is trying to arrange for an orator who can do justice to the occasion. If the workers secure 1,000 new members by tomorrow night they will not be satisfied with an ordinary speech, and Mr. Estes is afraid that if he does not secure an artist, Judge Runyon, J. W. Gavett or somebody else will attempt to make a speech of their own.

Dr. E. S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue church, will be the speaker for tonight. The dinner will begin promptly at 7 p. m.

SAIL FOR FLORIDA.

Among the passengers sailing on the steamship Arapahoe, of the Clyde Line, today, for Jacksonville, Fla., are H. C. Compton, Miss Mary Compton, and Miss Drake and Miss Rae Mauger, of Compton avenue. Tickets were secured through the Estil Steamship Agency, of Park avenue.

855 ARE ADDED TO Y. M. C. A. ROLL

Membership Contest Already a Success and Workers Celebrate.

1,000 ARE PROMISED

Capt. Rice and Members of Flat Team Report 81 New Members For Yesterday—Abbott is Leading—Looks Like New Building as a Reward.

Already the campaign for new members of the Plainfield Young Men's Christian Association has been crowned with success, and it has two more days to run.

Twenty-three automobile loads of enthusiastic workers paraded the streets last night in celebration of the fact that they had secured the number originally set for the work. It was announced that 800 names would be added to the roll of the association through the six days' canvass, and at the dinner held last night the total was brought up to 855.

It is now promised that the total will be 1,000. This is the new limit set by the men themselves, who see before them the new association building, for which they have longed for years. While this building has not been held out as a reward for successful effort in the campaign it is generally believed by members and officials that it will be arranged for at once, if a thousand new members are secured.

HIGH SCHOOL SHOW READY FOR CURTAIN

P. H. S. Talent in Annual Minstrel Production in Local Hall Saturday Night.

Coaches in charge of the annual Plainfield High School minstrels are putting the finishing touches on the production to be presented in the school auditorium next Saturday night, and present prospects indicate that the performance will be of the usual high order with plenty of laughs and bright spots. Sixty voices are included in the chorus and the usual half-circle arrangement is again being used.

Aside from the black-face entertainment a number of excellent short and snappy sketches have been rehearsed, High School talent appearing exclusively in each. For the first time in several years it has been decided to use a High School boy as interlocutor, Richard Ritterbush holding this honor. The six end men will be Edward Crone, Gerald Linke, Monroe O'Donnell, John Hammann, Donald Hylan and Carlton Dunham. The chorus includes the following: Sidney Angleman, Tilford Baily, Horace Bunker, William Backer, Alva Brownlee, Elmer Blimm, James Brownlee, John Causbrook, Edward Crone, John Cose, Harold Condict, Richard Corbin, Peter Carpentar, Burnham Carter, Henry Dreier, Fred Desbrough, Carlton Dunham, Haywood Erickson, Eustace Eggie, George Enk, LeRoy Estes, John Ellis, August Franke, John Hammond, Hoffman Holmann, Donald Henwood, Irving Hand, Harold Hall, Donald Hyland, Gerald Linke, Charles Lawrence, Frank McGuire, Warren Mumford, Jesse Martin, Lawrence Marshal, Edward Meyers, Irving Manley, Joseph McGarry, Harold Neely, Parker Newell, Monroe O'Donnell, Richmond Ritterbush, Morris Roddy, Louis Rosenthal, LeRoy Stringham, Rufus Searles, George Smith, Harold Starkweather, Theodore Steidle, Frank Steidle, Alva Smith, Clifford Schenck, William Silbert, Howard Steele, Minot Trowbridge, Henry Thorn, Robert Veysey, George Vanderhoof, Charles Ward, Leon Weintrob, Charles Wright, Harold Wright, Louis Zeek and John Kriney.

BUTTER AND MILK THIEVES.

An official of the Borden Milk Company has reported to the local police that a number of bottles of milk and pounds of butter have been stolen from porches served by this concern recently. Inasmuch as the deliveries are made between 4 and 4:30 in the morning, it is believed that the thieves are operating at this hour. FEICKERT AND RICE BUY OLD BUSINESS

Boice-Runyon Company Passes Into Hands of New Owners—Contemplate Changes.

Announcement was made today of the purchase of the long established business of the Boice-Runyon Company from Anna E. Boice by Edward F. Feickert and Charles D. Rice, the sale having been consummated yesterday. The company deals in coal, lumber and masons' supplies, and Mr. Rice has been affiliated with it during the last five years, acting in the capacity of general manager.

The Boice-Runyon Company business was founded in 1837 by David Boice and David Thickstun, who conducted it until 1850, when Mr. Boice assumed the sole ownership. It has taken a prominent and active part in the upbuilding of Plainfield as there are but few houses now standing in this city, excepting the very oldest, that were not built, either wholly or partially, with materials furnished by this concern. Mr. Boice later took in John D. Runyon as partner and in 1892 the business of A. D. Cook and Brothers was purchased. The addition of the latter company greatly enlarged its facilities for handling the rapidly increasing trade.

The Boice-Runyon Company yards, located on Park avenue, nearly opposite North avenue, are the most extensive in this vicinity, and it is generally conceded that the local concern enjoys one of the best locations for this particular line of work available along the Central Railroad tracks.

It has also been the company's policy to deal in and furnish only the best of commodities and this same rule will hold true under the new management. Plans are under way which when completed will greatly elaborate on the present business and the proposed changes will modernize the plant considerably.

MOTHER'S MARRIAGE SET ASIDE FOR GIRL

Arabella Barker Proves Right to Inherit $50,000 From Father's Estate.

Arabella Beatrice Barker, of Somerville, probably won a $50,000 share in the estate of the late Charles Barker, who left $500,000, through a decision handed down by Justice Joseph Aspinall, of Brooklyn, yesterday, when her mother's marriage with Alphonsus Murtnaugh, clerk in a Somerville hotel, was annulled.

Because of a doubt as to the legitimacy of the mother's marriage with Barker other heirs have left the girl out of the will, and they have been sustained by court actions. She will now make a fight for her portion of the estate of her step-father, and her attorneys agree that the road is clear.

In 1897 the mother of the Barker girl went through a mock marriage ceremony with Murtaugh. At that time she was on the stage and wanted to use the name of a husband to protect her from the many pitfalls in the way of an innocent girl. She did not know that the justice who performed the ceremony was legally authorized to do so, she says, and neither did Murtaugh, who aided her in having the mock marriage set aside. Justice Aspinall said that he was convinced that neither believed it a ceremony and that neither had ever looked upon the other as husband or wife.

Afterwards the mother married Barker. Since his death she had married a man named Dorgdoh, and her daughter has been living with her in California for several years.

GAS METER THIEVES ARE OPERATING HERE AGAIN

Since the loss of a bunch of keys by an employe last March the Public Service Gas Department has found that a number of meters have been tampered with and their contents stolen. In a report submitted to the police the gas company officials allege that the meters in the following houses are among those which have been looted: 302 Grove street, from which $6.99 was taken; 303 Leland avenue, and 258 Leland avenue, from which $3 was taken.

It is believed that the finder of the keys has put them to use and has visited a number of houses and collected the contents of meters. About a year ago the Plainfield police experienced considerable trouble with a gang of gas meter thieves, but several arrests put an end to the depredations for the time being and the robberies were curtailed.

SEWER CONTRACTORS WANT MORE TIME

Unable to Complete Installation of Collecting System by January 1.

In the absence of Mayor E. B. Latham, who is in Virginia Hot Spring, President Richard M. Ryan presided over the adjourned session of the Borough Council held last evening.

A petition was received from the borough sewer inspectors requesting an increase in pay from 22 cents an hour to 25 cents on account of the probable time which would be lost through bad weather. The petition was signed by Lewis Vossler, Jacob Fisher, Harry Dodwell, Clark Ramsey and G. Sumner Smith. A motion made by Councilman Williams that the increase be granted was adopted.

An application was received from Everett Gordon, a veteran of the Civil War, for a position as one of the borough sewer inspectors. Upon motion by Councilman Williams, Mr. Gordon was appointed inspector, and if his services are required he will be called upon by the borough engineer.

Three communications were received from George W. Fuller in connection with the sewer work. In one of these communications it was stated that H. K. Corbin & Company, the sewer contractors, would like an extension of the time given it to construct the borough's collecting sewerage system from January 1 to May 1 on account of labor trouble and other difficulties. The Fuller firm recommended that this extension be granted. The matter, together with the subject-matter of the other two communications, were referred to the sanitary sewer committee for a report at the next meeting.

By resolution the borough clerk was ordered to certify to the commissioners appointed to assess benefits and damages against the Madison avenue storm sewer, that the total cost of the sewer was $5,479.63. This total is made up as follows: Contract price, $4,911.26; inspectors, $109.70; engineering, $302.33; advertising, $37.93; interest, $88.41; commissioners' fees, $30.

In connection with the complaint of the Board of Health relative to the drains which empty into Bonegat brook, Mr. Castner moved that the matter be referred back to the Health Board with the request that its inspector make another inspection to ascertain the condition of the drains. Mr. Castner called the attention of the Council to fences which have been erected in and across brooks and a motion was made and carried that the property-holders who have erected fences that interfere with the free flow of the water of a brook, be notified to remove the same.

DUNELLEN RESIDENTS TO PETITION FOR FREE DELIVERY

Dunellen has nigh hopes of free mail delivery within the near future. Through the activity of Frederick E. Chamberlain, of Bayonne, the son of Mrs. M. P. Chamberlain, of Dunellen, the residents of the latter city have been advised what methods must be taken to secure recognition from the government. The postoffice department will establish the free delivery system when residents petition for it, stating that they have sidewalks, crosswalks, street lights, signs, house numbers and other civic improvements. Steps to fulfill the requirements of the government will be taken at once.

LOCAL BUILDINGS MUST BE PROPERLY NUMBERED

In accordance with the legal notice published in the local papers early in October, Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett is planning to send letters of warning to all property owners who have neglected to properly number their houses, stores, etc., and unless the matter is attended to promptly proceedings will be taken to enforce compliance with the requirements of the ordinance regulating the same. The notices will include the proper number of each place and a copy of the paragraph in the city laws regulating the numbering.

This matter was taken up by Mayor Leighton Chikins in October, it being found that many property owners had become negligent in supplying their buildings with the proper numerals. There is a penalty of $5 prescribed for each violation and this will be invoked on all offenders.

HONOR VENERABLE OFFICIAL

and a reception in the church parlors and as a token of the esteem in which he is held L. V. F. Randolph, president of the board of trustees, presented him with a purse of $500 in gold, twenty-five double eagles.

The parlors were attractively decorated with palms, chrysanthemums and autumnal foliage, while vines were entwined around the pillars, producing a beautiful effect.

A short program of musical selections, vocal and violin solos, and addresses had been prepared. Among those who took part were Mrs. William A. Coddington, former soprano soloist of the church; William Holmes, baritone soloist of the church, and Mrs. Hollis Cubberly, violinist.

In a short but impressive address the Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, the pastor, paid a glowing tribute to Mr. Leonard, as a man, as a citizen, and as an official of the church. He said that the church was extremely fortunate in having for its clerk a man of such liberal education and training as Mr. Leonard and a man with the leisure to devote to church work. He said that through sunshine and storm under circumstances that were favorable or conditions of adversity, the clerk was ever found at his post of duty, faithfully laboring for the cause that was nearest his heart and uppermost in his thoughts. He never shirked a duty nor complained when the burden was heavy.

L. V. F. Randolph spoke of Mr. Leonard's great work as clerk, secretary to the trustees and several other minor offices which he filled in a manner so eminently satisfactory and said as a result of this devoted service he had received but little in a material way, but the consciousness of a noble work well done was a great satisfaction and Mr. Leonard also had the knowledge that he was beloved by every man, woman and child in the congregation and all had hearts full of gratitude toward him. Not with any thought of paying him for any part of his faithful services, but as a small token of the great appreciation on behalf of the congregation he took great pleasure in presenting to the revered clerk a purse of gold, which he handed to Mr. Leonard.

With faltering voice and emotion which nearly overcame his efforts Mr. Leonard said: "Well! I didn't expect this. I have a heart full of gratitude, a head that is level, but I have no tongue to speak." After a short period of hesitancy Mr. Leonard continued and said that he first came to Plainfield in 1839 in a snow squall, but his mother in after years informed him that for a long time after that it was more squally in the house than it ever was out of doors. When fifteen years of age he became converted and joined the church and since that time he has belonged to the church, body, soul and mind, and since he belonged to the church the church owned him and had the right to use him as it saw fit.

When he finished speaking he was presented with a handsome bouquet, the gift of one of the Bible classes of the Sunday-school.

A letter of congratulation from his lifelong friend and fellow church worker, Charles W. McCutcheon, was read.

After the audience had been favored by a number of violin solos by Mrs. Cubberly, vocal selections by Mrs. Coddington and Mr. Holmes, a social hour was enjoyed, during which refreshments were served.

855 ARE ADDED TO ROLL

that the teams are doing is shown in the report of the Fiat for last night. Capt. C. A. Rice explained that he had been a little ashamed of his amount in the first days of the contest but that he had overhauled it Monday night after the day's run was over and found the bearings worn. He put it on the track yesterday morning and found the engine running perfectly. His speed for the day was 81 new members and the Fiat team was presented with the pennant for the best day's work.

The most consistent runner in the race is still Plainfield's big truck, the Saurer. Capt. Zimmer reported a total of ten new members secured yesterday. It was his worst day of the contest, and his team has lost first place, but they promise to come back in the last two days.

Capt. Rittenhouse, of the Abbot team, who turned in 56 members Monday, won the second highest team pennant last night by reporting 20.

The division pennant went to Chairman McGee's division.

Team reports for the day follow: Fiat, 81; Abbott, 20; Overland 15; Lozier, 12; Saurer, 10; Velie, 10; Oldsmobile, 9; Marion, 8; Locomobile, 7; Stutz, 7; Studebaker, 6; Saxon, 6; Dodge, 4; Ford, 4; Winton, 4; Reneau, 3; Hupmobile, 3; Mercer, 3; Buick, 3; Maxwell, 2; Packard, 2; Oakland, 1; Reo, 0.

Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First Methodist church, made a short address before the team reports in which he congratulated the men first on the worthiness of the cause for which they were working, saying that any man should be honored when asked to become a member of the Y. M. C. A. He then complimented the energetic, loyal work in the campaign and congratulated them on having reached the 800 mark, although figures proving that this had been done had not been posted.

H. W. Newman, one of the charter members of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., and for almost fifty years a member of the association, who is also the oldest director in the city in point of service, talked for a few minutes in which he said that few of those who organized the first Y. M. C. A. in a shanty on Park avenue dreamed of the modern organization of today. He was given three cheers by the 200 workers when he had finished.

Chairman MacArt called the attention of canvassers to the fact that all rules concerning prospect cards were off. Any man can now solicit a membership from any individual he meets. It is believed that this will result in a list of memberships that might otherwise be missed.

For the second time during the campaign the 200 men and boys voiced their thanks to the young women who have so efficiently handled the dinner end of the campaign. Three cheers were given for "the ladies," and, as the cheer leader and his helpers had just finished an excellent dinner served by the recipients of the honor, they were given with feeling.

The dinner committee that has served during the six days is made up of Mrs. Charles Titsworth and Mrs. William D. Murray. Each night they have been aided by twenty or more young women who have served the twenty-four tables in a manner that would reflect credit on a Broadway establishment, although all are volunteers and many were strangers to the task.

After all reports were in the workers were loaded into waiting automobiles, and, headed by the Boy Scouts' drum and fife corps, they paraded the downtown streets. All were boys again just for the night, and the voices of dignified business men mingled with those of youths in happy celebration of the success of the campaign.

GIRLS BURNED BY POWDER EXPLOSION

Several Others Also Injured in Accident at Government Plant Near Dover.

Two girls were badly burned and several others were more or less injured in an explosion at the Government powder works at Picatinny near Dover, yesterday. The injured were employed in what is known as the "sacking house," where the powder is placed in heavy sacks or bags preparatory to being placed in the storage houses scattered about the arsenal grounds. Some of the sacks are also sewed on machines in this room.

A number of sacks filled with powder were piled, ready to be removed near one of the machines and it is thought that a broken machine needle caused a spark which ignited the powder. All that any of the girls employed in the room could tell was that a flame shot forth and a panic ensued.

The flames were quickly subdued and two of the injured girls were taken to hospitals. The others, who were injured, were removed to their homes. The damage to the building was slight.

While about 10,000 pounds of powder are made daily at the arsenal many thousands of tons of explosives are stored about the grounds, but the storage houses are so widely scattered that a mishap in one of the buildings does not affect any of the others. The government reservation is closely guarded by United States troops while marines patrol every part of the naval arsenal nearby.

POLITICAL NOTES.

State Treasurer Grosscup is said to be in process of being groomed for the position of State Commissioner of Banking and Insurance. Reports have it that President Wilson will find a place for George M. LaMonte, the present commissioner, in Washington and Governor Fielder will name Grosscup to fill the vacancy.

The latest name to be added to the list of would-be Governors is that of Mark M. Fagan, mayor of Jersey City. Fagan is undoubtedly a strong man in Hudson county, but he is not so well known outside. His friends insist, however, that he would be a strong candidate, and would poll many more votes than either Judge Robert Carey or Mayor Pierre Garven, of Bayonne, who have also been suggested by Hudson county Republicans. Mayor Fagan has had a remarkable record in Jersey City, where he has been the only Republican who could consistently win. He was elected mayor a number of times, and, after being beaten twice by H. Otto Wittpenn, "came back" and polled the highest vote in the vote for the city commissioners.

The G. O. P. in Hudson county continues in internal conflict. The breach between William P. Verdon, of Hoboken, and the followers of Samuel Dickinson is ever widening, with the result that at each election the Democrats romp away with larger and larger majorities. At a meeting Saturday resolutions were drawn up by Dickinson followers condemning the Verdon men, and these will be sent to the State Republican Committee.

As a side issue, but of considerable interest, nevertheless, the political factions in Hudson county are making their plans for the surrogate fight next fall. The present incumbent, John P. Egan, is something of a political power in the county, and is pronounced anti-Wittpenn man. To oppose him is suggested State Senator Charles M. Egan, a Wittpenn man and one of the popular Hudson county Democratic leaders. Both men are good vote-getters, but it is believed by some that Surrogate Egan is the better versed in the old game of politics.

Assemblyman David G. Conrad, of Ocean county, who has served the longest consecutive term in the Lower House of the State Legislature, will send out notices this week to the Republican Assemblymen, setting November 23 as the date for the party caucus. At that time it is expected that Charles C. Pilgrim, of Essex, and John B. Kates, of Camden, will be chosen speaker and majority leader respectively. There will also be talk of the choice for State treasurer. The Democrats will probably gather some time in the near future to decide upon minority leaders, but no date either for the Assembly or for the Senate has as yet been set. Senator Charles O'Connor Hennessey, of Bergen county, as dean of the Upper House, will probably send out the Senate notice, and Assemblyman James C. Agnew, of Hudson, will fix the date for the Assembly caucus. It is believed that Senator Ackerson, of Monmouth, will be the party leader in the Upper House, and Assemblyman George J. Brackner, of Hudson, in the Lower.

Preparing to wage an active fight for the selection of Wilson delegates to the Democratic National Convention next year, the Woodrow Wilson League, of Newark, has started a pruning movement whereby it is hoped all "deadwood" and "drones" may be dropped from the ranks. It is claimed that some of the members of the league have been playing double, and at a meeting held last night every worker was asked to state exactly where he stood.

"NOW IS THE TIME FOR MERCHANTS TO ADVERTISE"

Dayton, O., Nov. 17.—In the convention of salesmen of the National Cash Register Company, gathered here from all parts of this continent reports were made indicating the general improvement of business ev erywhere. Out of the eight hundred salesmen present, all but one said that his territory was moving forward a business basis.

John H. Patterson.

On the basis of these reports, John H. Patterson, president of the Cash Register Company, predicted that the approaching era of prosperity would probably exceed anything this country has ever known.

As a preface to his remarks, he reviewed the business depression of the previous two years. This, he said, had affected all lines, agriculture, mining, industry, commerce and finance.

"Now," he continued, "the boom is on. Agricultural interests are the first to feel it. The farmers have record-breaking crops, with a big demand. Confidence has been re-established. Various industries have picked up, one after another. Then the stores needed goods, and factory wheels began to move. Then commerce and transportation reflected the change. Finally, it was manifest in the financial world. We have plenty of money and the best banking system in the world today.

"We have three big federal organizations taking care of these various interests: First, the Interstate Commerce Commission; then came the Federal Trade Commission; and, finally, the Federal Reserve Board, with its chain of reserve banks. The value of these three boards or commissions to the country cannot be estimated.

"Through the aid of the reserve banks, the various banking institutions of the country began to loan money where people could not get it before. Now, with big crops and big demands, with little foreign competition, we are at the commencement of an era of prosperity such as the country has never seen before.

"All this great prosperity cannot come in a day. It will take time. But conditions everywhere are improving. The farmers are prosperous. The mills of Pittsburgh are busier than ever before. Railroad stocks are going up. It is only a question of a short time before the wave of prosperity will be upon us.

"Now is the time for storekeepers to advertise," added Mr. Patterson. He is backing up his opinion with his money. His company is spending more than $200,000 this month for advertising. In addition, it has spent $50,000 to have the 800 members of its selling force attend its school in Dayton for three days, where they were taught the new and up-to-date ideas for their business.

JIM SHAW, PITCHER FOR NATIONALS, FATALLY SHOT

Pittsburgh, Nov. 17.—James Shaw, pitcher of the Washington, American League, club, was probably fatally shot while hunting in a woods a few miles from here yesterday, when he accidentally discharged his shotgun while holding it within a foot of his face. The entire charge of shot struck him full on the right side of the neck, cut through and came out at the back, inflicting a gaping wound.

COUPLE SERENADED.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierson Bailey, who were married on Tuesday of last week and returned to the borough Saturday after a wedding trip, were given a serenade at their home on Duer street, Monday night. Twenty-five neighbors and other friends called unexpectedly and before entering the house announced their coming with all manner of noises somewhat similar to an old-fashioned charivari. The serenaders were afterwards invited into the house and passed several hours in a social manner. Music was a feature and refreshments were served in conclusion.

$500,000 FIRE IN PROVIDENCE.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 17.—About 200 automobiles were ruined and 1,000 bales of cotton destroyed in a fire early today, which threatened the business and factory district. The loss is estimated at $500,000.

ONCE LOCAL COUPLE HONORED IN ENGLAND

Mrs. H. Thornton and George H. Wood Given a Joint Birthday Party.

Mrs. H. Thornton, who was formerly Miss Elizabeth Howes, of West Third street, this city, and George H. Wood, who until recently was a resident of Dunellen, were given a joint birthday party at the former's home, 13 Powerful street, Barrow in Furness, England, on Saturday night, October 30. Forty-two neighbors and friends were included in the gathering and spent several hours in a most enjoyable manner. The house was very prettily decorated for the occasion with Canadian, British and American flags, while chrysanthemums were lavishly used as a background. The party closed with the singing of "My Country 'Tis of Thee" and "God Save the King," the combination being used as a testimonial to the American and British aspect of the occasion.

Mrs. Thornton is a sister to Mr. James Chamberlain and Edwin Howes, of the West End, and returned to her former home in England about two years ago. Mr. Wood, who has many friends in this city as well as Dunellen, has been in England for the past year. Both former Plainfielders have established themselves warmly with their old and new acquaintances in Barrow in Furness and the birthday party of October 30 was a demonstration of the good will which is held toward them.

Among those who attended the gathering were: Mr. and Mrs. H. Thornton, George Wood, Mr. and Mrs. H. Brierley, of Woolich, England; Walter Howes, of Clinton avenue, Plainfield, N. J.; H. Howes, of Manchester, England; T. Traverse, of London; Mr. and Mrs. Blackburn, of Oldham, England; Mr. and Mrs. J. Lever, of Hamilton, Ontario; Mr. and Mrs. R. Moss, Mr. and Mrs. H. Inman, Mr. and Mrs. J. Dawson, of Dundas, Ontario; Mr. and Mrs. W. Johnson and Miss Elsie Johnson, of Manchester, Eng.; Mr. and Mrs. Parker, of Birmingham, Eng.; Miss Winter, Charles Adams, of Toronto, Canada; Elmer Gay, Hamilton, Ont.; Lawrence Van Everett, of Hamilton, Ont.; H. Howes, of Halifax, Eng.; H. Cliffe, of Chester, Eng.; and G. Blackburn, of Barrow in Furness, England.

U. S. RECEIVES BIDS FOR TWO NEW BATTLESHIPS

Washington, Nov. 17.—Secretary Daniels received bids for the construction of battleships Nos. 43 and 44 at the Navy Department today. The lowest bid was that of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., of $7,229,506 for one ship to have a speed of 20½ knots per hour. Bids were also opened at the time for the armor of the two ships. The bidders were the Midvale Steel Co., the Carnegie Steel Co., the Bethlehem Steel Co. and the Pittsburgh Screw Bolt Co. Both the battleship bids and the armor bids were referred to the technical bureaus for examination.

STYLE AND HOW TO GET IT

If you like style, Rothberg's is the store for you.

We get things in this world in just that proportion that we desire them, be it love, money, knowledge, reputation or Style.

But don't confuse a wish with a desire—"a wish is the echo of a regret"—but to desire a thing is to go out in the world and get it.

If you really want style, Rothberg's is the store where you will get it. Whether you want a suit or overcoat or both is secondary to the fact that it should have the Rothberg label if you really want style. And that goes whether you pay $15 or $30, for STYLE is the common and uncommon attribute of every suit we sell regardless of the price.

Special services took place in the Cathedral this morning. Tonight fifty thousand men will march in honor of the Archbishop, forming two great parades that will start from opposite sides of the city. On the reviewing stand will be Cardinal Farley, of New York; Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, and other prelates, as a court of honor for Archbishop Prendergast.

SMALL HOUSES SCARCE.

It is stated by some of the real estate men that there is an increasing shortage in Plainfield of dwelling houses of the kind and size required by mechanics and workingmen. It is stated that the unusually large number of hands employed in the various industries is responsible for the shortage and many now employed here are boarding or living out of the city until they can rent homes of their own. One real estate man says that if there were fifty houses that could be rented at reasonable figures, all could be filled within a few days.

OUCH! LAME BACK, RUB LUMBAGO OR BACKACHE AWAY

Kidneys cause Backache? No! They have no nerves, therefore cannot cause pain. Listen! Your backache is caused by lumbago, sciatica or a strain, and the quickest relief is soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil." Rub it right on your painful back, and instantly the soreness, stiffness and lameness disappears. Don't stay crippled! Get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacobs Oil" from your druggist and limber up. A moment after it is applied you'll wonder what became of the backache or lumbago pain.

Rub old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" whenever you have sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism or sprains, as it is absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin.—Adv.

A SUBMARINE WEDDING.

Newport, R. I., Nov. 17.—A "submarine wedding" will take place in Newport today when Miss Adele Magruder, daughter of Capt. Thomas P. Magruder, of the Naval War College, and Lieut. Stuart C. Greig, U. S. N., are united. Lieut. Greig is attached to the submarine flotilla of the Atlantic fleet. Lieut. James C. Van de Carr, of submarine L-10, will be best man. Chaplain Mathew C. Gleason, of the Naval Training Station, will perform the ceremony. The wedding takes place at the home of the Magruders. The bride will be attended by Miss Barbara Bispham, of Philadelphia, and Miss Katherine G. Knight, daughter of Rear Admiral Austin M. Knight, president of the Naval War College.

IN SERVICE 141 YEARS.

Philadelphia, Nov. 17.—The First City Troop will celebrate tonight the 141st anniversary of its organization with an inspection at the armory and a banquet. The troop was organized on November 17, 1774, just as the thirteen colonies were approaching the brink of the Revolutionary War, and it has taken part with honor in every war in which the country has been engaged since that time. The flags carried by the former members in the Revolution and the War for the Union are carefully preserved.

MUNICIPAL LEAGUE MEETS.

Dayton, O., Nov. 17.—The National Municipal League, composed of representatives of various cities throughout the country, opens here today its annual convention. The city experts will be here for three days. William Dudley Foulke, of Richmond, Ind., is president of the league, and the membership is rapidly nearing 3,000. Many questions concerning city government, in all its branches, are on the program.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Says we can't look or feel right with the system full of poisons.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which if not eliminated every day become food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.—Adv.

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffling, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.—Adv.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The mid-week meeting of the W. C. T. U., scheduled for Thursday afternoon, will be omitted this week owing to the Interdenominational Missionary Prayer service to be held at the First Baptist church.

The next mid-week session will be held December 2, when a prayer service will be held prior to the meeting from 2:30 to 3:30.

A parlor meeting has been arranged for the evening of December 2 at the home of Miss Annie Boice, Park avenue, at which time Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson will give an account of her trip along the Pacific coast.

Members and friends of the W. C. T. U. are asked to remember the Christmas barrel to be sent this year to Captain Benn, for the sailors of New York harbor, and their families.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

The Plainfield Theatre's new bill for the first half of the week continued in popularity yesterday afternoon and last night and the capacity audiences are unanimous in their verdict that Manager Shannon is "delivering the goods." The jolly girls in the singing and dancing production, "Too Much Ginger," get a big hand throughout their entire offering, especially when they sprinkle perfume on the people in the orchestra chairs and the "Great Shanghai Mystery" keeps everybody in a mystified mood. Each of the other four numbers on the well-balanced bill have made a favorable impression at every performance.

An entire new show is scheduled for tomorrow, all the numbers being brought direct from New York theatres, where they have been meeting with great success. Besides the vaudeville tomorrow's program will include the fourth installment of the greatest comedy picture ever produced "Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford." Hundreds of local movie fans are following this film and they assert that nothing like it has ever been seen in Plainfield. Other comedy and dramatic photoplays are shown at each of the afternoon and night performances.

Manager Shannon announces another of his popular "Country Stores" for next Friday night and advises his patrons to watch these columns for the big feature awards which are now being planned.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

One of the most sensational films ever brought to Plainfield is the famous screen success, "Carmen," in which Theda Bara, the love-child of the devil, will appear for the last time tonight. In addition to "Carmen" there is a splendid array of vaudeville talent, all of which goes to make up a pleasing program at the popular playhouse. The first half of the week brings "the screen's greatest comedian, Charlie Chaplin, in "A Night in the Show," and in addition there will be a Pathe special production entitled "Perils of Temptation." One of the big headline acts from the Palace Theatre will also be featured in the program, introducing the famous troupe of Arabs, The Hadji Nassar Company. Proctor's Theatre is accommodating more people at the present time than have visited the cozy playhouse in many weeks. Next week will bring the greatest of all film spectacles for three days direct from the Liberty Theatre, New York City, after 700 successful performances in that theatre. It is "The Birth of a Nation," and there will be brought to Plainfield with this great spectacle a symphony orchestra of twenty-five musicians.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

The Mu Eta Society held its monthly meeting Monday evening at the home of Miss Edith Dalley on Mountain avenue. The business was dispensed with, during which time Miss Marion Blair was initiated into the society.

The rehearsals of the A. A. play which will be given Friday evening at the Park Club, had to be held the evening the past two days owing to teachers' institute.

Mr. Earley is planning to give a series of lectures to the physics class.

The junior class will receive their class rings when they return to school today.

The senior class, which won the inter-class championship for the past three years, will play a select five from the school sometime in the near future. The proceeds will be given to the Recreation Hall fund.

Manager John Dawe has received the basketball schedules, and will circulate them among the student body when school commences today.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The second ballot polled to decide the tie that existed for the presidency of the Alpha Literary Club resulted in Mr. Dickinson beating Mr. Borden by a narrow margin.

Mr. Schuster, the manual training teacher, has organized an elective class in woodturning and the first meeting will be next Tuesday.

The first debate of the Omega Literary Society will be held in the High School auditorium on Monday afternoon, when six members, three on the negative side and the same number on the affirmative, will discuss the subject, "Should Congress Increase the Army and Navy?" The Alpha Literary Society debate on November 28 will be on "National Prohibition."

MANY GUESTS ENJOY THANKSGIVING PARTY

A Thanksgiving party was enjoyed last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Perine, 732 Webster place. Piano selections were rendered by Miss Viola Kirch and William Soden while Miss Mattox entertained the gathering with comic recitations. Games were enjoyed until a late hour, when refreshments were served. The rooms were tastefully decorated for the event, chrysanthemums and autumnal foliage being used throughout.

Guests who were present from this city and Westfield included: Miss Viola Kirch, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Olmsted, Mr. Messner, William Soden, Mr. and Mrs. Messler, Mr. and Mrs. Muhlenbeck, Mr. and Mrs. Autken, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Perine, Mr. and Mrs. Parsell, Mrs. Beekman, Miss Kohler, Mrs. Wagner, Mrs. Spier, Miss Bertha Kirch, Miss Ethel Perine, Miss T. Mattox, Mrs. Newmiller, John Muhlenbeck, Edwin Perine, Mrs. Mina Ferguson, Mrs. Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Perine.

EXHIBITION OF PAINTED CHINA AND WATER COLORS

The exhibit of painted china, water colors and tapestries, executed by Miss Adelle C. Phelps and her pupils in this city, were the source of admiration by a large number of friends who called at the studio, 300 Babcock building, last evening, to view the initial opening of the presentation which will continue afternoons and evenings for one week. Included in the collection are vases, jardinieres, berry sets, lemonade sets, plates and bureau sets. Each piece has an original design, drawn by Miss Phelps, and in many cases by the pupil. The tapestry work is especially beautiful and shows a remarkable blending of colors in the figures illustrated.

Two years ago Miss Phelps spent nine months in the State of Oregon and many scenes of that section of the country are seen preserved in oil colors. Various views of the Columbia river, sketched at sunset, are decidedly handsome, while the paintings of Mt. Hood, sketched at a distance of fifty miles, reveals the green grass and the fir trees in the foreground and the peak of the snowcapped mountain in the rear rising up.

In speaking of her stay out west Miss Phelps was enthusiastic about the beauties of the sunsets of that country, saying that as late as nine o'clock at night the skies are illumined with a red light and golden glow.

Miss Phelps has a studio in Asbury Park, where she spends a large portion of her time, and many views of the ocean can be seen at the exhibit. The exhibit will be continued all this week, afternoons and evenings, and is free to the public.

A TIME FOR ACTION.

Now that the first moments of excitement and horror have passed and it is possible to sit in judgment on the loss of neutral lives attendant upon the sinking of the Italian liner Ancona with some degree of calmness and justice, there should be prompt action from the United States.

That seven or twenty-seven Americans were drowned when the ship was torpedoed makes little difference in an analysis of the case. Civilization's laws have been violated and humanity outraged and there is a guilty party. The crime can be fastened upon one man, and it must be fastened upon one of two, and his nation must be made to pay for his act of wanton cruelty.

Who is guilty of this wholesale murder? It is either the captain of the Austrian or German submarine, or the captain of the Italian liner. If the liner was warned and its commander sought to escape, thus endangering the lives of his passengers, he is the murderer of the women and children that were drowned. Should it be proven that the submarine did open fire on crew and passengers without warning and shell life boats as they were being loaded into the water, its commander is guilty of an act more barbarous than the sinking of the Lusitania or the Arabic, and Austria or Germany has sacrificed all claim to the respect of decent people. Conflicting stories are told by survivors. The captain and other officers of the passenger vessel are interested parties and therefore not competent as witnesses. President Wilson and his cabinet, as cilivilization's final court of appeal, are able to separate truth from untruth. They must do it. They have been lenient too long with those who commit crimes against the innocent in this war, and they are the one hope of the women and children of the world. It is well that they should ponder their decision, but it should be made promptly, and should be followed by action, not words, even though the peace of our country is endangered. A united country will support them.

CONGRATULATIONS.

While the Y. M. C. A. campaign has two more days to run, and a new limit has been set those in charge of the contest for new members, the men who have done the real work of canvassing, have already won the highest praise that can be given for their noble and efficient efforts. The total of new members secured up to last night at 7 o'clock was 855, or 55 more than was promised for the entire campaign. It will be a thousand. A large share of the credit should go to Chairmen MacArt and Albin, Secretary Estes and President Murray, but every team captain and every member did his part or the whole would never have been accomplished. It is also a wonderful tribute to the Christian spirit of Plainfield. A municipality that can depend on one man out of every twenty to give material asistance in a movement of this kind is made up of the right kind of people.

CONGRATULATIONS.

It is always a pleasure to record the progress of local institutions. The announcement made last night by the State Trust Company that they will build a modern banking and office building, on the site now occupied by the Daily Press, was naturally expected by every one who has watched the continued growth of this up-to-date banking institution. For their purposes there is no better corner in the city of Plainfield. The publishers of the Daily Press have long realized that the building which now stands on the site is not suitable for the publishing of a modern daily newspaper. The ground would not be enough to properly house a new building, had we bought the property when it was on the market a few months ago, and torn down the present structure. As a result we have been anticipating for many months moving into a building to be erected especially for our own use. In the mean time we feel sure that we reflect the sentiment of every business man in the city when we congratulate the State Trust Company upon this definite evidence of their continued success.

MAYOR CLARK RETIRES.

The greatest peace that can come to man is to close his eyes on a day that has seen his task well done, and we envy Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., of the borough of North Plainfield, in his happy retirement to private life. He carries with him the respect of all men and the love of many. He has held public trust and has not betrayed the people by any act as an official or a man. May he enjoy the happiness that he has earned.

No wonder the "Holy Jumpers" refused to accept a permit to hold street meetings in front of the residence of Mayor Calkins. They can only hope to influence the illiterate and weak-minded and nobody has ever made such a charge against the Mayor or any of his neighbors.

Roosevelt is sending letters to France urging peace in Europe while trying his derndest to force his own country into war. His efforts will be equally effective in both places.

Beggar arrested in Newark could speak four different languages. He's probably some poor idiot who went through college without participating in athletics.

Along about this time of the year, when Republicans are grooming favorite sons, a man wonders how a Democrat ever got a dollar, anyway.

There is nothing objectionable in "The Birth of a Nation" except that some people object to passing up a chance of getting free publicity.

A good many fellows have the key to success, but they don't stay sober long enough to locate the keyhole.

Like Uncle Tom, the roof has been sold from over our heads, but we are still holding the Fort.

STRICKLAND W. GILLILAN

The Prince Albert Coat

There is a garment of all garments worst—
Perhaps we're safe in calling it accursed.
Down south "jimswinger" is its slangy name,
But whatsoe'er 'tis called, it looks the same.
"A graveyard coat" the circus parlance has it,
But one all wise people shout "A bas it!"

"Prince Albert" is the common handle to it—
We wore one, once, but now we wouldn't do it
For any wages that a king could pay——
By heck, we wouldn't wear one, night or day!
Floorwalkers once this servile badge affected,
But to the rubbish heap they've been elected.

Prince Albert, graveyard coat, jimswinger, frock—
Whate'er we call you, we are here to knock
The faintest lingering memory of you.
May passing years your number make more few!
You are not "late lamented"—you're just "late"—
Discarded garment we so love to hate!

Preachers

Preachers are divided into two classes: Those we like and those we don't. Those we don't like are subdivided into two classes: Those who whine and talk cant, and those who try so hard to be "good fellows" that they disgust the very ones they are trying to impress.

Those who always wear conventional clerical garb and always talk like preachers make one nervous and tempt one to malicious mayhem.

But they are preferable to the one that feels the proper way for him to get a hold on the layman is to tell said layman questionable stories containing as much second-hand profanity as possible, smoke plenty of cigars, take a nip with considerable regularity, and otherwise give the lie to his pulpit professions.

The roughest rough-neck in the world will desert a minister who acts in that way.

We all expect a preacher to be a little better, a little cleaner, a little bit more redolent of recent and continuous contact with divine things, than we are ourselves.

Maybe we shouldn't expect it, but the thoughts and conduct of this human race are not governed by shouldn'ts.

The minister who thinks the way to be a good fellow is to tacitly ridicule his own teachings and those of the church, jars the latent reverence in breasts where he evidently doesn't think it exists.

The real preacher is one with a keen sense of humor, a fine, warm (not maudlin), manly, understanding sympathy with every real joy or sorrow of his fellow-men, but who always dignifiedly leads his companions to do and think the things that will heighten their own self-respect.

Going some, you say, to be and do these things? Sure. But a real preacher ought to be willing to exert himself a little.

He is a human representative of the finest conception we mortals can ever know.

Right important job, the preacher's!

Fasting Is Not Starvation

IT IS a difficult thing to convince the ordinary individual that there is no danger in a twenty-four hour fast occasionally. It is even difficult to make some doctors realize that fasting is not starvation. Indeed, we regret to note, some of the eminent advocates of fasting as a treatment for diabetes persist in speaking of "starving" the patient, when, of course, they don't mean any thing of the kind. When one fasts, one voluntarily omits to take food; when one starves, one dies from hunger or privation.

That fasting is not especially dangerous, even for individuals who are already emaciated and very weak from disease, is well attested by the remarkably happy results thus far obtained from the fast-cure in diabetes. Patients in the very advanced stage of the disease, weak, emaciated, perhaps developing coma and expected to die in the near future, have repeatedly undergone the fast, which is continued from two days to eight or sometimes ten days, until the blood is free from sugar. And instead of growing weaker these fortunates have improved under the fast.

Dr. F. M. Allen records some important observations concerning this new treatment as carried on in the Hospital of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, New York, in The American Journal of the Medical Sciences. One of his points is this: The diabetic, instead of being at his best when fat, is better when underweight; and he should rarely if ever undertake to regain lost weight by feeding on fatty foods. Excess of fats, it appears, induces acetonuria, the toxic acidosis which brings on coma in diabetes.

Progressive physicians everywhere are now applying the fast-cure with the most gratifying success. The disease diabetes may be said to have lost its terrors, for it may now be controlled in the great majority of cases, provided—and here is the crux of the problem—provided the patient places sufficient confidence in his medical adviser to do precisely what he directs.

Incidentally, we cannot forget this fast-cure for diabetes, which is now saving many human lives once deemed marked for speedy annihilation, was worked out entirely by animal experimentation before it was given to the medical profession.

THE AUTOMOBILE

THE automobile is a rubber-tired cash separator which is being used largely to keep prosperous American citizens from worrying over how to invest their money.

There are a great many varieties of cash separators, but the automobile is by far the best. It can go through an ordinarily flush citizen in a very few months and leave very little cash in the tailings. In fact, its work is approached in thoroughness only by the private yacht, the society bug and the private school for girls.

The automobile is driven by gasoline, assisted by water, oil, electricity, wind and gas, and sometimes horses and mules. Some drivers have also used brains with great success, but the supply is too limited to be generally adopted. If every automobile driver were equipped with a small set of brains, we would have no more accidents which occur while a car is being driven about 75 miles an hour over the speed limit. An auto consists of an engine with 175 parts, connected by a clutch with 95 parts to a gear box with 75 parts and then to a differential with 50 parts. When all of these parts are feeling well and are working together like the old guard Republicans in New York, the automobile is said to be in good running order. However, if any individual part of an automobile is feeling convalescent, and will not work at all, the man who wants to sell the machine to you second-hand will solemnly swear that the machine will run like a watch.

Automobiles come in all sizes, including the piker size, the family size, the bank director size, and the fool size. A small car with only 12 condensed horses in it can be bought for $350 and can be driven over the curb and into a tree as successfully as a big car which costs $5,000 and has tires as fat as elephant's legs.

Automobiles are now very carefully made and are entirely practicable, being used for hauling trunks, transporting passengers and getting rid of the idle rich. Automobiles are made which can run 100 miles an hour, but fortunately, others are made which can run two miles an hour and will stop when requested. Very few automobiles break down any more, but the number of owners who break up is steadily increasing. This is because the automobile is no longer a weird hobby, but a badge of prosperity, and a great many people are wearing the badge who can't afford to pay their dues.

An auto owner will go 200 miles and pay $35 in fines

Automobiles are more costly now, because they are more reliable, and also because hundreds of people are busy every day inventing new things to hang on them. Ten years ago an automobile would go ten miles and then stop a month, because of a fifty-cent break-down. But now an auto owner will go 200 miles, pay $35 in fines, wear out $50 worth of tires, eat $10 worth of food, knock $75 out of a $40 buggy and neglect $1,000 worth of business all in one day.

The number of automobiles made in this country next year will approach 200,000. This will not supply one-fourth of the people who want them, but after the people who can afford them have bought, there will be 100,000 left and they will all be sold.

Views Of The Press

Japanese Have No Sense Of Humor

JAPAN was the first foreign country where I saw moving-pictures shown. The rickshas, which carry one to the theatre, have real Japanese lanterns—they drift along in the darkness like glow-worms. At the theatre they will wait for you till the performance is over and speed you back on tires of American rubber.

In Yokohama one whole street is given up to moving-pictures—Theatre Street. Great banners hang clear across it, with the picturesque Japanese alphabet racing up and down them, advertising the respective performances.

On the floor the audience sit, with their feet squarely turned under them, absorbed in the shifting shadows. The sub-titles are in English; but so common is English coming to be in Japan that the meaning doesn't go over their heads. It is now being taught in the public schools, so that there is always some one to whisper the title's meaning.

American manufacturers have labored long and hard to find films that will amuse the Japanese, but their success has not been very marked. No white mind can fathom a Japanese's sense of humor. Our funniest films over there go flat. Charlie Chaplin bores them. But in the midst of a death scene in some dramatic film they will suddenly begin to rock with merriment. There is a fortune in it for any one who will locate the Japanese bump of humor and manufacture picture plays that will hit it.

The Japanese are now manufacturing their own films, but they are not of much interest to white people, as nothing ever happens in them. There is no action. Half a reel may be given up to drinking a cup of tea. But this may be exceedingly funny to the Japanese, for there has been more going on than shows on the surface. By the way they lift their cups, by the way they swing their fan, they are passing a message. Two Japanese can talk to each other with their fans, while the white man standing alongside understands nothing of what they are saying.—World Outlook.

Something For Nothing

Q. About six months ago I bought a washing-machine, but did not pay for it. The agent who called at my house said I could keep it on trial for thirty days. I did so and in fact have kept it ever since that time, although the machine is not satisfactory. The company has brought a suit against me, but as the machine doesn't do the work I had expected it to do, I do not feel that I should be compelled to pay. Do you think I could beat the suit?

A. It is extremely improbable. If you kept the machine and continued to use it, you can hardly be heard to complain of it this late in the day. You had an opportunity to rescind the contract, but you seem to have chosen not to do so.

The Car, The Team—A Crowd

Q. A teamster was driving a coal-wagon and stopped about thirty feet away from an intersecting street on which there is a street car line. He saw a car coming about 500 feet away, but started to cross the track. The car collided with the wagon and the man was injured. Could he recover damages, or was he so careless on his own part that damages would not be given him in the trial of a law suit?

A. It cannot be said, as a matter of law, that the teamster's act was negligent and that such act was the cause of his injury. If, as a matter of fact, his own negligence contributed to cause his injury and was really the producing or efficient cause, he cannot recover damages.

This Posthumous Agreement Holds

Q. An elderly man made a contract for the purchase of a piece of real estate, the property to be conveyed to him six months later. In the meantime, this man died. By his will he left all his property, as he was unmarried, to two brothers. Please tell me whether they would have an interest in the real estate which he contracted to buy—that is, would the will operate so as to include this real estate which he was to purchase and for which he had bargained?

A. If, as you say, the will purported to dispose of all his property, its effect would be to pass title to all property, or any interest therein, which he had at the time of his death. Hence the interest in the real estate which you mention would be embraced within the scope and operation of the will.

Executor's Duties

Q. After an executor has paid the debts of an estate, is it his duty then to pay the legacies specified in the will? A. Yes.

You Must Ask Mamma

Q. Would an agreement not to marry without the consent of the parents be considered an enforceable contract in law?

A. It has been held to be such.

The Unhatched Chicken

Q. Kindly inform me whether a public officer may lawfully assign his salary before it is due.

A. Such assignments are usually held to be illegal and void.

Stealing

Q. May a damage suit be brought for the wrongful attachment of one's goods? A. Yes.

Mr. Branson will be glad to answer all questions. If your question is of general interest it will be answered through these columns; if not, it will be answered personally if stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed. Address all letters to E. R. Branson, care of this newspaper.

Clinkers

No matter how much fuel is put into a fire-pot, or how much you poke or shake at it, if its heart is choked with Clinkers, you are bound to lose heat and waste your fuel unless you remove the Clinkers. It's the same with your Brain. Remove the Clinkers—and your Thought at once reaches its highest efficiency.

Clinkers in the Brain are useless and idle Thoughts.

And if the Clinker Thoughts are not removed as they appear, they soon begin their terrible work of choking out all worthy thought, and soon replace the machinery of a wonderful Brain, ready to respond instantly to big demands, with a mere store-house of rusty junk—Clinkers.

Start the work of each day with your Brain free from Clinkers.

The best way to handle Brain Clinkers is to keep your Mind healthy and active. Read the most inspiring books. Associate with the people whose Ideas are prolific and whose Characters stimulate strength and independence in you. Travel, if you can. Form the habit of looking for something helpful and beautiful in both Nature and People. Learn Something from everything. But remember to—Get out the Clinkers in your Brain just the minute that you discover that they are there.

Current Poetry

Continuous Movie Heroine

The loveliest of maidens sat beside a railroad track;
Two big, cold-blooded ruffians sneaked up behind her back
And with a gag about her mouth to stifle down her cries
They took a horsehide lariat and lashed her to the ties.
The Nine Sixteen came thundering up, and then appeared this text:
THIS THRILLING PICTURE SERIAL CONTINUED WEDNESDAY NEXT!

They hurled the hero off the ship; he cleft the rolling wave
And went, as we at first supposed, to fill a watery grave.
But, no! his head and arms appear! He stands a chance to win!
Yet there behind him we observe a speeding dorsal fin.
"A shark! a shark! He's gone," we cry, and then he fades from sight,
And on the flickering screen is flashed:

I wonder often if that girl was pitilessly slain
Or if, just in the nick of [illegible], somebody flagged the train.
I wonder often if that shark, as frequently sharks do,
Turned over on his back and bit that poor young man in two.
But dread suspense must haunt me through my lifetime, I suppose,
For I went out of town next week and never saw the shows.

Aladdin's Lamp Not In It With the Camera

Here Is a Trio of "Movie Girls" In "The Birth of a Nation" Whose Combined Salaries Run Up to Considerably Over $100,000 a Year and None Is Out of Her Teens.

BEFORE the moving pictures made the Arabian nights look tame this might have seemed a fairy story. At present it is just a reporter's notebook sketch of actual events, and there is a sordid sound of money in it.

Think of three girls still in their teens who are piling up annual incomes of over $100,000 in the aggregate. The girls are Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh and Miriam Cooper, who play the feminine leads in D. W. Griffith's epoch making spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation."

Griffith understands the force of contrast in art as well as every other detail of this fascinating form of expression which he has made famous. In the three youthful stars of his masterpiece he has the satisfaction of seeing his work carried out triumphantly by three girls who have been trained under his guiding direction. Mae Marsh has that elfin and elusive quality which her Irish ancestry bestowed upon her. Griffith brings it out in striking effectiveness in his world famous work. Miss Marsh is red headed and clever far beyond the reach of her eighteen years.

Lillian Gish is pronounced the finest type of blond on the motion picture screen in America. She has been in the movies now for several years, beginning under Griffith's direction when a mere schoolgirl. She has played a world of parts and is known as well as Miss Marsh, who is beloved of millions as the Maude Adams of the motion pictures.

These two girls between them earn over $1,500 a week and have contracts with the big producing firms in filmland, which means they earn these salaries for fifty-two weeks in every year.

Miriam Cooper is the newest member of the trio and has only been in pictures about a year now. She has come forward steadily, and her work in "The Birth of a Nation" has enhanced her earning capacity. Miss Cooper is the southern type. She is willowy and languid and a pronounced brunette, making a complete contrast to the brilliant shock of Mae Marsh's red hair and the golden blonde of Lillian Gish.

—Well, that is, almost everybody.

Of course, we except the man who uses smoked glasses to take all the brightness out of life—

And the old codger who believes that the theatres are very, very wicked—

And the gentleman who buttons his collar in the back because he hates to look forward—

And his neighbor who thinks railroad trains and newspapers should stop on Sunday.

"FRENCHY" THE FEATURE AT COLUMBIA THEATRE

For this week the Columbus Theatre announces a production which is said to reach the highest achievements in the extravaganza form of amusement. The title of the organization is Fred Irwin's Majestics. The performance consists of a two-act satire called "French" and is presented in nine scenes, most of which are laid in those environments in Paris that include the gay spots for which the French Capitol is noted. Lively comedy and spirited music and dancing are the dominating elements in this division of the performance and during its action a cabaret show is given that has for its principal attraction imitations of many celebrated entertainers.

The introduction of a one-act satire on existing conditions at Sing Sing prison is described as a series of laughable incidents concerning the methods recently adopted for the conduct of that institution. Supplementing these features, it is announced many vaudeville specialties will be given that have not hitherto been performed. The presenting company includes the names of several players of unusual popularity, among them Elmer Tenley, Florence Bennett, Pennetta Presslar, Virginia Irwin, Corine Wells, Lucy Wert, John Sheery, Paul Cunningham and Charles Dunn, and specialties will be given by the Xela Sisters, Francis Murphy, Emanuel List and Jerry Mandy. Also there is a large chorus of attractive girls who are assisted by a double quartet of male voices in rendering the musical numbers. It is said the scenery, costumes and electrical effects are more pretentious than any that have ever been seen upon the stage of the Columbia. The management points to this production as a perfect illustration of the advancement that has been made in the direction of merit and worth in this form of amusement.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

A Giant, a Little Princess And a Snail.

"IT'S the longest while since we've had a fairy story," complained Evelyn.

"I think we can fix that," said daddy. So he began: "Once upon a time quite a long, long while ago a giant owned a whole mountain, the sides of which were covered with beautiful wild flowers. Everything about the mountain was lovely except the old giant himself. He had a horrid purple beard and only one huge red eye right in the middle of his forehead. He wore bearskin sandals on his ugly feet that reed in, and his garments were almost as dirty as his great teeth, which he never brushed. When he wanted to frighten men he hurled thunderbolts at them. He made thunderbolts up in a cave on the top of his mountain every time there was a thunderstorm. But the most terrible thing about him was his diet. He lived on live snails and little children. Nights after dark he would leave his mountain and go prowling around town hunting for children, and if he caught one he just crunched his teeth and grinned horribly."

"Isn't he lovely and awful?" cried Evelyn, with a shiver of delight.

"The next door neighbor of the giant was a good prince who had a charming little daughter that loved to play in his broad fields. She was a terrible little runaway, but otherwise a good child."

"How old was she?" asked Jack, who was always curious about ages.

"Eleven. One day she saw some rare ferns over in the giant's glen, and without even a thought of fear she jumped over the high wall while her old nurse was picking daisies and ran like a little witch—right into the old giant. 'Ah, ah,' he bellowed; 'I have you at last!' He snapped her into his right pocket just as if she had been nothing but a snail and stalked off for his bone cave. When he got there he set the little princess on a mossy rock and took a good look at her. 'You're too skinny yet,' he rudely told her. 'If you dare come I'll give you a horrid stomach ache,' she warned him.

"Now, everybody was always afraid of the old giant, and it pleased him immensely to have somebody dare sass him. So he decided to keep her to make him pick up snails, for his stomach was so big that he had great difficulty stooping. So a little prisoner became nothing but an old giant's doormat. One day the blue fairy heard what a dreadful state of things had come to pass. That night when the old giant was supping on snails, just as he was going to crunch the juiciest one between his ugly teeth it stuck in his throat and choked him to death, and the fairest one left on his plate turned into a beautiful young knight, who seized the little princess, wrapped her in his blue velvet cloak and carried her back to her father, the prince."

Married Life on $80 a Month

Molly Sutner's Tears Bring Comforting Words From Olive Elkson.

"Well, what did he say?" asked Olive, when Molly rushed panting up the steps and into the house, hardly waiting to knock.

Molly sank into a chair and burst into a flood of tears.

"Why, what is the matter?" asked Olive in great astonishment.

But Molly could not control herself enough to speak, and Jack, terrified by his mother's weeping, added his voice to the general confusion. This enabled Molly to control herself enough to stop his tears. When he had been induced to play in the yard, Olive sat down by her friend's side and said:

"Now, dear, tell me all about it. What happened to spoil your little plan?"

The tears began to gather again as Molly thought of the harrowing interview with her husband.

"I had never been to the office before. I never had anything to wear that I was not ashamed of, so I did not know the way to his desk. I inquired, however, and he was so busy at work that he did not see me till I spoke. I said, 'John, I came in to sho wyou my new dress.' He looked up and a look of fiercest anger swept his face. He said: 'You do well to come here to advertise your extravagance. It will be a nice recommand to Jaynes, and he is watching me to see whether to let me go or not.' Oh, why did I go? Why did I go?" wailed Molly in a fresh burst of grief.

Olive sat thinking deeply and in silence for some time.

"It was very stupid of us not to think of that side of it. Of course it would operate against him if Jaynes saw you and thought you had been getting an expensive silk. I only hope he did not see you. It seems we succeeded all too well in hiding the fact that it is an old made-over dress. Your husband will laugh about it when he knows how foolish he was." Olive was trying to restore the pleasure in the dress that had been so pleasant to see early in the afternoon, but poor Molly was too crushed by her utter failure to please when she had tried so hard and been so sure of success, to take any further interest in her finery.

"I ought never to have let you give it to me. Other people besides Mr. Jaynes will criticise me for wearing so beautiful a thing. It is more suitable that I go around wearing the brand of a pauper." Molly's tone was bitter.

"No such thing!" exclaimed Olive. "You owe no one in this town, you say. I should hate to have anyone think you were extravagant when your husband was in debt, and they would be apt to criticise you if they knew of the debts in Alipe, but no one knows about them and you know you have not spent a cent of your husband's money on it, so enjoy it, I say; he will when he learns the truth about it. It is too bad that both of us should have had had sheep's heads." Olive was trying to laugh off the disagreeable effect of John's sharp words.

"He should have known that I had not spent money for the dress." Molly showed fresh signs of tears. "I have tried in every way to save."

"It's rather new, isn't it, this saving? It is not strange that he thought you had had a relapse when he looked at you. Besides you took him all unprepared, you know. Don't blame him too much. It is because he is so sensitive about his debts that makes him so irritable."

"Oh, dear me, you always have an excuse for him. For my part I wish he were less sensitive and less irritable. I have had about all I can stand of it."

Molly rose to go and Olive kissed her good-bye, and watched her down the walk. "Poor little thing," she mused. "She certainly has a hard time of it, and she does try so hard."

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.—Adv.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat too Much Meat Which Clogs Kidneys, Then the Back Hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Students of the billiard game in Plainfield, and there are many of them, will find some excellent entertainment in store for them in the local Elks' club tonight when J. L. Malone, former champion of the world, gives his scheduled exhibition. As a cue handler Malone is hailed as a marvel by those who have witnessed his informal demonstrations at the local club during the past week and his execution of almost impossible shots has called forth much favorable comment. He fairly puts life into the ivory cue ball and can make the spheriod travel around the green table in any direction or at any angle he chooses. He yielded the international title to Ralph DeOro some time ago.

ONE BIG MORSEL LEFT.

Aside from the Plainfield-Rahway High School football match scheduled to be played in this city the season's interest in the gridiron pastime is at an end locally. Just how the red and blue warriors will make out when pitted against the county champions, however, furnishes plenty of food for speculation and should the localites manage to score a verdict at the expense of the crown bearers they would be in a fair way to claim county honors this year. Patch's men are being keyed up for the big issue and it is to be hoped that they will show at their best in this grand finale of a rather uneventful season.

WHAT ABOUT THAT BOWLING LEAGUE?

With bowling at the highest pitch it has ever enjoyed in Plainfield a strong demand is apparent in this city for a bowling league, fraternal or otherwise. With material such as we now have for organization purposes there is absolutely no reason why we shouldn't have a circuit tingling with life before another month rolls by. The time to found it is now and among the combines clamoring for admission are the Knights of Columbus, the Elks, Eagles, the Park Club and possibly the Moose, and many other organizations. This last minute title series has been very unsatisfactory in the past and there is no reason why we shoudn't adopt a new policy this year.

BATTIN GIRLS PLAY FIRST GAME TODAY

Will Meet Cleveland High Girls' Team at Cranford.

The Battin girls' basketball team, of Elizabeth, will play the first game of the season this afternoon when they play Cleveland High School at Cranford. For a long time it was doubtful that a team would represent the school this season, as the Board of Education had prohibited the formation of a team, but this rule later was changed.

The girls have trained hard and expect to begin the season with a victory. Last year the team made an excellent showing, and with only two of last year's members lost through graduation, Elsie Heilich and Mildred Dederick, the team has the best hopes for another successful season.

MISS ELSA PALMER ISSUES P. H. S. CARD

Red and Blue Feminine Basketball Players Will Have Active Season.

No new teams appear on the Plainfield High School girls' basketball schedule for this year which was completed yesterday by Miss Elsa Palmer, the manager. Sixteen games are included in the schedule, the first one coming on November 24, when the team plays the annual game with the alumni.

Three games have been arranged with the North Plainfield High School maidens for January 7, February 12 and March 10, but where they will be played is not yet known as the captains of both fives object to the selection of the other. Battin High School will be played twice, once at Elizabeth and the return game in the High School gymnasium, but none but the fair sex will be allowed to see the game. The Elizabeth Board of Education has only consented to the team playing on the condition that none but girls see the games.

Regular practice has not yet been started by the girls but Miss Ruth Wean, the coach, and Irma Goode, who is captain, will get the squad out in another few days. With only two of last year's regulars gone and a host of good material available the team should be one of the best in the school's history.

The schedule:

Alumni, Wednesday, Nov. 24; New Brunswick (pending), at Plainfield, Friday, Dec. 3; Battin, at Elizabeth, Saturday, Dec. 10; Bloomfield, at Bloomfield, Friday, Dec. 18; North Plainfield, Jan. 7; Roselle, at Plainfield, Saturday, Jan. 15; Roselle Park, at Roselle Park, Tuesday, Jan. 18; Bloomfield, at Plainfield, Saturday, Jan. 29; Roselle Park, at Plainfield, Friday, Feb. 4; North Plainfield, Saturday, Feb. 12; Roselle, at Roselle, Saturday, Feb. 19; Cranford, at Plainfield, Saturday, Feb. 26; Westfield, at Plainfield, Tuesday, Feb. 29; North Plainfield, on neutral court, Friday, March 12; Cranford, at Cranford, Wednesday, March 15, and Battin, at Plainfield, Wednesday, March 22.

New Brunswick bowlers, leaders in the Elks' League, kept up their winning streak last night, when they captured three games in a row from the representatives of the Rahway Elks' Lodge. The New Brunswick pin-knights have captured nine games so far this season and have yet to meet defeat. The first game of last night's match was an interesting affair, the home team, with 862, having an advantage of only four pins. In the next game the New Brunswicks advanced to 951, while the visitors dropped back to 857. The third contest was fairly close, the visitors, with 851, being forty-seven pins to the bad. Harkins led the winners with 208, Bastedo had 204 and Burton 203. McCartney had 212 for the Rahway team and Koops was there for 226. Here are all the scores:

CANNON BILLIARDS BECOMING POPULAR

Amateur Players Fascinated by Three Cushion Game to Great Degree.

Why this sudden interest in three-cushion carrom billiards is a question that brings unsatisfactory answers. The score of a match between professionals for championship honors is so full of ciphers that it looks like the "score by innings" of a baseball pitchers' battle. In this the three-cushion game is directly opposed to the balk-line game, whether played by experts or amateurs. Yet its fascination for amateurs surprises the professionals and billiard room keepers.

There seems to be but one answer and that is that the game has a psychological side appealing to the mentally alert. It is the man of nervous rather than phlegmatic temperament for whom its intricacies seem to have attraction. The geometric side of the game offers a continuous series of problems in angles. Then, too, the element of chance is so much greater in the slap-dash stroke that it gives added zest to the game. "Kissing" often makes the impossible possible, and adds many buttons to the player's string. "Scratch shots" are not barred even in the championship tournaments. The inexpert player at the masse shot has an equal chance with one as clever as Yamada, for it is open table play.

The player who knows angles of incidence and reflection, and can utilize that knowledge on the green baize, has a better chance to score at the three-cushion game than he who has only the dainty touch of a Hoppe and lacks the courage to take a chance on a long and strong drive, where there are possibilities of a half dozen cushion contacts before the count is complete. It is at that sort of play that the mathematical player excels. Shots that go wide of the mark can always be called as "safeties" and the unexpected achievements of a hard stroke and fortunate collision between the cue ball and the red can always be claimed as well thought out "angles" or "kisses."

To an onlooker a game at three-cushion carroms is an invitation to somnolence. The dreariness of "safety play" when a couple of experts are at it is the last word in dreariness. It is a players' game. The enthusiast cannot tell you why he likes this game better than other billiards, but the secret seems to be in the mental stimulus that follows the execution of a shot making the player believe his calculation of angles has been exact.

SAYERS AND FITZ WERE BEST FIGHTERS

Proved That Good Big Man Could Not Always Whip Good Little Man.

In recounting the vanished glories of the ring the names of two men stand out as constituting a class all by themselves. Thomas Sayers and Robert Fitzsimmons upset the old theory that a good big man can always whip a good little man. Both of them fought good big men, and defeated them. Some old-timers will insist that Jem Mace belongs in this charmed circle, but, in the opinion of the writer, he was never called upon to pit his strength and science against such good men as faced both the Little Wonder and Ruby Robert. The Gypsy never mixed it with a Heenan nor bested a Corbett.

Today marks the semi-centenary of the passing of brave Tom Sayers, "the Little Wonder," who was the first man to demonstrate that a middleweight, if classy enough, may aspire to heavyweight honors. It was on the fifteenth of November, in 1865, that Tom was laid away for his long rest. Never before or since, perhaps, has so great a cortege attended a pugilist on his last journey. Tens of thousands of sincere mourners, including many men of ancient lineage and honorable names, took part in the last tribute of respect to the plucky little fighter who had battled so bravely and so honestly. Immediately behind the hearse followed the dead man's pony trap, and in its seat, erect, but mournful-eyed, sat the pugilist's firmest friend, his great mastiff, Lion. A carved figure of the dog still guards his master's grave in Highgate cemetery, London, as a part of the tomb which has since been erected to commemorate the name and fame of one of England's greatest champions.

It was only five years after his famous fight with John C. Heenan for the world's title that Sayers passed away, in his thirty-eighth year. He was a victim of diabetes and tuberculosis, diseases brought on by the irregular and intemperate life he led after retiring from the ring.

After his indecisive fight with Heenan, Sayers became the proprietor of a circus, but he had no knowledge of business, and he soon failed. After that he spent his remaining years loafing about London, always accompanied by his dog. He was an eccentric figure, wearing high boots with tassels, and across the knees in large letters were the words, "Tom Sayers, Champion."

Sayers was an Irish Cockney, a fighting breed hard to beat, and was a bricklayer before he became a pugilist. He was twenty-one when he fought his first battle, defeating Aby Couch. He fought his way to the middleweight championship, with only one defeat registered against him, and then announced his intention of going after the heavyweight title. This provoked much laughter for nobody thought he stood a chance against big Bill Perry, the Tipton Slasher. Tom weighed only about 156 pounds while the Slasher was a giant and tipped the beam at over 200 pounds. Yet Sayers, by superior skill and science, whipped the big fellow.

The fight between Sayers and the giant American, John Heenan, the Benecia Boy, still stands as the most celebrated in ring annals. Great Britain and America were aroused as never before by this combat, which went forty-two rounds to a draw. The bitter controversy aroused by this battle has not yet entirely died out, and there are many old-timers who still insist that the American was robbed of victory, while others insist as strongly that Sayers proved himself the better man.

FITZ'S PUNCH CAUSED "GREAT MENTAL ANGUISH"

Newark, Nov. 17.—"Bob" Fitzsimmons, former champion pugilist, is named as a defendant in a damage suit for $22,000 filed in the Supreme Court here yesterday by James Hendrick, of No. 524 Garden street, Hoboken.

Hendrick asserts that "Fitz" struck him when he went to serve the pugilist with a legal paper, causing him "great physical and mental anguish."

$400,000 OF COTTON BURNS.

Altus, Okla., Nov. 17.—Fire of unknown origin destroyed cotton valued at $400,000, and a compress owned by the Interstate Compress Company, worth $100,000. More than 8,000 bales were burned, including 3,000 bales owned by farmers, which were not insured.

EX-WORLD CHAMPION TO PLAY HERE TONIGHT

J. L. Malone, former champion pocket billiard player of the world, appears at the Plainfield Elks' Club tonight in a match with a well-known local exponent of the green table pastime. Aside from his competitive work Mr. Malone will give a demonstration of many difficult billiard shots and will explain each move.

The former world's champion is known in sixteen countries and has been pronounced a marvel by expert critics of the game. He relinquished his title to Ralph DeOro several years ago. During the past week Malone has been engaged in re-covering the pool and billiard tables in the local clubhouse and each night has given clever exhibitions of cue handling.

SOUTH SIDE HIGH TO PLAY NEW BRUNSWICK

In order that the South Side High School football eleven, of Newark, might not be idle until Thanksgiving Day, when it is slated to play its last game of the season against the Central High School eleven, Coach Cavallero, of the Johnson avenue institution, has decided to give his youngsters another taste of a gridiron battle and has taken on the New Brunswick High School eleven. The contest will be played at New Brunswick Saturday afternoon and, with the South Side team a much improved combination over the one which played and beat East Side by the slight margin of three points, a victory is not out of the question.

New Brunswick was beaten by the Asbury Park High School eleven, at present a strong claimant for the State High School football honors, by a 6 to 0 score. South Side has been working faithfully for the past few days and has shown enough improvement to warrant its making a good showing against the eleven from the Raritan River section.

PINGRY DECIDES TO GIVE UP BASKETBALL

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Pingry Athletic Association was held Monday afternoon at the close of school, and it was voted to discontinue basketball as a school sport. Manager Braunsdorf, of the basketball team, who had completed the 1916 schedule, was instructed to cancel all games. Those present were Robert Moore, president and football captain; Thomas S. Field, secretary; Edward Rankin, football manager; Wesley Braunsdorf, basketball manager; J. C. Bruce, Jr., baseball manager; Richard Potts and William Clifford.

This announcement will come as a surprise to admirers of the school and members of the Battin High School. It was anticipated that the two schools would have another series at the court game this season.

Pingry last season had its first basketball team and the quintet played splendid basketball considering the fact that little practice was had. The facilities for training purposes were none the best, but at that the boys went out and did remarkably well.

SPORTING NOTES

Forty minor leagues played in 262 towns last year, under the professional baseball association, compared with 44 leagues playing in 300 towns in 1914.

Who will it be, Coffey, Moran or Fulton, to meet Willard in New Orleans in March? Tom Jones, the former barber, has added his tip in the agreement, for the Willard figures are now $32,500 for the bout.

The long awaited tennis rating is due tomorrow, but will probably be postponed. The ranking committee find it hard to figure out whether Johnston or Williams has earned first honors. The mathematicians are now figuring down into the weather.

Jack Dillon and Frank Farmer will clash at Oshkosh tomorrow night. Dillon is showing good form just now.

Milwaukee also has a star bout tonight, in the match between K. O. Brown and Joe Welling.

From Cleveland comes word that the Grand Circuit stewards will before the annual meeting in January work out some scheme so that it will not be possible for a trotter to sweep the early closing classes as Peter Scott did this year and as others have in the past. While limiting the amount of money a horse can win does not seem to be for the best interests of the sport, it is pointed out that it is still further discouraging to see a horse go all the way down the line plucking first money.

After Peter Scott went out of the Cox stable early in the campaign of 1914 there was a general desire of horsemen to see the $30,000 stallion meet Margaret Druien. Murphy held Scott over for this year, so the pair did not come together. A clash now and then with Margaret would have cut Peter's winnings quite a bit and at the same time would have provided the public with a real race on the day the rich purse was up for settlement.

This year the Grand Circuit had only one winner of as much as $20,000 and only four that went into five figures, a condition due to the fact that Peter Scott outclassed the horses of his division, that there were fewer stakes of ten thousand, that Lee Axworthy filled only a few of his rich engagements and that Mary Putney started in only three futurities. Here are the four leading trotters as money winners this season:

Peter Scott, bs	$36,285
Mary Putney, bf, 3	18,300
Worthy Prince, bs	12,805
Lee Axworthy, bc, 4	11,267

There were three pacers who came home with winnings in the five figures this year. Hal Boy, having defeated Judge Ormonde in a match race for five thousand a side, is the largest winner of the year, but from their stake engagements both Russell Boy and Single G were the leading winners of the Grand Circuit. Here are their totals:

Hal Boy	$18,525
Russell Boy, bs	11,800
Single G, bs	10,045

Washington, Nov. 17.—President Wilson today telegraphed Governor Spry, of Utah, urging him to reconsider the case of Joseph Hillstom, the I. W. W. poet, sentenced to die next Friday at Salt Lake City. The President has no power to pardon Hillstom whose fate rests solely with the Utah government.

BORO PARENT-TEACHERS WILL ARRANGE FOR FAIR

An important meeting of the North Plainfield Parent-Teacher Association will be held in the Somerset Street School tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, at which time final plans will be made for the fair to be conducted by the organization Friday, December 3. It is the desire of the association that all members be present as each one will be given a part to play in the coming event and co-operation is needed from all sides.

Another feature of tomorrow's meeting will be the presentation of reports by the delegates who attended the Mother's Congress in Trenton last week. These are particularly interesting to the North Plainfield association inasmuch as matters pertaining to the work of similar bodies was discussed at the congress.

ROUTINE MATTERS DISCUSSED AT RECREATION MEETING

Discussion of routine matters occupied the attention of the members of the Public Recreation Committee at their meeting held in the Public Library building, last evening. One of the questions taken up was whether or not the committee should co-operate with the Community Christmas Committee in providing entertainment for the poor children of the city. It was finally decided that the Recreation Committee is a civic organization, while the Christmas Committee is a philanthropic one, and the two could not be consistently combined. It is probable that some kind of a Christmas entertainment for the entire public of the city will be arranged by the Recreation Committee.

There was a long discussion of the newly formed Community Center work at the Washington School, during the course of which A. B. Jones said that the West End Civic Association was an organization that "always put through everything they undertook," and that he felt very sure that the work under their direction would be very successful. The following officers of the Community Center were elected as members of the Recreation Committee: John J. Carroll, president; William J. Boyd vice president; Mrs. T. C. Vail, treasurer, and Mrs. W. W. Galloway, secretary.

Rev. G. W. Bailey, pastor of the Union Baptist church, colored, of New Rochelle, N. Y., and a former resident of this city, will preach at the Ebenezer Baptist church tomorrow evening on the subject "The Sun Does Move."

The mid-week prayer meeting of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will be held tonight at 8 o'clock.

"Trade-marked" articles—things sold by NAME or DISTINGUISHING and IDENTIFYING BRAND—must be kept at the highest standard of quality. The VALUE must never vary. For a maker to "cheapen" such an article would be to throw away the prestige he had fought so hard, and advertised so effectinvely, to gain.

Y. M. C. A. NEEDS A NEW BUILDING

President Murray to Answer Question at Workers' Dinner Tonight.

PLANS ARE UNDERWAY

With the Large Increase of Membership as Result of Campaign Association Will Require More Modern Structure.

What 1,200 members will mean to the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. is to be the subject of a short address at the Association dinner tonight by President W. D. Murray. Mr Murray will outline the workers' plans of the association for the near future, as they have been affected by the successful canvass just closing.

It is expected that he will promise a handsome new building for the organization as a reward for the loyal work done in soliciting new members. While those who have given their time to the campaign have felt that this was the goal, no official statement has been made, and every man interested is anxiously awaiting the address of President Murray tonight. He will speak for the board of directors and officers.

Another speaker promised for tonight is F. A. W. Lawrenson, business manager of Association Men, who was heard on the opening night of the contest. Mr. Lawrenson has heard of the large number of new members secured and will return to extend his congratulations at the close of the campaign.

It is expected that there will be more than 300 men on the dining floor of the association auditorium when Chairman Albin raps for order tonight. The banner report of the campaign will be made, and each worker will be on hand to share in the honors that are to be divided.

After the campaign is closed a social session will be enjoyed, during which music will be furnished by the full Dutch Arms Band. Visitors are invited to occupy the galleries during the dinner and to take part in the social session afterwards. There are seats for more than a hundred, and those who attend will find the program more interesting and exciting than a real automobile race.

WOMEN'S GUILD SUPPER PROVES GREAT SUCCESS

The oyster supper given by the Woman's Guild of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, in the parish house last night, was a success, 150 suppers being served during the time from 6 to 9, inclusive. The affair eclipsed all previous annual suppers and the committee in charge of the arrangements are to be congratulated on the excellent manner in which the entire dinner was served. Mrs. Milton Peterson was the chairman of the supper committee, and she was capably assisted by Mrs. Edward Brown, Mrs Bennett and the Misses Alice and Lizzy Foster. The reception committee comprised Mrs. Juan Babcock chairman, assisted by the women of the guild.

The parish house was tastefully decorated for the event, carnations and myrtle being used in lavish numbers, the prevailing color scheme being pink and green.

The young women who served in the capacity of waitresses were the Misses Ethel and Alice Brentnell, Ida Brooks, Hazel Huchcroft, Grace Ludgate, Alice and Jessica Mallery, Edith Chamberlain, Jessie Stillwell and Miss Lingren.

VICTIM OF VERTIGO.

J. R. VanMinden, son of Judge R. P. F. von Minden, of New Market, and who is employed by one of the Dunellen sewer contractors, was seized with a sudden and severe attack of vertigo while driving an automobile in Dunellen yesterday. He had barely strength enough to apply the emergency brake, but succeeded in doing so after a minute's struggle with feet that at first refused to move. Assistance was quickly procured and he was taken to his home. The attack passed off in several hours, and today he was much improved.

LOCAL CAVALRYMEN FAVORED, IT IS SAID

Hoboken Members of Troop D Claim They Got "Pie" of Summer Outing.

Charging that the men who made up the Plainfield portion of Troop D., New Jersey Cavalry, were given the "pie" of the outing to Mount Gretna last summer, the members of the troop living in Hoboken are one by one handing in their resignations under the protest that they were forced to do the unpleasant work on hikes and drills. It is alleged by some of the men who quit that Captain Borden has shown favoritism in favoring the men from this city, who form a large part of the troop.

Practically all of the Hoboken men have dropped out, and the end of the controversy has not yet been reached. There are rumors afloat today that certain Hobokenites will present written charges to Governor James F. Fielder, who has changed the headquarters of the troop from Hexamer's, Hoboken, to Plainfield.

It is a known fact that some feeling has been stirred up between the two factions, the conclusion of the Hoboken men being that they were discriminated against.

Hedges of this city, who died at her home in Chester, Saturday, October 2, Miss Kate Lonergan, who had been in her employ for nearly forty years, was bequeathed $300. The bulk of her estate went to her two sons in this city. Mrs. Hedges was born at New Germantown, being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Van Doren. After her marriage she and her husband removed to Chester, where the latter practiced medicine up to the time of his death, which was in 1892. Mrs. Hedges was well known in Plainfield, where she visited on numerous occasions.

WOMEN'S SOCIETY GIVES ANNUAL TURKEY SUPPER

The annual Thanksgiving supper served by the Woman's Society for Christian Work, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, in the church rooms last night, was a most successful affair. Instead of serving turkey, as in previous years, the committee in charge of the affair prepared a tempting chicken pie supper, which was served at 6 o'clock. Mrs. Marcus L. Clawson was the chairman of the latter committee, and much of the success of the supper is due to her efforts. The principal decoration on the tables were chrysanthemums which were used lavishly throughout.

Following the supper a social hour was enjoyed by those present, with a number of entertaining features. Mrs. G. E. Stillman was the chairman of this committee. Vocal solos were given by Mrs. Theodore Davis, accompanied by a piano, violin and organ. Miss Violet Johnson gave several violin solos, while Arthur Titsworth pleased with selections played on the organ.

IMPROVING AFTER OPERATION.

Cornelius vanHerwerden, of South avenue, who recently underwent a serious operation in St. Luke's Hospital, New York, was reported today as gaining rapidly. The prespects of his returning home in about a week are excellent. The operation was intended to relieve a chronic condition in Mr. vanHerwerden's head, and on account of its proximity to one ear was necessarily very difficult.

Y. M. C. A. TOTAL BROUGHT TO 959

1,200 Are Promised by Workers at Final Dinner of Tonight.

PLAN A CELEBRATION

Many Captains Believed to Be Saving Returns so As to Make Final Report Biggest of the Contest—New York Watches Local People.

It is assured that more than 1,100 new members will have been secured for the Young Men's Christian Association by the dinner of tonight which closes the local campaign, and the workers promise that the total will reach 1,200.

At the end of work yesterday 959 had been reported for the contest. Many captains were believed to be holding back reports so as to make a big showing tonight, and Chairman MacArt guarantees that the dinner and celebration tonight will surpass anything that has been held during his stay in Plainfield.

Plainfield has attracted the attention of other cities by the manner in which its men have handled the canvass for new members, and two men representing the New York Y. M. C. A. were present at the dinner of last night to observe the methods of local people. At tonight's dinner there will be a delegation from Elizabeth in addition to the two New Yorkers.

"You certainly deserve congratulations for the work you have done here," said Secretary Smith, of the New York Y. M. C. A.. "Plainfield has been watched by association men

LOVERS' DEATH PACT REVEALED IN COURT

Rose Loved Another so Charles Decided Life Wasn't Worth Living.

"We loved once but not any more, so we have decided to leave this world. Goodbye to all. Rose and Charlie."

Thus read exhibit A of the testimony offered before Judge William G. DeMeza, in the city police court this morning, by eighteen-year-old Rose Moore, colored, to substantiate her charge of disorderly conduct against her wooer, Charles Barnes, of 528 West Fourth street, also colored. According to Rose, her suitor called upon her last evening after she had warned him to keep away, and when she once more avowed her love for another, Charles drew a penknife from his pocket and shouted, "How would you feel if I stuck this into you?" A scuffle ensued, and the Juliet of the story succeeded in evicting her Romeo from the house. This morning Lieutenant Maurice Higgins arrested Barnes on Rose's charge, and the two were the central figures in a case that brought tears and laughs from courtroom spectators.

According to Charles, he has been "keeping company" with the girl for over a year, but he admitted in court this morning that he had been sadly deceived.

"I thought that she loved me as I loved her, Judge," said Barnes, "until she started to go with bad company and told me to quit her."

"Did she hold a hypnotic influence over you. Couldn't you forget her?" queried the Judge.

"She could twine me around her finger, and I love her still."

Then came the revelation of a death pact between the two, when the girl declared that her suitor had threatened to end their worldly existence on a previous occasion. She presented Charlie's farewell note to the court, and with it the following verse of poetry, written on the same sheet of paper, which she had sent to him:

"I've puzzled long, I've hunted hard
For gift to bear you my regard.
And now at last I am sending this,
I hope I did not choose amiss."

Asked by the court what he meant when he said that they were going to leave the world, Charles declared that they were going to Ootewah, Tenn.

Efforts on the part of the court to patch up the existing difference between the two, who had loved like lovers should until last Sunday night proved futile, and Judge DeMeza ordered them to keep away from each other in the future. All ties were severed when Rose handed two gold rings and a penknife over to Charles and he in turn gave her a stickpin and a few other articles which she had given him on various occasions as testimonies of her love.

LOST BABY DINES AT POLICE CHIEF'S HOME

Four Year Old Girl Enjoys Self While Parents Make Frantic Search.

While Mr. and Mrs. George Robinson, of Whitewood avenue, North Plainfield, frantically searched the borough for their missing four-year-old daughter yesterday morning, the little girl was comfortably making herself a welcome guest at the residence of Chief of Police Weiss. The little girl strayed away from home about 9 a. m., and was lost to her parents until 1 o'clock this afternoon. After she got so far away wrom home as to be unable to find her way back again she was picked up and brought to the police station by a kindly man who realized her predicament. Chief Weiss could not locate her parents, so when noontime came he took her home with him for lunch. The little girl had begun to forget her sorrow for a few moments in the enjoyment of new-found friends, when her parents reported their troubles to the police station, to find that the lost child had been in the hands of the authorities for more than two hours.

JUMPER WILSON PAYS FINE AND SETS CULT PRECEDENT

Further testimony to the effect that life in a prison cell is not all that it is cracked up to be came in the form of a $20 fine to the Union county authorities from Oliver Wilson, leader of the Pillar of Fire in this city. Two weeks ago Wilson was sentenced by City Judge William G. DeMeza to serve seven days in the county jail and pay a fine of $20 inasmuch as his cult had never made a practice of liquidating fines, it was the general belief that Wilson would make a martyr of himself for twenty-seven days, working the fine out at the rate of one day for each dollar. After seven days' confinement, however, Wilson decided that he had had plenty, and he deviated from the cult's custom to the extent of "peeling off" $20 worth of bills to Warden Hughson, thus getting his release.

It is known that on previous occasions when Holy Jumpers have been sentenced to jail in default of fines they have refused to pay the money, and when three women members of Wilson's cult were given similar sentences last month they chose to make martyrs of themselves for the twenty-seven day period. That the leader of the sect should pay the fine is considerable of a surprise.

The Y. M. C. A. campaign got too hot for the old thermometer and it was necessary to get a new one. This afternoon the mercury stands at 959, just a little below 1,000, which is the goal of workers, and it will go over the limit set before the campaign ends tonight.

MARTINE WILL RELY ON PEOPLE

United States Senator Has No Excuses to Offer for His Opposition to Wilson.

HAS NOT BEEN A 'TOOL'

Conference Yesterday Between President Wilson and Governor Fielder Thought to Be Significant—Rumored Combine is Heard.

Declaring emphatically that he has no excuses or apologies to offer for his opposition to certain views of President Woodrow Wilson, United States Senator James E. Martine made it plain in a statement given to a Daily Press reporter last night that he would seek reelection in 1916 as the people's candidate. The Senator added that he opposed various issues approved by the President because he believed that they would not be to the best interests of the nation.

Senator Martine returned from Washington yesterday afternoon for a brief visit at his home in this city. His statement follows:

"It is the privilege of every American citizen to meet and discuss Senators or other public officials. It is their right to approve or disapprove the action of public officials. Senators, Congressmen, etc., but unfortunately, under the laws now on our statute books, a few men in secret conclave do not make nominees for Senators. This fortunately is the pepole's right and province. I have no worry as to the result of their deliberations. Of course, I

DEATH SUMMONS JAMES SHORES PRAY

Veteran Railroad Man Dies Suddenly at His Home in This City.

James S. Pray, for the past twenty years employed in the freight claim department of the Erie Railroad with offices in the Hudson Terminal New York, died suddenly at his home 227 East Sixth street, this morning, from complications. He had been ill only a few days. Mr. Pray had been a resident of Plainfield sixteen years, coming here from Westfield. He was a native of Portsmouth, N. H., where he spent his boyhood days.

Prior to coming east, Mr. Pray was employed on different railroads in the West, his railroad service covering a period of about forty years. He was a member of the Park Avenue Baptist church, Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M.; Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M., and Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, this city; Fireside Council, Royal Arcanum, of Westfield; Charity Lodge A. O. U. W., of Paris, Ill., and the Knights of Pythias Lodge, of Rutherford. He possessed a sterling Christian character, a quiet disposition and was an earnest worker.

There survives a wife, one son Martin B. Stutsman; two daughters the Misses Elinore and Mabel Stutsman, of this city; two brothers, William T. Pray, of Kinkora; Charles Pray, of Brooklyn, and one sister Mrs. Wilfred Johnson, of Westfield. The funeral will be held at the late home Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson and the Knights Templar will conduct the service.

TRIED TO GET AWAY AFTER RUNNING OVER A BICYCLE

Fred Branch, a driver employed by the James Dunn Company, of Elizabeth, was arrested by Patrolman Roy E. Martin yesterday afternoon on a charge of reckless driving. Branch drove his truck over a wheel belonging to Edith Mundy, completely demolishing it.

According to Patrolman Martin the driver then made an attempt to get away, leaving the battered bicycle in the gutter. Arraigned in court this morning, Branch admitted running over the vehicle, saying that he was delivering a load of scenery to Proctor's Theatre, and that he was in a hurry to get there. He was held in $100 bail for sentence tomorrow morning, and in the meantime his employer will be called upon to settle for the $8.50 worth of damage done to the wheel.

LOCAL MAN DEFEATS EX-WORLD CHAMP

Malone Off Color in Match With "Doc" Bland at the Elks' Club Last Night.

J. L. Malone, former world's champion with the billiard cue, met his nemesis last night at the local Elks' club in the person of "Doc" Bland, a well known Plainfield amateur, who piled up 200 counters while his professional opponent was clicking off 150. It was plainly evident that Malone was not in the best of form for the match, but at the same time Bland displayed a remarkable ability with the cue, and executed numerous finely cut shots that elicited much applause from the big "gallery" present.

The former champion got away in the first inning with a string of fourteen pointers, but Bland failed to count in this stanza. The Plainfielder exhibited considerable nervousness at the start-off, and had difficulty in controlling his ball. The winner set up the highest individual string of the match, a nineteen gracing his side of the tally card.

Both principals gave fine demonstrations of mass shots, and for the most part the shots were of the sensational style. The steadiness characteristic of a billiard player was missing in Malone's game last night, and defeat was conceded for him soon after Bland started to assume good form in the third inning.

HARRY B. M'DONALD RESIGNS TREASURERSHIP

Harry B. MacDonald, who has been treasurer of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., tendered his resignation at the meeting of the lodge last night. It was received with regret, and a successor will be elected within the next week or two. Mr. MacDonald was forced to give up the office owing to a pressure of other matters. He succeeded L. B. Woolston to the position shortly after the Elks were organized in this city, and has proved a most efficient officer in every respect.

At last night's meeting it was announced by the entertainment committee, through its chairman, Samuel Tavener, that arrangements have been made for a Thanksgiving Eve smoker and vaudeville to be held in the Watchung avenue clubhouse. A fine array of talent has been engaged for the occasion, and refreshments in keeping with the holiday will be served at midnight. Tickets for the affair may be procured from any member of the entertainment committee.

LOCAL FIREMEN APPEAR WITH NEW DESIGNED BADGES

For the first time in many years the members of the local fire department appeared today with new service badges, distinctly different from those that have been worn for a long period. They are practically the same as the regulation badge of the New York and Chicago departments, and are conspicuous through the absence of the familiar insignia that has always covered the shields. There are no hydrants, hose or hook-and-ladders on the face, the entire front being taken up with the wearer's number and the simple words, "Plainfield Fire Department." The badges are slightly smaller than the old ones, and practically round in place of the former maltese cross design.

The change in badges was ordered by the fire committee of the Common Council when it was learned that many of the call men recently mustered out, held fast to the old shield. Most of them wanted the emblems as souvenirs, and it was decided to give the regular men entirely different insignia of office.

CHILDREN'S HOME APPEAL.

The public is reminded again this year that Thanksgiving donations for the Children's Home will be gratefully appreciated by the managers of that institution. The managers who have in mind the generosity for many years past of the children of the North Plainfield High School wish to take this opportunity to make acknowledgment of their thoughtfulness, as well as to thank all those whose contributions help to make it a day of real Thanksgiving at the home.

C. L. FRAZEE ILL.

Mr. Frazee was taken with a severe chill while performing his duties in the Schloss store, and on going to his home in the evening was compelled to take to his bed. It was said at the home today that he was doing as well as could be expected.

BLOOD POISONING FOLLOWED ABSCESS DUE TO FALL

The funeral of Burtis Jennings, the fifteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jennings, of Front street, who died Tuesday morning, following a brief illness with blood poisoning and pleurisy, will be held from the late home at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The Rev. E. R. Brown, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will officiate.

A story, which has been in circulation that the young man contracted blood poisoning as a result of being shot in the leg while out hunting with some boy campanions, is denied. His brother said that a week ago Sunday, Burtis and a younger brother, Gaston, had walked up to Washington Rock, and while there young Jennings had a fall. His knee struck a stone, causing a bruise, and an abscess developed. On Saturday he suffered two strokes of paralysis, on Sunday he had another stroke and on Monday pleurisy developed.

RULED THE SIKHS

An American Who Became Governor of Gujarat, In India.

A REAL SOLDIER OF FORTUNE

Picturesque Career of Dr. Harlan of Philadelphia, Who For Years Was the Power Behind the Throne of Ranjit Singh, King of the Punjab.

The Sikhs of India are a religious sect that have come to be a really distinct race and have developed into a military people. They are brave and stalwart soldiers and have the reputation of being absolutely fearless in battle.

It is interesting to know that an American was once ruler over these people, as governor under Ranjit Singh, the great Sikh king of the Punjab. This American was Dr. Harlan of Philadelphia, and his career in India was surely as picturesque as that of any adventurer who ever set forth from the United States to win fame in far distant lands.

In the year 1825 Dr. Harlan sailed from Boston as surgeon apothecary in one of the old East Indian ships. He arrived in India at the time of the first Burmese war, when surgeons were badly needed for the British expeditionary force, and he jumped at the chance to see something of a little known country.

At the end of the campaign he was discharged. That offended his sense of justice and perhaps moved him to take the side of the Indian princes in their conflicts with the British. It was the period of the downfall of the Mogul Empire and the carving up of it into several independent kingdoms. There were big chances for a man of adventurous spirit, so Harlan went up country and offered his services to Ranjit Singh, the Sikh king of the Punjab.

Ranjit Singh had confederated the Sikh states into a single nationality under his power at Lahore, organized a well trained army under some of Napoleon's former French officers, and was bent on extending his sway over most of the crumbling Mogul empire. It was at this moment that Harlan turned up in Lahore. It is said he cured the Sikh king of some illness and won his friendship.

Be that as it may, by the year 1827 Harlan had risen to such high favor that he was appointed governor of the great province of Gujarat. There for ten years he ruled, but at last he came to a parting of the ways with Ranjit Singh, either because he had quarreled with the king over his severity in punishing criminals, or because the British interests in India did not approve of an American in so important an office, and diplomatically suggested his removal. At all events, he resigned and made for Kabul, in Afghanistan. There Dost Mohammed, the ameer, was preparing for war with the British.

The journey was a perilous one in those days, but Harlan made it successfully, and either by reason of his impressive appearance or the information he could give Dost Mohammed he soon came to stand high in the ameer's confidence.

But when war actually broke out Dost Mohammed showed a complete incapacity to conduct it intelligently. He seems to have taken Harlan for a regenade Englishman, whose advice could not be safely trusted. He failed to take the precaution of fortifying the Bolan pass as Harlan urged, and the British marched through it to enter Kabul.

Dost Mohammed's stupidity seems to have disgusted Harlan with the Asiatics, for he is next found as the friend and guest of Sir Henry Lawrence, high commissioner of the Punjab. While visiting Sir Henry one of the servants stole 100 rupees from him. Harlan told Sir Henry and asked permission to be allowed to get it back in his own way. So Sir Henry consented, but stipulated that he should not injure any of the servants.

Harlan had all the servants in the house called to his room, the door of which he locked; then, drawing his sword and looking as fierce as he could, he told them he would cut the head off every man in the room if the thief did not confess and restore the money. The fellows, knowing Harlan's reputation, were badly frightened, and the guilty man confessed.

Dr. Harlan returned to New York in the forties and lived there until his death, about 1850, but before that time the Sikh power was swept away at the decisive Battle of Gujarat. Dhulip Singh, the son and successor of Ranjit Singh, was sent into exile, and the province over which Harlan ruled was incorporated in the British Indian empire.—Youth's Companion.

Grace Before Meat.

The Zulu admires a woman according to her weight. The Zulu can respect a 200 pound woman, but it is only a 300 or 400 pound one that he can really love. We enlightened persons, on the other hand, have been taught to like grace before meat.—Exchange.

His Views.

"Do you believe that woman should be a clinging vine?"

"I gezzo. But a clinging vine weighing about 200 pounds looks somewhat incongruous clinging to an oak about five feet high."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Y. M. H. A.

At a meeting of the Young Men's Hebrew Association last night, a number of visitors from Somerville were present and in a fraternal way took part in the meeting.

There will be about thirty contestants at the speaking contest to be held on December 5, commencing at 8 o'clock sharp. This contest is open to all members of the association and the winner of this contest will represent Plainfield in the State speaking contest later. These contests have been arranged in the interest of education and development of the art of public speaking. At the State contest each association in New Jersey is represented by one contestant. The winner of the State contest is awarded a medal. This medal has been twice won by Plainfield speakers.

Arrangements for the sketch and annual ball to be given in Columbus Hall on New Year's night are nearing completion. The farce comedy is promised to be far ahead of previous efforts and the whole affair will be on a larger and more elaborate scale than heretofore.

The bowling club will meet tonight and roll a number of games on Klein's alleys.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

San Francisco.—Mrs. Katherine Clemmons Gould, wife of Howard Gould, multimillionaire railroad man, is on her way to China, where she will assist in introducing the Montessori system of child training among the orientals. She is to assist her sister, Mrs. Wong Sun Que, who has taken a thorough course of training to head the work in China. Before her marriage to Gould, Katherine Clemmons was a California girl, and she won recognition on the stage. Her husband has spent a large fortune trying to divorce her. Mrs. Gould has given up society and her other interests to undertake with her sister, who married a Chinaman, the work of introducing modern methods of rearing and teaching the children of China.

Helena, Mont.—The Blackfoot Indians of Glacier National Park Reservation are collecting the most elaborate assortment of furs ever given by a single person, and the red men will send them as a gift of the Indians to Mrs. Norman Galt, the future "first squaw" of the land. The Indian hunters are still on the trail of rare animals, for it is planned to send no less than 48 skins, all of different kinds, and each to represent a State in the Union. Some of the more valuable pieces of fur have been in possession of the chiefs for a half century. Chief Three Bears has repeatedly refused large sums for one skin which he is contributing to the pack that will soon be sent to the future lady of the White House. The Indians are overjoyed to know that a direct descendant of one of their tribes is to wed the President, and the renown of her ancestor, Pocahontas, is widespread in the Blackfoot tribe.

Minneapolis—Miss Elizabeth Tucker, of Chickasha, Oklahoma, was a recent visitor to this city, to sign up her brother for a prize fight. She is the only woman fight manager in this country. Lonnie Tucker is her twin brother, and he is rapidly gaining a reputation in the prize-ring. She understands the methods of the prize ring, and knows the ability of all the fighters. She sees to it that her twin brother gets none the worst of the arrangements. The girl is of Cherokee extraction, and holds a western record for 70 miles an hour on the motorcycle.

Montreal.—A Montreal girl, Miss Vivienne Tremaine, was one of the nurses who attended King George when he was recently injured by a fall from his horse in France. She obtained her military training at the Quebec Military Hospital and headed her class. She was made matron in the first contingent of nurses sent from Canada.

New York.—Mrs. Charles S. Whitman will assist her husband, Governor Whitman, at the reception which will be tendered tomorrow in the executive mansion at Albany to the two women envoys of the Women's Congressional Union who are carrying a suffrage petition from the Pacific coast in favor of a federal amendment. The envoys, Mrs. Sara Bard Field, of Oregon, and Miss Frances Jolliffe, of California, are the envoys in charge of the monster petition which contains the signatures of 50,000 women voters.

Kansas City, Mo.—The State of Kansas may establish next year the precedent of sending a woman to the House of Representatives in Washington. Mrs. James Monroe Miller, wife of a former Congressman from that State, may be nominated in the fourth Kansas district by the Republicans to make the race against Congressman Dudley Doolittle, Democrat. Mrs. Miller learned to like Washington during the years she lived there while her husband was in Congress. She is president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, and is a member of the State Penal Board, in charge of the prisons and reformatories of the State. William Allen White, who is backing her candidacy, declares she has the courage, wisdom and tact necessary to win the office and to make good in the halls of Congress.

Chicago.—The women of Chicago who have attained prominence in the arts, drama, music and other fields, have combined in the organization of the Cordon Club. The by-laws of the club assert that "Cordon is an organization of women formed for the purpose of establishing a common meeting ground for the lovers of independence and self-expression whose vocation permits of excursions beyond the domestic bounds." There are 500 members and Miss Clara E. Laughlin is the first president.

Minneapolis.—Miss Eva Booth, the Salvation Army leader, will arrive in town on Friday to take part in the annual northern congress of the Army. On Sunday evening she will dress in a costume of rags and "will tell the tale of a broken heart and sing a song of love." Governor Hammond will introduce her to the audience and fifty prominent citizens will sit with her on the stage.

Boston.—Prominent women of the east are taking lively interest in the formation of a branch of the French society that has charge of the education of children orphaned by the war. Misses Elinor Fell and Florence Schofield, of England, arrived here today from New York and Washington, and reported many voluntary offers to care for the schooling of one or more children. A big meeting of society women will greet the movement here today, and the other large cities of the country will also be visited.

San Francisco.—To spread the use of goats' milk for feeding human babies, two prominent girls have gone into goat-raising. The girls are Miss Irmagarde Richards, niece of Admiral Frank Fletcher, and Miss Morris Wagner. They opened a farm for goats, and a few weeks ago exhibited some of their best milkers from their flock of thirty full-blooded goats at the Exposition. The girls have an eye for profit, but they maintain that it was their chief desire to prove the greater value of goats' milk over cows' milk in the feeding of babies.

St. Louis.—Society leaders of St. Louis, in unusual scenes and stunts, will be shown on the screen at the Victoria Theatre tomorrow and Saturday night, for the benefit of the Protestant Orphans' Home. Some of the most prominent women of the city have posed in unique stunts, and there is an air of expectancy that the audience will be made to gasp at the effects.

LITERARY

The War Department Red Tape.

Naturally the bureaucracy of the War Department has set its imprint on the fighting Army itself. The American army officer starts out in life the best second lieutenant in the world, but his environment makes him in the end an automaton of red tape. He can only give half of his time to the business of training for war; the rest goes to paper work, and his future depends not so much upon his military skill, but in side-stepping the Army's black monster, "rigid accountability." A colonel commanding an army post can only keep half an eye on soldiering and is in reality the mayor of a small town. His desk is stacked with papers and he signs his name on countless documents. Unconsciously he begins to fret if the grass grows on the sidewalks, if the hedges look ragged, and he is made to worry if a pair of shoes are lost or why the plumbing of Lieutenant Jones' house smells. It is not his job, but custom has made it so, and unless he is superhuman he is lost in the labyrinth of red tape and becomes purely an official doing the work of a clerk; he thinks in administrative terms, not in those of war.

That an army officer can at all remain efficient under the present method of promotion is a great tribute to his high qualities. The average man would sleep all day and grow fat and a business establishment fail in a year. While President Colonel Roosevelt hit the nail on the head. "Our present system of promotion by seniority serves to put a premium on a good digestion and a total disinclination to assume responsibility." To which an able navy friend of his added: "And you must keep fairly sober and not hit anybody." For years Secretaries of War have pointed out the evils of this ridiculous system, and there are recommendations galore that the army's promotion should be placed upon the basis of personal fitness, like a civil life. But under the cast-iron rule of the Army the bright one advances with the laggard until the rank of colonel, and there is no reward for personal distinction or achievement.—Henry Reuterdahl in the December Metropolitan.

TRU-TRED SHOES

There are scarcely any exceptions to the rule that Tru-Tred Shoes satisfy all who adopt them—that they contribute vastly to the comfort of those who wear them.

Put on children's feet they give the little feet a chance to breathe and grow, for the shoe conforms to the natural lines of the foot.

Worn by older folks they enable them to stand without discomfort, and to walk without tiring, and they relieve them of many of the foot ills to which humanity is heir.

Why be uncomfortable when such Shoes as these are within easy reach at moderate prices?

EDUCATOR'S NOTEBOOK

Nashville.—The second national conference on teaching for rural schools opened here Tuesday, under the auspices of the United States Bureau of Education. The first conference was held in Chicago last year and was such a success that Commissioner Claxton arranged the present conference. The topic under discussion is "What the Educational Institutions of the United States are Doing for the Cause of Rural Education." A general statement of the work was presented by H. W. Foght of the Bureau of Education, and other speakers. Others who will be heard during the three-day conference include President D. B. Johnson, of the N. E. A.; Prof. W. R. Tate, of Peabody College for Teachers, Nashville; Dr. H. W. Odum, of Athens, Ga.; Prof. W. R. Hart, of Amherst, Mass.; Miss Mabel Carney, of St. Paul; A. O. Thomas, State superintendent of Nebraska; J. H. Binford, State supervisor of Virginia; Miss Carrie Lyford, specialist in home economics, U. S. Bureau of Education; Prof. Mark Burrows, of Kirksville, Mo.; President Charles Evans, of the State Normal School, Edmond, Oklahoma, and Prof. J. W. Bateman, of the State Normal School of Louisiana. During the conference Dr. Philander P. Claxton will address the delegates on "The Definite Preparation Needed by the Rural Teacher."

Milwaukee.—The annual convention of the National League of Compulsory Education Officials will be held here today, tomorrow and Saturday. Between 500 and 600 members, representing the larger cities of the United States, are expected to be here. The father of this organization, which is now five years old, is H. R. Pestalozzi, chief truancy officer of the Milwaukee schools. Although still in its formative period, the organization is an important one in the educational world, for its aim is to keep children in school. Discussions of the methods in vogue in different parts of the country are very useful to the delegates, and the attendance results are always an interesting phase of American life.

Washington.—One hundred and fifty school teachers from Mexico, both men and women, are touring the educational centers of the Eastern States to study teaching methods. The visitors went to Boston first, and then came to Washington. They will also visit Philadelphia and New York, and will sail for home next month. The Mexican teachers were sent by General Carranza, and Jose Velasco, superintendent of schools in Mexico City, who is the official guide of the party, brought greetings from Felix Palavinini, secretary of education in Mexico, who invites American teachers to visit that country "in the interest of international solidarity, and assuring them in the name of the government every protection."

LITERARY

Nothing can exceed the bravery and the courage of the women and children in all this suffering country, writes the Rev. Dr. Samuel N. Watson, rector of the American church, Paris, in The Living Church. In many places the women take on the work the men used to do, and do it well and finely. Most of the harvests have been gathered by the women. But there are some things they cannot do all alone. Recently the Abbe Desainttuscien came to ask some help for the widows of the soldiers killed in battle that they might get in their grain in his seven parishes along the battle-line, where the harvesting is done under the sound of guns. We sent him up the best type of American reaper and binder, and it has the name of the American church of Paris on it. It is loaned from one parish to another, and the sous-perfet of Mondidier sees that some men may be had to do the work with it. Here there are horses to do the work with, because horses can be had from the depots of supplies on the orders of Monsieur le Sous-Prefet; but in the country districts, in the interior, sometimes the horses are all gone, and then they have come back to the old, old days, and it is an attelage de chiens which brings the milk and the cheese and the butter into the market.

A Christmas Custom That Should Be Revived.

"Old, very old in England," we read in the December issue of the Woman's Home Companion, "is the custom of setting lighted candles in the windows on Christmas Eve to give holiday greeting to the passer-by, but little use has been made of this charming idea in our country. Baltimore, however, has had a city-wide lighting of candles which was so successful that it is repeated every year.

"Weeks before Christmas, when plans were being made for the Community Tree, it was suggested that each household set lighted candles in the parlor windows to wish Merry Christmas to their fellow townspeople, not even the most enthusiastic supporter of the Candle Greeting expected to see half the number of windows that were so lighted when Christmas Eve came.

"Scarcely a city block in any section of the city was without at least one illumination, and it was not rare to see every house in a row brightened by this evidence of 'peace on Earth, good will to men.' It warmed the very cockles of one's heart to walk through street after street with these silent Christmas greetings everywhere, and no one who has gone through such experience could ever want to know another Christmas Eve without them."

Y. W. C. A.

Come to the Y. W. C. A. tonight at 8 o'clock and take a "Trip Through the Orient." All welcome over 16 years of age.

The regular service of the Christian and Missionary Alliance will be held in the Brick church, Duer street and Craig place, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30, and tomorrow evening at 7:30. The service Sunday afternoon will be conducted at 4 o'clock. W. C. Hart, of Westfield, will preach tomorrow night.

CONFIDENCE IS THE BASIS OF BUSINESS

TO "MAKE GOOD" IN BUSINESS A STORE MUST HAVE THE CONFIDENCE OF THE PUBLIC.

The results of true success in life and in business are expressed in the word Confidence.

The Confidence of our fellow men, and particularly those with whom we do business, should mean more to us than any other thing in the world.

What a goal to strive for and what a prize when once attained.

There is but one way to reach it, and that is by not deviating one hair's breadth from the line of absolute honesty. No one can help us toward our goal. We can reach it only thru' our own efforts.

To never offer goods that are not the best—to never misrepresent their quality—to never overcharge one penny—to never break a promise—to be courteous and considerate—to be just, as we expect to receive justice—to have our store truthfully represent our personality in its cleanliness and management; these are the keys that admit us into the circle of perfect Confidence, for which many men strive but all do not reach.

Confidence is the very breath of our social and business life.

Open evenings.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Irene Fenwick and Charlie Chaplin will divide headline honors on the screen of the U. S. Astor Theatre today. Chaplin will also be seen in his latest comedy, "A Night At the Show," tomorrow, when he will share headline honors with the noted Belasco star, Laura Hope Crews, who will be seen in "The Fighting Hope." Irene Fenwick will be seen this afternoon and tonight in "The Green Cloak," produced by the George Kleine Company. It is a gripping story of love and adventure which ought surely to appeal to the most exacting. Miss Fenwick, always charming, does quite the best work of her screen career in this subject. Chaplin, too, is seen at the top of his comic form in his latest release. It unfolds laughs by the yard. The management has inaugurated a voting contest which will probably arouse much interest here and the vicinity. It is proposed to give away an automobile free. Application blanks for nominations of residents or their friends can be had at the theatre or the coupons may be cut from the local newspapers. The person securing the highest number of votes by December 18 will receive a fully-equipped Maxwell car. The judges will be prominent residents of the city who will count the votes on the final date. No clubs or societies are eligible.

TO RELY ON THE PEOPLE

would like the good opinion and approbation of my public and private acts of those who may be high or low in the station. There is an old proverb, almost as old as time, which says that 'although man proposes, God disposes.' I shall wait for the realization of the result in that way. But notwithstanding, whatever may be the result of their decision, James E. Martine, if nothing unforeseen happens, will be a candidate for his own successorship in 1916 and will rely as a platform on his record. I have cast no vote other than a conscientious one. I have been punctual and honest in my action. Every vote I have cast I would cast over again under similar conditions. I have no excuses or apologies."

Governor James F. Fielder, State Treasurer Grosscup and various other Democratic leaders of New Jersey, have been reported to be planning to bring about Martine's retirement should he run at the primaries next year and the Senator admitted yesterday that he believed there was truth in the rumor. Yesterday Governor Fielder and President Wilson met in Washington to discuss New Jersey politics in general and it is understood that the purpose of the conference was to checkmate any move which may be made by the Republicans when they take over the State government next year. The probable attitude of the "Smith-Nugent wing" was also discussed.

Following the conference Governor Fielder denied that he has any intention of running for the United States Senate or that there was any plan discussed to take the nomination away from Martine. It is believed that the administration would prefer to have Martine withdraw from the race. Grosscup's term as State treasurer ends in January, and it is likely that the administration will give him a Federal berth.

In connection with the above story the following editorial under the caption of "Senator Martine, the Undesirable," from the Staats Zeitung, of New York, will prove interesting at this time:

Senator Martine, of New Jersey, is slated to go. Washington has given the verdict because he reserved the right to mould his own views, regardless of what those higher up commanded him to do. On Wednesday Governor James F. Fielder and State Treasurer Grosscup, of New Jersey, will go to Washington to confer with President Wilson relative to the elimination of Martine from the 1916 primaries and to select a candidate to succeed him.

The administration is after men he will carry out its orders and be its tools, and because of this Martine is not wanted. It is interesting to note how public opinion will change. Four years ago Martine was characterized as a brave, conscientious people's man and the government at that time was anxious to place him in the Senate. But today the Federal and State governments are conniving to relegate him back to private life.

The primary idea was first introduced in order that the voters at large might have a say in selecting candidates for office and to do away with the influence that had always been directed by a few leaders lined up with the administration. In order that the primary idea may be carried out to its best advantage the administration should leave the matter exclusively to the people at large as it has been shown in the past that the political machine's candidates have proven unsatisfactory.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The big feature which opens for a three days' engagement tonight at Proctor's is entitled, "Fun In An Actors' Boarding House," and requires a carload of scenery. There are four big scenes arranged in one large setting. The act is so large that it requires the services of a regular stage crew of mechanics, who travel with the show. It presents four rooms in a boarding house, which are occupied by a German musician, an old maid, a dashing soubrette and an old Shakesperian actor, and is one of the old-fashioned rollicking comedy sketches. Another big feature which will add variety to the program is the Hadji Nassar Troupe of acrobatic Arabs, who present a circus entertainment of exceptional stunts of the most thrilling kind. The photo-play features are a combination of dramatic and comic entertainment offering the films' greatest comedian, Charlie Chaplin, in "A Night In the Show," said to be the funniest exploits ever seen on the screen of this famous comedian, and in addition there will be a Pathe feature entitled "Perils of Temptation." Toy matinee for the children will take place Saturday. Every little tot that attends will receive a present. Owing to the fact that "The Birth of a Nation" will be presented the first half of next week, there will be no bazaar night Wednesday. But the next "bazaar night" a week from Wednesday promises to eclipse all others, and a big double bazaar will be offered instead of the usual program on this occasion. Seats are now selling for "The Birth of a Nation," to be presented here the first half of next week, November 22, 23 and 24, with daily matinees.

LOYAL DAUGHTERS' SALE.

The Loyal Daughters' Circle of the King's Daughters, of Netherwood, will hold its annual Christmas sale of fancy articles, bags, aprons, candy, home-made cake, flowers, preserves, pickles, etc., at the residence of Mrs. Eugene P. Miss Stella Force, of West Front street, who was recently operated upon for appendicitis, was yesterday removed from Muhlenberg Hospital to her home.

METHOD IN HER MADNESS.

May—Oh, Mr. Grassett! was that thunder?

Jack—I believe it was.

May—Oh! Oh! whatever shall I do?

Jack—Why, you are not afraid of lightning, are you?

May—It drives me crazy. Won't you please shut the window?

Jack—Why, certainly; though I don't think it would attract the lightning very much.

May—Oh, yes it would. Now, pleeeaze come away from the wall! The walls of the house are conductors of electricity.

Jack—All right. Anything else?

May—Will you please draw down the blinds so that I can't see the lightning flashes? There, thank you; but it is so dark I can't see here now.

Jack—Never mind! I am here.

May—I have heard some girls say that the safest thing to do in a storm is to stand on a chair in the middle of the room.

Jack—Here is a chair.

May—But I am afraid I will fall off.

Jack—I will hold you on.

May—It is so kind of you. How terrible the thunder sounds; but I feel safer now. (Pause, to give the thunder and lightning man a chance to earn his salary.)

Jack—By the way, wouldn't you be just as perfectly insulated if I sat in the chair and you sat on my lap?

May—Oh, Mr. Grassett! how can you suggest such a thing?

Jack—Come on. (Sounds of a struggle and then a thunder-clap.)

May—Oh, Jack! (More thunder, green fire, etc.)

MRS. MARTER'S COMPLEXION.

Mr. Marter hastily dropped his morning paper and arose as his wife entered the breakfast room. Mrs Marter's brows held that elevation and her lips that depression which forecasted an approaching storm, and her husband's spirits sank accordingly. "Good morning, my dear," said he, trying to look happy, and proceeding to overdo it. "You look as though you'd had a good night's rest. Let me pull out your chair. How becoming that wrapper—dress—I mean gown—is. You always did look well in blue."

"It matters little," said Mrs. Marter, in an all-is-now-over voice, "but I was led to believe it green."

"Of course, my dear, green. I meant green. And such a pretty shade."

"Green and yellow do not ordinarily blend," observed the lady, sipping her coffe as though it probably contained some deadly poison, but life was too dismal a thing for it to matter.

"Very true," assented Mr. Marter, in his sprightliest manner. "It takes you to pick out colors."

At this innocent compliment Mrs Marter buried her face in her handkerchief and began to sob.

Mr. Marter, never prepared for these outbursts, after ten years of trying to ward them off, dropped his fork and jaw at the same time, and fled.

NOT ADEQUATE TO THE OCCASION.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

One of the Armstrong brothers, who played for a half century or more in Rahway High School football regalia against Plainfield High School and other athletes, has been elected to captain the Blair Academy eleven in 1916. All of which leads us to believe that someone is conspiring to turn the academy into a home for aged athletes.

Beats all how these old Crescent Club baseball players do persist in coming back to Plainfield as pool and billiard sharks. What would some of the ballists do to keep the wolf away from the door if the green table game went out of business?

Giving the Plainfield High School girls' basketball schedule the once over we note that Battin is included as an opponent. Won't they have their hands full trying to bar the male rooters from this contest?

Down Battin way the Board of Education has decided that the presence of mere males at feminine games is detrimental to the interests of all concerned. Hence the dear little Battin girlies will be allowed to play the Plainfield fair ones only under the condition that no boys be allowed to witness the combat.

Battin has opened the road to the ruination of gymnasiums. There won't be a foot of woodwork around that Elizabeth gym but what will be dotted with knot-holes.

If those Brunswick Elks win many more clean sweeps they'll have the pennant cinched before the other nine clubs get their bearings. Why not let up a little and make the going interesting?

"Bus" Miller has returned to the P. H. S. squad after a long lay-up with an injured leg. If the red and blue warriors absorbed all that one is expected to learn while on the hospital list he should prove an excellent addition to the High School squad for the Rahway tilt Saturday.

A Bound Brook basketball team is challenging local quintets under the handle of "Jolly Five." Perhaps after meeting some of our Queen City stock these Somerset athletes will hook fast to the title of "Gloomy Cuses." But they'll cease to advertise after they're tamed.

CHICKEN FANCIERS PLAN FOR POULTRY EXHIBITION

The New Jersey Association for the Improvement of Poultry held a well-attended meeting last night and spent most of the time in arranging for the poultry show at Elizabeth on December 15, 16, 17 and 18 in the armory. This will be a joint exhibition, in which the associations from Plainfield and Elizabeth will combine their efforts. Entry to the show is open to poultry fanciers from all parts of the world. Martin R. Maurer, of Elizabeth, is superintendent of the exhibition, while William E. Briggs, of Plainfield, is the secretary of the joint committee. It is expected that many birds from this city and vicinity will be entered.

At the meeting last night Rufus Delafield, of the Sunswick Farm, at South Plainfield, donated a pen of Buff Leghorns to be used as a door prize for the members who attended. It was announced that a number of local fanciers had entered exhibits in the shows at Morristown and Dover.

Mack Still Believes In Bender.

Connie Mack is quoted as saying that he believes Chief Bender, who was recently released by the Baltimore Federals, still has a good deal of baseball left in him and that he would not be surprised to see him come back and show it. Connie intimates that the lack of class of the team behind him and the psychological effect of no fans in the stands to cheer him on has hurt Bender's work more than anything else.

New Brunswick bowlers, who captured nine games in a row in the Elks' League without meeting a defeat, encountered a setback last night when, on their own alleys, they lost two games out of three in a postponed match with the Paterson quintet. The New Brunswicks, however, are still showing the way, having won ten games and lost two. They distinguished themselves last night by setting a new mark for the season in the league with a mark of 1,062. The first game of the series was a hummer, the Patersonians, with 936, having a one-pin advantage. The New Brunswicks then came through with their 1,062, and the 953 to the credit of the visitors was quite insufficient. In the final and deciding game the visitors, with 967, had an advantage of twenty pins. Anderson, of the Paterson team, in this game put up a new individual record tally for the season of 248. Taylor tallied 230, Armitage 209, and Anderson got in 204 in the first game. Coyne rolled 246 and 216 for the New Brunswick team. His average was 215-1. Harkins tallied 236 and 200 and had an average of exactly 200. Bastedo had 206, Greenwald 205 and Burton 203. The scores:

GAME IS REPORTED PLENTIFUL IN STATE

What the Law Permits and Prohibits in the Hunting of Birds.

New Jersey's hunting season for upland game opened Wednesday, November 10, and continues until December 15. During this period licensed gunners may shoot rabbit, hare, squirrel, quail, ruffed grouse, partridge and the male only of ring-necked pheasant. Female pheasants are protected until 1919. The open season for woodcock is from October 10 to November 30, inclusive.

Small game is reported unusually plentiful in most part of the State. Conditions during the summer have been advantageous for the rearing of rabbits and hares, while the systematic restocking of the gunning grounds with breeding quail and English ring-necked pheasants from the State Game Farm at Forked River and other preserves is bringing a pleasingly steady increase of these game birds.

The open season for ducks and geese came in on November 1, and early reports from the coast tell of heavy killings of water fowl. The greatest flocks of ducks seen in ten years are reported on the bays around Barnegat and Tuckerton.

Sportsmen credit the nation-wide protection afforded by the Federal migratory bird law for this improved condition. The water fowl season extends to January 31.

The New Jersey law makes it illegal: To take or attempt to take any game except by the use of guns held at arm's length; to have trapped game in possession; to shoot into any squirrel's nest; to hunt or carry firearms in the fields or woods or on the water on Sunday; to hunt for any squirrel, quail, partridge, pheasant woodcock or rabbit while there is a tracking snow on the ground. It is illegal to take in any one day more than 3 pheasants, 3 Hungarian partridge, 10 woodcock, 3 ruffed grouse, 20 ducks, 10 geese, 10 brant, 10 rabbits, 30 marsh hens or mud hens, 10 quail.

GRIDIRON CHANGES MEET APPROVAL

Present Code Has Eliminated Nearly All Bad Features.

KICKERS' VALUE INCREASED

More Action Also Obtained—Can Now Run Back Punts—Interest In Football Game Greater Than Ever—Ten Yard Penalty Has Resulted In More Action.

Following the changing of the rule in regard to a forward pass being thrown out of bounds, the value of a kicker in football has increased 50 per cent. Under the old rule the ball went to the opponents at the point where it crossed the side line. Coaches took advantage of this by developing players who could throw the ball thirty and forty yards down the field with the accuracy of a baseball. When a team was fortified with such players punting was rarely resorted to, and on the fourth down the ball was thrown down the field and out of bounds.

Such tactics, of course, did not give players of the defending team a chance to run the ball back, and so much advantage was taken of the rule that the committee at its meeting last year changed the code so that a penalty of a down is inflicted and the ball put in play at the point of the previous down. If the ball is thrown out of bounds on the fourth down the oval is brought back to the point of the previous down and given to the opposing eleven.

Can Now Run Back Punts.

It readily can be seen that the change was for the best and increased the value of a kicker and went further to equalize the offense and defense than any alteration in the code in the last three years. A team on defense now has a chance to run the ball back and lessen the distance of the punts.

The change also benefits the kicking side in that it can recover the ball in case of a fumble by one of the catching side. As a result the players who are stationed in the back field must catch the ball. There also is more action and interest in the plays by having the ball in the playing field at all times.

The effect of the change is shown by the numbers of kickers developed at various colleges this year. Most of these players are punters and field goal kickers, and a number of important games already have been won by the air line route. A player who is a punter is generally the field goal kicker, and as a result the changing of the forward pass out of bounds rule has developed several kickers who would not have been heard from if the old rule remained unchanged.

Inserting the ten yard penalty for intentional grounding of the ball has resulted in more action. The player now take more chances with the ball and throw it down the field on every attempt to successfully execute the play. Before this penalty was inserted clever hurlers of the ball merely tossed the ball a yard or two forward when they saw it would be impossible to make the pass to one of their eligible players.

FRANK SNYDER MADE GOOD.

Manager Huggins Predicted Catcher Would Become Real Star.

"Have you hooked on to any rookies that look good?"

That was the question put to Miller Huggins in February, 1914.

"Yep," was the answer. "He's a catcher, and in less than two years he'll rank as the greatest in the land."

Huggins' prediction concerning his recruit catcher, Frank Snyder, has come true.

Modern baseball has never known a backstop who is the peer of Snyder, who was secured by Huggins from the Springfield (Ill.) club in the Three Eye league.

Snyder ranks among the best hitters in the National league. He has made good this year, and, barring accidents, he ought to be the swatting leader of the old league when the 1916 battle is over.

Snyder can steady a wabbly pitcher. He can hold any kind of ball that is heaved at him, and he has a mighty and unerring arm, and, above all else he is a brainy youngster and one who uses his head at all times.

Ten Sports For Columbia.

Ten branches of sport instead of calisthenics only will engross the attention of Columbia university students taking physical education this term. Rowing, baseball, football, soccer, basketball, track, handball, swimming and life saving, boxing and gymnastics will be taught as part of the regular work required. The new athletic policy was undertaken to aid students and build up Columbia teams.

Jockeys Plentiful In New Zealand.

In New Zealand there are a large number of licensed jockeys who do not ride. Whether it is owing to the lack of opportunity or no particular desire to follow their calling after taking out licenses is not known. In 1910-11 a total of sixty-nine jockeys did not get a mount. For 1913-14 the number was forty-two.

VAST ACTIVITY OF POWDER INDUSTRY

Several New Jersey Plants Are Producing Daily Thousands of Tons of Explosives.

OUTPUT IS INCREASING

Policy of Strict Secrecy is Maintained at These Mills, and All Are Heavily Guarded Both Day and Night—Increased Working Force.

While local industries are rushed with war orders and working at their maximum capacity making shells and other supplies for the belligerent nations of Europe, but few people in Plainfield have any adequate knowledge of the vast activities at the factories where powder and high explosives are made. There are at least a half dozen of these industries located within a radius of thirty miles of Plainfield, at any one of which explosives in quantity sufficient to blow New Jersey off the map are made daily, but while minor accidents are of almost daily occurrence, no serious explosion has occurred.

Up among the mountains of Morris county, at Kenvil, four miles from Lake Hopatcong, is the immense plant of the Hercules Powder Works. Or, rather, it is five complete plants all in one. The capacity of this plant in the past two years has been increased tenfold and is still being enlarged.

Black powder, dynamite and other minor explosives were produced there giving employment to not more than 300 men previous to the outbreak of the European war, but when this conflict burst forth the plant was deluged with orders, and it was soon equipped to manufacture cordite and the other high explosives which are rapidly transforming Europe into a shambles. From 300 employes the pay roll has grown to 3,000, while instead of one department for the manufacture of cordite there are now four for this variety of explosive alone, beside a largely increased output of all other varieties.

Just what the daily output of the Hercules plant really is no one outside of official circles knows, for if any one visits the office in quest of information he will leave with the impression that the office employes are extremely ignorant about the business or are finished products of diplomacy, but whatever may be their impressions they invariably leave without any information relative to the internal affairs of the Hercules Powder Works. Any employe who gives any information outside the plant usually "resigns" soon after.

This policy of secrecy is not based on the "none of your business" theories, but is necessary for the proper protection of the business and plant. All classes of men are employed and if this rule were relaxed every mishap would be magnified and all sort of disquieting rumors would be circulated, bringing complete disorganization of the working force and terror to their families.

The company exercises almost a paternal care over its employes, the greatest care being exercised to safeguard them from accident or disease and any infraction of any rules to prevent either, is punishable by dismissal or other forms of discipline.

Talk of marauders entering the grounds to destroy property or hamper manufacture, seems idle to those familiar with the situation. The entire plant is surrounded by a big fence and inside of this enclosure a force of one hundred or more guards patrol the grounds twenty-four hours a day. They are regularly appointed police with full powers to make arrests or enforce the law. This force it is said, is further augmented by detectives circulating through every nook and corner of the big plant.

Each applicant for employment is carefully investigated and failure to satisfactorily answer any questions means that there is no room in the works for him. All the employes are carefully searched for matches and in the event of any being found on a workman means instant discharge and that this workman will be forever barred from employment, and as a system of references is required and given, it might be extremely difficult for him to secure employment in any industry where explosives are made or stored. While the official match searchers do not swoop down on you every day, no man knoweth the hour when they shall appear.

Some of the rules of powder plants may appear unduly drastic, but every one is framed for the protection of the employe as well as the employer. No sane man should for a moment want, or consent to take matches around a ton of powder to place his own life in danger as well as to jeopardize the lives of all around him and no reasonable man can object to any system of watchfulness on the part of a company to protect its property when protecting that property means also protecting the lives of its employes. But some men do object and these are the men to whom the guards are especially attentive and they are the men who are continually out of work.

Four miles northwest of the Hercules plant, on the western shores of Lake Hopatcong, is another growing explosive plant, the Atlas Powder Company. This, like the Hercules, is a Dupont holding and before the United States "dissolved" the powder trust both were under the same management, the Hercules being known as the Atlantic Dynamite Works, while the Atlas was the American Forcite Powder Works. But now since the powder trust is dead and gone the two plants are entirely independent, separated, estranged and divorced, but the Dupont interests control both as they also controlled both when the powder trust was alive.

At the Atlas plant the output during the past two years has also been multiplied many fold. Nearly 1,000 men are employed there, where two years ago the pay roll probably carried 200 names. The plant is being continually expanded, but its location is not so fortunate as some of the other companies and the extent of its expansion is limited, while the extensions are for the present rather than for future requirements.

At Wayne, in Passaic county, the old Laflin & Rand black powder plant has been remodeled, rebuilt and re-equipped, with machinery for turning out high explosives in immense quantities, giving employment to hundreds of men working in three shifts of eight hours each. Here, as elsewhere, no definite figures as to the actual output are obtainable. Upward of 1,000 men are employed, which means that the output is sufficient to stir up a whole lot of excitement wherever it is used.

The Midvale powder works, located at Midvale in Bergen county, is a mammoth institution, second only to the Hercules in size and number of men employed. Like the Hercules its output within the past two years has been increased tenfold. All these concerns are controlled by the Duponts and similar methods and regulations prevail, with the exception that possibly the officials are even more vigilant here than at other plants in guarding against strangers entering the works. The wilder nature of the country and the more exposed situation of the works makes this vigilance more imperative. The number of guards is greater than elsewhere while, it is said by employes that detectives swarm through all parts of the property, working in every department, unknown to and unsuspected by their fellow workmen.

Nearly 3,000 men are employed at this plant and this number is being steadily increased.

Beside these plants there are a number of affiliated industries, such as the fuse and cap works at Pompton Lakes. All were formerly component parts of the powder trust, but now they are separate and independent companies, but the Dupont interests control them all.

While the immense powder manufactories are not soothing to the nervous dwellers nearby the pay rolls have been and still are big factors in the business activities of northern New Jersey.

TOTAL BROUGHT TO 959

all over the world, and they are all proud of her work. We would be proud to be able to do half so well in a campaign in New York."

Secretary Horn, who accompanied him, also told of the desirable publicity that had been given the city through results of the campaign.

The Rev. Birney S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church made a short address to the men last night, expressing his admiration for the manner in which they had gone about their work, and telling them that any obstacle of life could be overcome as easily as the one they had just triumphed over if they would tackle it with the same spirit. "Success comes in cans," said Dr Hudson. "Failure comes in can'ts."

Yesterday was a poor day on the track. Many of the drivers ran up against the old god of hard luck, and were forced to spend the entire day in repair pits. Captain Kimball, of the Overland team, accused Captain Rice, of the Fiat, of having bought up all the gasoline in town so that other machines would be forced to quit. This was caused from the fact that Captain Rice reported 81 new members Tuesday night, but the Fiat leader declared that it was not a lack of gasoline that prevented the Overland team from making speed, but an absence of sand in the gear box.

Chairman McGee's division retained the division pennant by turning in 33, the Reneau team won the team pennant, with the Velie second and Overland third.

The total for yesterday was 99 making a grand total for the campaign of 959.

Teams reported as follows:

Reneau, 20; Velie, 10; Overland 9; Winton, 7; Saurer, 6; Abbott, 6; Locomobile, 6; Hudson, 5; Oldsmobile, 4; Dodge, 4; Buick, 3; Studebaker, 3; Lozier, 3; Marion, 3; Saxon, 3; Maxwell, 2; Packard, 1; Mercer, 1; Stutz, 1; Ford, 1; Reo, 1; Fiat, 0; Oakland, 0; Hupmobile, 0.

Assemblyman Runyon explained that the Studebaker team was a little "swelled" over the three it reported because one of the number was United States Senator James Martine. Captain Whitford, of the Velie team reported that the Business Men's Association had given five boys' memberships.

Chairman MacArt urged every captain to see each individual member of his team during today and urge a full attendance at the dinner of tonight. It will be held at the same hour, 7 p. m., and a special program has been prepared. Visitors will be permitted to sit in the gallery, and there will be many people here from outside the city to see the windup of the campaign. The Dutch Arts Band of thirty pieces will play during the dinner, and after all returns are in it will give an hour's concert in the building. The celebration will last until ten or eleven o'clock.

THE PREACHER'S BURGLAR.

The pastor of a big church in Hartford, Conn., finished his sermon for his next day of labor just in time to make the Yale-Princeton football game and rushed to the battlefield, leaving the sermon lying on his study desk. The title of the sermon was, "Thou Shalt Not Steal."

The next day the preacher reported to the police that his residence had been entered by burglars. There was evidence that the un-social mechanic had read the sermon. The evidence was a lot of candle drippings all around the preacher's desk. The manuscript bore signs of having been handled. But the burglar had been so touched by the pleadings in the earnest sermon, that instead of stealing it, as he might easily have done, he read it through and laid it back on the desk. His heart had been touched.

Or it may have been that the burglar was a modern-minded fellow who saw less value as negotiable commodity in a sermon on "Thou Shalt Not Steal" than in a fine collection of jewelry and household silver. Or the gems made a stronger appeal to his less-cultivated instincts.

He could not steal that pleading sermon, but he took all the jewelry in the house.

We do not know, but the minister probably delivered the sermon next day to a congregation of smug, worldly-wise pew renters, happy in the belief that it would bring about a reform in some of their hearts. Perhaps he offered a prayer for the wicked, illiterate burglar who could not be reached by the tender pleadings of his sermon, but his appeal to the police for his arrest was probably in a louder voice and expressed with more feeling.

A COWARDLY CAPTAIN.

What has become of the honor of seamen? Has the law of the seas since man first began to sail the ocean been set aside? When the Titanic went down the whole world was thrilled by the heroism of its crew and officers, who nobly stood by until every passenger that could possibly crowd into the boats had been saved and then went down with their ship. Even the passengers, men from all walks and all stations of life, obeyed the manly rule of "women and children first." Not so on the Ancona. Survivors tell horrible stories of members of the crew who fought for places in life boats leaving women and babies screaming on the decks. Even the captain has lived and to add to his disgrace he charges that the Austrian submarine which sank his ship kept up such a fierce fire from small guns that he was unable to launch one-half his lifeboats, and many women and children were left on the ship. The steamship line that employs him, and the entire civilized world certainly has the right to ask an explanation of his presence among men after such an admission. Did he take the place of some woman, or some child in a lifeboat? His own story puts the burden of proof upon him, and he has admitted enough to brand him a coward and a cur without standing among men. Such conduct is sickening after the inspiring story of the men who stood upon the bridge of the Titanic and prayed "Nearer My God to Thee" until the water filled their instruments.

DEMOCRATIC LOYALTY.

"Four-fifths of the Democrats are opposed to military preparedness, but many of them—I fear a large majority—will fling away their convictions on this question to please the President and do his will.—Representative Claude Kitchin.

This is both a compliment to the President and an insult to the Democrats, and it comes, strange to say, from a man who wants to be elected Democratic floor leader in the House to succeed Oscar Underwood.

Judge Runyon is still in the fight for Speaker of the New Jersey State Assembly. No one expected him to quit. There is nothing in his record to indicate that he would give up after he had announced himself as a candidate, and the honor is his by service and precedent. Whether or not he wins a majority of votes in the Republican caucus he is sure to win the respect and admiration of every man in the Assembly and every man in the State who loves a clean, courageous fighter on the side of right. As Speaker Runyon or Assemblyman Runyon he will be an honor to the Assembly and a potent power in State affairs.

That Christ was a master of the art of advertising, John a great editor and Luke a better reporter than many of the journalistic stars of today, was declared by Walter Williams, dean of the school of journalism of the University of Missouri, in addressing a crowd in St. Louis. Dean Williams declared that even the Devil advertised, his specialty being white lights. We are glad to follow in the footsteps of such illustrious men, but we wish they had left a little more light on their method of performing the daily tasks of a newspaper man and coming out with unbroken faith in man and his works.

That Illinois postmaster who was removed for criticizing President Wilson upon the announcement of his engagement got what he deserved, even though he has been reinstated. He certainly had a right to express his opinion, but any man who meddles in another's love affairs or tries to force logic into an affair with a woman, hasn't got sense enough to lick stamps, let alone be postmaster.

If you don't join the Y. M. C. A. now you are going to be awfully lonesome at nights after this campaign is over.

Monotonous

I wish some driver who is caught
A-killing of his fellow-men
By doing what he shouldn't ought,
And which, we hope, he won't again—
I wish, I say, that some such chap
Behind two-score or more horse-power
Would say that, ere the sad mishap,
He'd gone full forty miles per hour.

An idle wish? Nay, nay, 'tis not.
Monotony so vexes me,
And I have heard this tommy-rot
Wherein the driver says that he—
When he knocked down a two-foot pole
And wrecked a grey stone water tower—
Was going—heaven rest his soul!—
"Not over fifteen miles an hour."

I like a liar pretty well,
And have a sympathy for such.
But this one, when I hear him tell
How slow he went, suits me too much!
And I should rise and bless his head
And plead for him with all my power
Who, when he wrecked things, frankly said
He'd gone full forty miles per hour.

Remedying The Motto

The dog had had a tin-can fastened to the usual place.

Not only had it been tied on, but the head-inquisitor (if one who works at a dog's tail can be called a head-inquisitor) was the son of a surgeon.

He had anchored the string with a piece of adhesive plaster.

So when the dog had gnawed off the string, under the first friendly culvert he could find, he found he had more work ahead.

He had to moisten the plaster so it would come off.

"Wuff!" said he. "Instead of 'Stop, Look and Listen,' I have to stop, lick and loosen."

Misunderstood

The band of robbers had been caught red-handed, looting a music-store.

"How did it come," asked a policeman when it was all over, "that you were caught at it?"

"Huh!" growled the principal robber. "We'd 'a' got away with everything all right if it hadn't been fer English Jimmy. With th' wagon waitin' in th' alley, an' everythink else loaded up, ready t' start, I says t' him, 'Grab that drum an' beat it.' An' th' dern fool did!"

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Exit Gout—And Uric Acid

A THEORY or a mere idea fails to impress us much unless we can see it work. In a fairly general hospital and private practice of, oh, a number of years, nothing extraordinary, but just an average practice, you understand, about like your family doctor has, we have never encountered a case which we could, with perfect ease of conscience, call gout. Plenty of patients have proudly introduced themselves as victims of gout—but on analysis the "gout" would usually prove to be a bunion or something common and vulgar like that.

Gout, nevertheless, is a classic disease, if our text-books are to be accepted as authoritative. It ought to be an occasional diagnosis in a hospital of five hundred beds, one would think. But it isn't. On the contrary, a careful review of some three thousand admissions, including all sorts of medical and surgical conditions in persons of all ages, fails to disclose a single case of gout, plain or fancy.

Inquiry among our friends engaged in the thankless philanthropy of medical practice likewise fails to elicit reports of vast numbers of gouty patients. In fact even those colleagues who number their "cases" by the score leave much to be desired. Somehow or other we just can't cross the trail of a genuine case of gout at the present day.

As for uric acid and all its alleged effects, that is a much more expansive field. For the most part you have to take the supposititious uric acid factor or leave it, as you choose. There is no very satisfactory evidence of a scientific nature to support the notion that uric acid has any particular influence upon health in itself, although uric acid is unquestionably produced in the body from protein food (meat and certain vegetables and cereals), and everybody knows that too much protein is not good for the health.

The matter of gout and uric acid "poisoning" seems to be historical or fictional rather than medical. At any rate our practical knowledge of these phantom ailments is, strictly speaking, nil.

Vest Pocket Essays

BY GEORGE FITCH

APPENDICITIS

APPENDICITIS is something that usually happens just before some doctor buys a new automobile. Fifty years ago nobody heard of appendicitis. Also no one heard of the automobile. Now a man cannot be said to be up-to-date unless he has had appendicitis, while the doctor and the automobile are boon companions.

Appendicitis is a peculiar pain in the region of the vest-pocket, which is later transferred to the region of the check-book pocket. It is said by some people to be a disease. Others claim it to be a fad, while the doctor regards it as an opportunity. It comes from an insurrection of the vermiform appendix, a small annex to the intestine. There are two ways of curing it. It can be reduced by outside manipulation, or it can be cut out. In the latter case, the appendix is not reduced, but the surgeon's bill can, by con and economy, be reduced in installments to a normal size.

A great many people have had explorations made in their interiors by surgeons in search of appendicitis, and most of them have survived. It is not dangerous to have the appendix taken out, providing the surgeon removes all of his tools from the premises, and does not present his statement until the patient is quite strong. When the patient has recovered, he is given his appendix imprisoned in a bottle of alcohol, and travels home in first and second sections like a home-seeker's train. People who have no appendix are arrogant about it—as arrogant as people who have no pasts. Between people who have been divorced from their appendixes, and people who have been to Europe, life is hardly worth living for the common skates who can't afford to have alterations and improvements made on them every year or two.

A great many people have had explorations made in their interiors

The appendix was formerly a member in good standing of the human body, but it was discovered that it was not only useless, but stirred up trouble by diverting objects from their proper path through the human system and then getting swelled up over it. When this was found out, the doom of the appendix was sealed. Thus it is evident that the appendix is no politician. A politician can be perfectly useless, all swelled up and can divert anything from an assistant's salary to a grand piano from the body politic, and yet the people very rarely cut him out.

Views Of The Press

Scientific Annihilator

THOMAS A. EDISON'S statement, during the course of an interview on the use of chlorine gas and other chemicals by the Germans, that such devices were only trifling compared with what science might accomplish in the destruction of human life by agencies other than those already in military use, and his intimation that he could, if he wished, perfect a scheme that would literally wipe out armies in an instant, recalls to mind a century-old-mystery concerning an invention said to have such properties which was made by Thomas Cochrane, tenth earl of Dundonald, a British admiral, whose name is almost as familiar in John Bull's navy as that of Drake, Blake, Rodney and Nelson. The story of this device has been handed down in the traditions of the British sea service but it is a subject that is not often encountered in the histories. It is usually referred to as "Dundonald's destroyer."

Mr. Edison told his interviewer that he would not disclose such a secret, even though he had perfected it, because he did not believe in using his brains for the destruction of mankind, but for helping humanity. Lord Dundonald, however, suffered no such compunctions. Born a year before the Declaration of Independence was signed, he entered the British navy in the fateful year of 1793, reaching a command in 1801 when, with his vessel, the Speedy, he captured the Spanish frigate El Gamo with much audacity off the coast of Spain. Later he entered Parliament on the Commons side and became noted as a vigorous debater and fiery orator. In 1809 he was engaged in the attack on the French fleet in the Basque roads and was the popular hero of the time in England for his exhibition of sensational bravery and daring, but became involved in a row with Admiral Gambier, his superior officer, and because of his sharp criticisms voiced in the House, fell out of favor with the admiralty and lost his command.

In spite of this friction, however, Dundonald, when he made his invention, in 1811, laid it in outline before the government. Dundonald declared that it afforded "the infallible means of securing at one blow our maritime superiority and of thereafter maintaining it in perpetuity; of at once commencing and terminating a war by one conclusive victory; no power on earth could stand against this attack." The committee reported that his claim was not exaggerated and that the method of assault was irresistible on land or sea, but they refused to recommend its adoption because its effects would be inhumane and ghastly, transgressing beyond the limits of permissible civilized warfare. They urged that it be kept a profound secret in the archives of the admiralty so that no other less scrupulous nation could use it for the annihilation of the rest of the world. Just at that time the government was sore beset to cope with Napoleon, but the committee's report was approved and Dundonald, loyal patriot that he was, acceded to their desire, although a few years later, when he saw service successively in the navies of Chili, Brazil and Greece, he was offered immense awards if he would betray the secret.

Dundonald died in 1860, and since his death the plan has not been revived. Apparently it either died with him or an account of it may still be hidden away in the vaults of the admiralty, but neither fact has ever been certainly made clear.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Hedging Over An Account

Q. I am a professional man and have been in the habit of sending statements every month to my patrons. I sent statements from time to time to one of my patrons and I happen to have personal knowledge of the fact that he received them and examined them on every occasion, without making any objection. He now says his bill is too large and declines to pay. Do you think, under the circumstances, he would have the right to object to any of the various items of account?

A. If he did not object within a reasonable time after the charges were made, and he had knowledge thereof, you had the right to infer acquiescence on his part.

Girl Suffrage?

Q. Please tell me whether it is true, in any part of this country, that boys are given preference to girls in the inheritance of property.

A. This rule obtained under the common law of England, but has been largely abolished in the United States. It is true, in general, in this country, that boys and girls inherit equally together. In some states homestead rights are given, by statute, to the oldest child under certain circumstances.

Bobby Wishes That Sundaes Would Never End

Q. In states having "Sunday laws," does Sunday begin and end at midnight or is it defined in some other way?

A. If the statute merely mentions Sunday, without defining it, it will be taken to mean the period between twelve o'clock Saturday night and twelve o'clock Sunday night. This rule will be changed, of course, if the state statute on the subject otherwise specifies.

A Gas Company's Right

Q. Please inform me whether a gas company has the right to condemn and take private property for its own use.

A. A gas company is a quasi-public corporation and as such the power of eminent domain—the power to condemn and take private property by means of judicial proceedings instituted for such purpose—may be lawfully conferred upon it.

The Awning Nuisance

Q. The awnings in front of some of the business houses in my town are very much of a nuisance. Do the proprietors of the stores have the right to maintain nuisances of this sort?

A. An awning may amount to a nuisance, in a legal sense, under some conditions. This matter is usually regulated by municipal ordinance.

Selling Real Estate

Q. When one sells real estate, is he bound to furnish an abstract of title?

A. Not unless he has expressly bargained or agreed to do so. It often happens, however, that custom will determine this matter.

Mr. Branson will be glad to answer all questions. If your question is of general interest it will be answered through these columns; if not, it will be answered personally if stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed. Address all letters to E. R. Branson, care of this newspaper.

The Life Line

BY LAURA KIRKMAN

The Coquette

We'll say this much for her: in nine cases out of ten, she doesn't know she's a coquette. It's a clever woman who can analyze herself thoroughly enough to call spades spades. It doesn't take brains to prompt a pretty married woman to sit down at a piano and play the old songs to her one-time lover. Oh, you terror! her women friends exclaim, when she relates the incident—not one of them caring whether or not the old songs awakened old longings in the heart of the man who listened. Such women are letting the real things of life escape them. It's only the woman earnest in life who is revered. Let the coquette realize the emptiness of her ways. She's going steerage with a first cabin ticket in her hand.

The Love Blinded Girl

"You said you'd take me to the ball game!" she reproaches her fiancé, when he calls too late to take her. "But see what I've brought you!" he diverts, handing her a box of her favorite chocolates. "Isn't that almost as good as the game?" And in her pleasure at his remembering the kind of bonbons she liked, she forgives the offence. Worse yet, she forgets it—she sees nothing ominous in the broken word. Time and again, he has failed to keep his promises to her, but she does not argue, from this, that many small broken promises may pave the highroad to a broken marriage vow. Indeed arguing is wholly foreign to her make-up. Because her head is ornamental, she's forgotten that it can be useful as, well. She's got a setter for a lap dog.

Snap Shots

By Jay E. House

What has become of the old-fashioned man who wore a watch chain made from the hair of his deceased wife?

In making up your list of martyrs to duty do not overlook the woman who bends over the red-hot stove three times every day.

The fact that many men fail is not so much due to the fact that they put all their eggs in one basket as it is to the misfortune which gives the average man but one egg.

A smart man is one who realizes that he is too old for the women to pay much attention to him.

When an unmarried woman begins to wear her hair in a knot the size of a doorknob that means she has quit hoping.

When a woman talks a good deal about her servants it means she hasn't had servants very long.

It is true a rich man can take none of it with him, but he has it while he is here.

Every young man has one standard for his sister and another for the girls he is flirting with.

Eph Wiley says that, while he has not seen the play called "The Indian's Revenge," he assumes that the Indian takes it out of a bottle.

Current Poetry

The Automobug

The Automobug has the biggest selection of words, terms and phrases descriptively fine:
He's got every detail right down to perfection, from "wheel base" to "blow-out," from "chassy" to "line."

He knows every car that was ever invented, its price and its power, where it is made;
He'll tell you for how much an hour they are rented, and what is allowed in the way of a "trade."
Of all the rank bores our attention who drug, the deadliest breed is the Automobug.

The Automobug oozes out information respecting all manner of oils and supplies;
He knows where to find every gasolene station, and where the good roads are he'll sure put you wise;
But if you should ask him what make he is driving, with long explanation he tells you his "fear"
That owing to things that upset his contriving he will not be able to buy till next year;
For all of his talk is just hot-air chug chug; he's a catalogue owner, the Automobug.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is musty and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.—Adv.

OLD-TIME COLD CURE—DRINK TEA!

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.—Adv.

ARMY WEDDING AT ATLANTA.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 18.—The marriage of Miss Rosalie Davis, an Atlanta belle, and Lieut. Benjamin M. Bailey, U. S. A., will be a brilliant event this evening. The ceremony will take place at the First Baptist church, followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents. Many guests have come from distant points, and a large group of army officers are attending.

But she may learn; and happier than this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learn."
—Shakespeare.

Overcoming Evil.

The hope of the future lies in teaching men to look upon human life as a chance to express the Spirit and not to indulge the flesh, and the value we put upon manhood and womanhood will be its mark.—Chas. A. Richmond, president of Union College, Indiana.

Sex Hygiene.

In speaking of sexual immorality, it is more important to refer to the injuries it inflicts upon character than its hygienic dangers. Point out that the transgression originates the disease and that the worst disease which can be contracted by anyone is that disease of character which developes when a man accustoms himself to a course of action which cannot be sanctioned by his better self. This disease destroys the consistency of a man's inner life and prepares him for unreliable conduct in all other spheres of activity. It delivers him over to the powers of momentary impulse.

Rule For Baby Sick Room.

A physician notably successful in the treatment of young children, was accustomed rigidly to exclude from the baby's sick room all persons but those directly concerned in the nursing.

"People," he explained, "who would not for a moment think of admitting visitors, however sympathetic, to the bedside of an adult ill with fever or other acute ailment, allow the baby's crib to be surrounded by unfamiliar faces, under the mistaken supposition that the child is 'too young to notice.'

"The fact is that the infant, at the mercy of nervous impressions ungoverned by any reasoning process, is far more sensitive to an alien presence than a grown person equally ill would be, and much more likely to suffer injury thereby.

"I am positive that I should have lost many a little patient who afterward happily recovered, but for my unyielding insistence upon this rule of quiet."

Moral Growth.

When fathers and mothers everywhere come to regard parenthood as a profession and get into the business of raising children, not as too sadly frequent is the case now, feeling that parenthood interferes with the larger duties of life and that their sons are accidents, then we may reasonably expect large results in years to come. Out of that idealized and ideal American home shall come a cleaner, stronger, happier American boy, a more symmetrically developed American man, a more efficient Christian citizen than are we the generation of his fathers.

Military Training.

At the joint meeting of the State Department of Education, the Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations, held last week in Trenton, it was unanimously voted to oppose compulsory military training in the school, but to approve the Boy Scout movement.

Equal Opportunity.

"It has always been a surprise and puzzle to the good old educators of the past generation, that so many of their dunces and fools, just as soon as they left school, and went to work, developed powers which they were not supposed to have, and some of them became our great men in business, manufacture, industry, finance and statesmanship. As we look back at this picture, we realize now that these boys were not fools at all; they were merely not bookish minded.

* * * *

"But the great multitude to whom books alone mean starvation of mind—they, too, if opportunity is to be equal, must have something besides books to help the spirit within them to come out into the self consciousness, which is the most sensitive and precious of all the spiritual flowers, the unfolding of which in nature's own way, is after all the science of education."—(W. S. Tyler on The High School.)

WHITE PLAGUE COUNT.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 18.—The annual convention of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association opened here today, and the chief interest of the delegates centers in the "tuberculosis week" in Wisconsin, from December 6 to 12, during which every person is asked to be examined by a physician for evidence of tubercular infection.

Daddy's Bedtime Story

Bibbley Wah Gets New Furniture For Her Dollhouse.

Had Peach Baskets to Wear Round His Neck.

"BEFORE I tell you what Hank Fritz made for Bibbley Wah's dollhouse," daddy began, "I must tell you about the doll herself. She was probably the most wonderful doll in the world, for Anne made her, a huge rag image of herself, a queer, long, patient face with shoe buttons for snapping black eyes. She wore little white caps and aprons with crisp bows like Anne always wore even when she blacked Uncle Ben's stove; stiff, full alpaca dresses and one black and one red shoe. It was the funniest costume, and Bibbley Wah loved Anne Junior almost as well as the Anne that made such good gingerbread men."

"Was it Anne Junior who managed the playhouse?" asked Evelyn.

"Yes. She shared everything the kiddies did. Summer days when it was too hot to cook over the truly stove Anne taught the children to cook over a flowerpot stove. She would put a big flowerpot upside down over a lighted candle, so that the little hole in the bottom just fitted over the candlelight. Then with tiny frying pans and small kettles the kiddies used to fry eggs and make pancakes and toast bread and boil potatoes and cook fudge. Oh, 'twas the greatest fun!

"Well, one beautiful fall day Uncle Ben took the three kiddies over to Pond hill and told them to stay all day and bring home every kind of nut they could find. When he drove up for them in the yellow buckboard with old Ned just at sundown the children had six kinds of nuts all tied up in little bags."

"What were the six nuts, daddy?" asked Jack.

"There were lots of shiny brown chestnuts that grew all over the hill; a few hazelnuts that grew by the brookside, the very brook that flowed near the farmhouse; about a quart of beechnuts that a beautiful grove of old, gray trunked trees had dropped along a cart path; half a peck of walnuts, a peck of butternuts and the peach pits that Bibbley Wah had saved from Anne's luncheon basket. Soon as they reached home out of the peach pits Hank finally made the most delightful baskets for Anne Junior to carry. Out of the walnuts he made wonderful little chairs for Bibbley Wah's family of tiny penny dolls, and the big butternuts sawed through the middle made shiny table tops and sawed lengthwise the dearest little cradles. Each kiddie had a peach basket to wear around his neck. Bobbie wore his on his watch chain for a charm."

"Was Bibbley Wah a spoiled child?" Evelyn wanted to know.

"No. She shared everything with the boys, and that's what keeps all of us sweet and good," said daddy, with a bedtime kiss.

Married Life on $80 a Month

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Molly Sutner's Grief Awakens Her Husband to His Mistake.

Molly hung the little blue silk that had caused so much heartburn on a hanger in the closet, put on a clean housedress and, having washed her red eyes, set about getting supper. John came in with a sullen, injured air and buried himself in his paper without a word. Molly thought she would correct his mistaken notion about the dress, but a strange apathy held her from speaking.

"What is the use of telling him?" she thought. "If he isn't blaming me for that it will be something else. Even this stifling silence is better than a storm. Sometime he will learn that I did not spend any money for it, I suppose. I do not care enough to make the effort." So the frozen silence was punctuated only by the light-hearted chatter of little Jack.

Evidently John expected her to open the subject, and when she said nothing his curiosity about the matter finally thawed his frozen reserve and when Molly seated herself by the table after finishing the work he looked up and said:

"I suppose you ran in debt for that dress. You certainly had no money to pay for it with."

Molly raised a face aflame with wrath and answered:

"Do you really think that I would run in debt for a silk dress with our fiances in their present condition?"

"What am I to think? You certainly had no money to pay for it with, as I said, and you had on the dress."

"By all means think the worst possible thing about me; never give me the benefit of a doubt; never give me a chance to explain. It's a habit of long standing with you." She stopped her lips, trembling with anger.

"Well, when I do give you a chance to unravel the mystery, you don't seem very eager to do it," he remarked, for Molly said no more.

"When people live as far apart as we do, it is difficult to get anything across," Molly began at last. "I got a chance to pay for the dress with some work. It's not new, and I thought it would be such a pleasant surprise to see your wife well dressed that I decided I would give you a chance to be proud of her looks. No one down there had seen me. I can remember the time, long ago as it is, when you were proud of me. I was a fool. I should have known better."

The words were tumbling half inaudable from between her trembling lips and she dropped her head on her arm and began to sob convulsively. All the sharp disappointment over the failure of her little plan, the sting of resentment over John's lack of confidence in her, and the memory of his biting words swept over her a veritable flood of desolation.

"So this is the end of all the long weeks of laborious work and pinching economy. Oh, let me die! Let me die!" she moaned. "I am not strong enough to stand it. Life is too difficult for a poor ignorant woman like me. I never was told how to live. Let me creep out of it all where my fumbling efforts will not trouble any more."

Into the black night of her despair, below the waves that were strangling and suffocating her floated the words:

"Molly, dear little wife, can you ever forgive me? I am a big, clumsy, blundering fool. I have been blind and deaf. I have not understood. If you can forgive me——"

Molly raised her tear-stained face to his, a great glad light in her eyes. John picked her up and sat down with her in his arms.

Takes Cash Home In a Paper Bundle

The Greatest Producer In the World Makes Quarterly Pilgrimage to His Kentucky Home and Deposits $5,000 In His Mother's Lap as Her Share of the Season's Earnings.

D. W. GRIFFITH

THE official biographer of D. W. Griffith, the great motion picture producer, asked for some data and got the answer that "he was born in Kentucky, that he grew up in a house like most boys; started out after his school and college days to find his place in the world, and that since he went into the business of producing pictures he has lived most of the time under his hat."

Strangely reticent about his personal affairs, the creator of "The Birth of a Nation" (when you know him) has one of the most interesting personalities in the world. One day he appeared in the office of the Epoch Producing Corporation of New York and put in a requisition for $5,000 cash. It was a Saturday afternoon. All the funds at the Liberty Theater, where "The Birth of a Nation" was playing, had been banked, and the cash on hand was required for salaries. But one of the managers made the round of several Broadway hotels and finally got the cash money in exchange for checks. It was all in $100 bills.

Mr. Griffith bundled the money into an old newspaper, which he tied with a piece of rough string. As he caught the flier for Louisville, Ky., that afternoon he was observed with a suit case in one hand and the bundle of "kale" in the other disappearing rapidly in the direction of a train which was starting just as he reached the station.

The next chapter of this little story opens in La Grange, Ky. A tall, youthful looking man, with aforesaid "kale," bundle and suit case, knocks at the door of an ivy clad cottage. The thin, stately, white haired woman of the crinoline and hoop skirt era answers the knock and comes out to meet him. As the tall young man drops his suit case and embraces the old lady with his good right arm his left hand holds out a bundle in a newspaper, with the commonplace remark, "Here is a little present for you, mother."

The incident, as the managers of the company came to learn about it, surprised them not a little, but it is characteristic of Griffith. Four times a year on his flying trips between Los Angeles and New York he visits the old Kentucky home and leaves that same little "memento." It is always the same sum and is always contained in an old newspaper.

"When I was a boy," said Griffith to a chum the other day, "I always had a vision of making a place in the world and bringing back the coin. I didn't know what checks were in those days. I don't think most people in La Grange know what they mean nowadays. Anyhow, it's just a fad of mine to make the little present in Uncle Sam's legal tender."

Few men owe more to their parents than the famous director does to Brigadier General Jacob W. Griffith and Mrs. Mary Perkins Griffith. The father held distinguished command in the Southern army. He died when D. W. Griffith was but a lad; nevertheless the sixth sense of military strategy that the boy inherited and the vivid depiction of Civil War campaigns that General Griffith used to tell have remained ever with the son. Mrs. Griffith, the mother, has been David's best friend. She gave him a good education, schooled him in the old fashioned chivalry of Kentucky and has ever watched his welfare and progress with a whole hearted love and devotion.

Most of the material given below has been picked up from Griffith's intimates and associates, for he will rarely talk about himself.

He wanted to be an actor or a dramatist; he did not quite know which. A stock company director named Oscar Eagle gave him his first job at Macauley's Theater, Louisville, from which post he drifted to New York and alternated between playing parts and writing plays. The row of a new playwright is hard to hoe, so after one of the early partly successful attempts young Griffith attached himself as utility actor at $5 a day to the Biograph Studio. Soon they were taking small scenarios from him, and when one of the directors got sick they allowed Griffith to make a one reel picture. His new ideas of the "close up," "fade out," "switch back" and "parallel action", revolutionized the technical side of photographic acting. His choice of talent in this field was likewise almost uncanny, so that in five years' time he developed a majority of the motion picture actors and actresses who are justly eminent today. Furthermore, he had the literary sense, and besides using the stock dramatic material of the routine motion picture director he invaded poetry, fiction and standard literature for his subjects. The union of these three diverse talents, together with marvelous executive ability, made him the greatest motion picture director in the world.

David W. Griffith is so busy a man that he has no time for the ordinary diversions and avocations of life. While at work in Los Angeles he is up at 6 o'clock every morning. His working day is from 8 or 9 o'clock until midnight. Immense as the plant is, he supervises every part of it, reviews all scenarios, inspects every player and every costume, approves all properties and structural effects, directs every foot of all films that bear his name and looks over all the film work of the other directors.

"Lives under his hat" is a true expression. Griffith has a hat in every room of the many score rooms of the studio. He wears fifty hats a day, but his favorites are the enormous panamas that guard against the excessive heat of the Los Angeles sun. He always keeps in working trim, is hard as nails physically, and while on the directing job wears his hair closely cropped. His favorite instrument is the megaphone. A born commander, he goes out for field work with this enormous speaking tube and directs an army of several hundred persons as easily as a farmer would boss a team of horses. But when he puts on the big battle pieces, like Sherman's march to the sea and the Battle of Petersburg, he has to discard that big voiced instrument for a modern switchboard and relays of telephone wires.

While careful for the safety of his people, he personally fears no danger and often takes big chances in the outdoor directing work. One of his high powered automobiles attains a speed of nearly 100 miles an hour. With G. W. Bitzer, his photographer, he pushes the speed limit ahead of the wild riders of the Clansmen on their horses in the Ku Klux scenes.

Best of all, "The Birth of a Nation" producer takes the hardest part of his work as good fun, as exhilarating sport rather than as a task. His is one of the spirits that find life extremely fascinating, interesting and diverting. His alert intelligence grasps every new phase eagerly.

Back in New York off his studio labors Mr. Griffith would rather dance than do anything else. He believes in dancing as the most ancient and the most beneficial of all exercises. "Note the fighting people of the world," he said. "They are dancers every one of them. All the conquests have been won by dancing people, and all the great achievements have been wrought by nations that dance."

Griffiths gets 500 letters and fifty telegrams every day. It would save a lot of anxious folk some heartburnings to know that he never answers the letters. He opens them and tosses them in huge stacks on his general manager's table, where the faithful clerks sort out the minute grains of wheat from the chaff and attend to the really important things. He tosses the telegrams to his secretary, whose discretion as to answering is final. Griffith rarely carries money except when he is taking home the bundle of "kale" to the old folks. He is known everywhere and appropriates whatever he wants, letting the shopkeepers present their claims later to the keeper of his purse. He never fusses about trifles. He never does a particle of clerical work. He never stops at small or large financial obstacles, but goes right ahead regardless of financial problems. In brief, his one aspiration is to make the big picture, the great art product, and in that supreme achievement he is Napoleonic in his methods and results.

Reading Character

is always interesting, but a study of a tradesman's business character as indicated by his advertising is even more interesting and always profitable.

Just glance over the advertisements in the Plainfield Daily Press of the merchants whose places you know.

Does not the merchant write his store character into his advertising? Is it not possible to form a pretty good idea of the store from the manner in which it makes its announcements in the newspapers?

Merchants are coming to realize more and more that when they write an advertisement they are painting a business portrait of themselves—indicating their business character.

They are more careful in their statements, more modest in their language and pay more attention to typography and illustration.

Advertising is prepared now-a-days more carefully than ever before and there is more of it every day.

And by the same token it is going to be more interesting and profitable to the readers.

Westfield.

The Town Council of Westfield has granted permission to the Public Service Railway Company to straighten its tracks at Summit avenue and Park street. The company has bought the lot on the northeast corner and will run over the private right of way. The curve has always been dangerous.

A large party of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Presbyterian church went to Springfield Tuesday evening to attend a conference.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Another miniature musical comedy, but differing from those that have been seen here before, will top the list in the new bill at the Plainfield Theatre commencing today. It is entitled "The Stage Struck Kids," and there are ten juvenile performers in the company, each one capable of doing solo work in both singing and dancing. Advanced reports from other cities where the kiddies have been seen state that the set is one that merits the applause that always follows their exit.

Each of the other five numbers on the program are all meritorious and were secured by Manager Shannon after much effort. The list comprises Genevieve Matthews, late of the "Whip" company and the Drury Lane Theatre, London, a classy entertainer; Jack and Harry Sidney, character impersonators; Frank and Charles, in an absolutely new offering, and Mildred Wood, the queen of syncopated songs.

The program today is made stronger by the presentation of the latest installment of "Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford," the comedy serial film that has set the whole town talking. Tomorrow night there will be another of those highly amusing and well paying "Country Stores." Manager Shannon has a number of surprises in store for the patrons, none of which will be made public until the time of the performances tomorrow night.

MOVIES ADVERTISE BOLIVIA'S INDUSTRIES

South American Republic the First to Use Films for Such Purposes.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—The republic of Bolivia in South America is the first foreign country to make use of the movies in advertising its industries among the business men of the United States. Four reels of films have been prepared, based upon subjects that are intended to give some idea of the wealth, resources, and business activities and customs of that nation, and these have already been shown to several organizations of American business men, through the courtesy of the Bolivian minister at Washington.

The Chicago branch office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce, has had several opportunities to present these views before important clubs and associations, and a notable degree of interest was aroused. While much attention has been given in the past few months to South American affairs, this is the first time that any considerable number of business men has been able to observe the actual daily conditions under which the activities of one of the nations take place. This method of gaining the attention of the people of the United States is found to be effective to a degree exceeding anything that could be accomplished by printed descriptions, and at the several exhibitions of the films in the district around Chicago, the representatives of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce have noted the value that was placed upon the views by men who have in the past had no dealings with South America, but were looking to an extension of trade in that direction.

The film and the lantern slide are both being used by the Bureau to bring the various sections of this country into touch with the foreign trade work, for the views relating to the work of the Bureau itself have been cordially received when exhibited by the various branch offices throughout the United States.

SEEK INFORMATION ABOUT STATE PATROL

New Jersey Chamber of Commerce is Making Study of Question.

Paul Willard Garrett, investigator for the New Jersey State Chamber of Commerce, 15 Exchange place, Jersey City, is making a thorough study of the question of State police with the object of determining precisely the need for a State Police Patrol in the various counties of New Jersey.

The idea of a State police—known in Pennsylvania as the "Constabulary," in Texas as the "Rangers," in Connecticut as "State Police," in South Carolina as "Rural Police," in Massachusetts as "District Police"—is an innovation for New Jersey.

A State police system is designed to supplement the local police force and by an effective State-wide jurisdiction, deter theft, murder, forestalling, chicken stealing, riots, rural assaults and battery, barn burning in rural sections, road laws, etc., giving attention in especial to these violations in the rural sections of the country. Except for extraordinary emergencies when a State force may be ordered into a municipality, the municipalities are normally sufficiently protected by their own local police.

At the present time in this State there is no protection afforded to the rural sections of the country other than that afforded by the various constables of the rural districts and the county sheriff. Speaking in the main there is no police patrol in the county outside of cities and towns which have their own police force.

The sheriff, and the constable, do not and are not constituted to do patrol duty. They must necessarily await calls. There is, undoubtedly, some need for additional protection to the rural communities in the line of police patrol. Whether that need is sufficient to enact a law creating a State Police Patrol this session will depend upon the manner in which the voters get behind the movement and frankly express their personal feelings.

What crimes have been prevalent in a community? What need is there for a constant eye on forests, fisheries, etc.? What instances of chicken stealing, murder, theft, barn burning, troublesome tramps, rural assaults and battery, rape, etc., within a county? To what extent would a State police, constantly on the job and reputed for efficiency, deter the prevalence of such crimes? These are a few of the questions which the voter must answer.

Persons who are interested in this subject, one way or another, and who know of instances of the need of additional State protection should convey that information to the New Jersey State Chamber of Commerce.

—That funny fellow Scoop is on the classified page.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

Sir—Apropos of the reports in the daily papers of a consultation at Washington between the President and certain Jersey Democrats of influence, and quite regardless of whether these reports are reliable or not, the question arises, by whom is the Democratic candidate for the United State Senate from this State to be selected next year? By the Democrats who enroll at the primaries acting under the Geran act, or by a few self-appointed party leaders? Are we to have a repetition of the farce by which the Democratic candidates for the State Assembly were named in Union county? One would think that the repudiation of the clique who so managed affairs that there was no contest at the primary, would demonstrate to the gentlemen who engineered that trick that though the voters may be prevented from exercising their rights in the primary, there is no way of compelling them to ratify their action. The election returns show that conclusively. The fact to be impressed on the minds of the voters is that the Geran act will not enforce itself, and that if they do not interest themselves in the selection of candidates for the primaries, the result will be that candidates will be named who never could have been nominated even by an old-time convention. The choice of candidates is the most difficult problem that confronts an electorate, and as yet no proper attention has been given to its solution. In the morning Times it is hinted that the gentlemen who plan to relieve the Democratic voters of the trouble of making a choice are considering the plan of deferring to the prejudices of certain voters of Essex and Hudson, who are not pleased with the view entertained by the great majority of the people in this county concerning the merits of the several belligerents in the great war. That would be a fine exhibition of Americanism! Let those self-constituted leaders remember the old adage that you can lead a horse to the water but you cannot make him drink. As between a Democratic candidate who should place Germany first and a Republican who should stand for the United States first, last and all the time, I think several thousand Democrats would not hesitate. For my part I should not. It is not too early for Democrats to get together and make their plans for the presentation at the primary of men who will do honor to the State and to the county. Who will answer the call?

EDWARD C. PEARSON.
November 18, 1915.

Washington—Rehearsals are being conducted for the big Susan B. Anthony pageant which is to be a feature of the convention of the Congressional Union, beginning December 6. Miss Hazel Mackaye, the author of the production, is in charge of the rehearsals. The pageant will have a number of "episodes" showing the growth of the movement begun by Susan B. Anthony, the noted leader of equal suffrage in the old days.

Y. M. C. A. WORKERS GET 1,201 NEW MEMBERS, WHICH IS NEAR WORLD'S RECORD, FOR CONTEST

MOST SUCCESSFUL CAMPAIGN EVER KNOWN ON THE CONTINENT CLOSED IN A BLAZE OF GLORY LAST NIGHT.

WILL BE REWARDED WITH A NEW BUILDING

President Murray Assures Canvassers That the People of Plainfield Will Show Their Appreciation by Erecting An Adequate Home for the Celebration of the Golden Jubilee of the Association in 1917—Credit to Leaders.

That the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., which will be fifty years old in 1917, will celebrate its golden anniversary in a handsome new building as a reward for the 1,2001 new members secured in the contest which ended in a blaze of glory at the dinner last night, was assured by President W. D. Murray in his speech of thanks to workers who made the evening's celebration possible.

"The great increase in membership brings forcibly before the people the great need of better quarters," said the pioneer leader in young men's Christian work in Plainfield, as he stood before the three hundred enthusiastic workers immediately following the announcement that exactly 1,200 new members had been secured in the six days, "and we believe that the people of Plainfield will see to it that we celebrate our jubilee in a new and adequate home."

When all of the teams had reported and scorers had totaled the work of the campaign, it was announced that 1,197 men and boys had been added to the roll of the association during the six days of canvassing. J. E. Kimball, captain of the Overland team, which is made up of members of the board of directors, immediately arose and asked that the directors be permitted to donate three boys' memberships, the recipients of which will be selected later, in order that the grand total might be brought to an even 1,200. Amid a riotous outburst of applause the figures were changed so that the score board showed twelve hundred, or one and one-half times the minimum set at the beginning of the campaign.

Dining Hall Crowded.

When General Chairman L. D. Albin rapped for order at 7 o'clock last night each of the twenty-five tables in the dining hall was filled to capacity, the gallery was crowded and there were watchers standing on the steps. It was the largest attendance of the entire week, and many women came to view the celebration attendant upon a victorious ending.

HANDSOME GIFTS AWARDED WINNERS AT EUCHRE PARTY

Handsome and useful gifts were awarded the winning players at the euchre given by the young women of St. Joseph's church, in the new hall, last night, and the affair was a success both from a social and financial standpoint. The hall was artistically decorated for the occasion, American flags and palms and cut flowers being used lavishly throughout.

The committees responsible for the success of the affair were as follows: Reception, Mrs. A. E. Kenney, chairman; Misses Anna McGinnis and Elsie Moulton; refreshments, Mrs. James E. Bailey, chairman, Misses Anna Howe, Edna Ryan and Catherine Daly; decoration, Miss Anna Cooper, chairman; Misses Anna Regan and Anna V. Daly.

MISS FOOTE LEAVES GOOD CITIZENSHIP COMMITTEE

The Junior Conference of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union was held at the Springfield Presbyterian church this week. Miss Mary Hoagland, superintendent of the junior department, was in charge of the meeting and delegates from most of the societies in the county were present. F. Duer Randolph, president of the Union, announced that Miss Nellie K. Foote, had resigned as chairman of the good citizenship committee on account of pressure of business and stated that George H. Burt, of Roselle, was appointed in her stead and also that Ira B. Wheeler, of the First Presbyterian church of Elizabeth, had been appointed a member of that committee.

Under the auspices of the Matlack Bible Class of the First Baptist church a cake sale will be held tomorrow, the proceeds of which will be used for missionary purposes.

BOOM MAYOR CLARK FOR COMMITTEE SECRETARY

Prominent Republicans of North Plainfield and all G. O. P. organizations in the borough have endorsed Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., for the secretaryship of the Joint Appropriations Committee, and have prevailed upon Senator W. W. Smalley, of Bound Brook, to aid them in bringing about his election. Republican leaders are of the opinion that Mayor Clark will make a hot fight for the legislative job and are prepared to back him to the limit.

During his connection with the government affairs of the borough, Mayor Clark has established an enviable record for himself, and his constituents declare that he is entitled to more than passing consideration for the State office.

NOTABLE SPEAKERS FOR GRACE CHURCH DINNER

An unusual chance to hear Henry A. Wise Wood, chairman of committee on "National Preparedness," and president of the American Society of Aeronautic Engineers, and also the Rev. J. R. Atkinson, former dean of St. Phillips' Cathedral, Atlanta, Ga., on "How Should a Christian Feel About the War?" is presented to the Men's Club, of Grace church, and their guests who attend the annual dinner at the Parish House on Wednesday, November 24.

Tickets for the dinner can be obtained of the secretary, W. J. Tailamy, 118 East Sixth street, if applied for before November 20, and the club will welcome men who may be unable to attend the dinner but want to hear the speakers at about 8 o'clock.

MONROE DOCTRINE MAY BE IGNORED

Fear of This, Says Miss Janet Richards, is Country's Greatest Menace.

AN INVASION POSSIBLE

Pacifists Are Much Concerned As to What the Next Congress May Do, Declares the Speaker—Some Important Measures to be Considered.

"The fear that the Monroe Doctrine will be totally ignored by foreign powers is the greatest menace that faces our country at the conclusion of this war," declared Miss Janet E. Richards in the second of her series of current event lectures before a capacity audience of women in the Hartridge Auditorium yesterday afternoon. She surveyed the question from many angles in an able way. Realizing the fact that South and Central America hold millions of dollars' worth of undeveloped wealth, there is a possibility for such an invasion, even though the nations have thus far heeded our contention to keep out of these countries. Supplementing her deductions, the speaker told of her knowledge of more frequent sessions of the Pan-American Union at Washington, at which the twenty-one republic delegates of the Western Hemisphere join for mutual interests, and these frequent meetings signify that something is in the air.

Miss Richards dwelt on the appre-

FRATERNITY ADOPTS SLOGAN OF PROGRESS

R. W. Aldrich Makes Plea for a Forward Advance of Proficiency.

In support of his contention that the local body of the I. C. S. Fraternity should be more progressive and active, R. W. Aldrich, occupying the chair last night at the meeting of the Abraham Lincoln Chapter, No. 122, showed why a going forward or onward advance improvement of proficiency was essential to the betterment of the fraternity. He won the co-operation of the different committees and big things are looked forward to.

Substantiating the president's efforts the house committee was authorized to fit the meeting rooms up with new furniture and furnishings, and Chairman Van Hoesen has promised to have alterations completed and the suites installed by next meeting night.

The executive committee acted on the resignation of Treasurer C. E. Varien, and elected Phillip L. Huenke to fill the vacancy. Harry W. Swivel was elected as head of the executive committee and C. Ivan Hill was chosen vice president. The newly elected officers responded with very appropriate remarks.

The initiation committee, comprising Arthur L. Grisley, John R. Barnes and George L. Morrison, chairman, was appointed and will take immediate steps to frame a ritual and initiation program. Harry J. Rider was elected to membership. A "Better and Bigger" Fraternity has been adopted as the slogan and much activity will be in progress.

DIDN'T KNOW THE LAW.

Placilo Proto, recently of Italy, was arraigned in the city police court this morning on a charge of allowing his horse to stand in the business section without being tied. Through an interpretor the defendant made a plea of ignorance of the laws of this country, and he was sentenced to pay a fine of $5, which was later suspended with the proviso that he would not repeat the offense.

RUNYON RE-ASSERTS DECISION TO FIGHT

Local Assemblyman Determined to Stick in Race for Speakership.

Assemblyman William N. Runyon, of this city, yesterday reasserted his determination to stick in the race for the Speakership of the House through a statement given out by his colleague, Assemblyman Arthur N. Pierson, of Westfield, and at the same time put to rout the talk which has connected his name with the State treasurership. He announces that he will positively not be a candidate for the treasurership, but makes his position in the Assembly Speakership race clear.

As a reason for his decision to stay in the contest Assemblyman Runyon cites the fact that a majority of the Republicans in the House have prevailed upon him to make a fight, and for that reason he declines to step down for the candidacy of the Essex county man, Charles C. Pilgrim, who has been endorsed by the Essex delegation and some of the South Jersey G. O. P. leaders.

"I am not a candidate for State treasurer," he said. His statement continues:

"I was elected by the people of Union county to represent them, and shall do so to the best of my ability, whether in the Speaker's chair or on the floor of the House.

"I stand as a candidate for Speaker, without a pledge or promise to anyone. If I am elected, I will be elected on this platform. Neither my vote nor the vote of the other two members for Union county will be pledged to any candidate for treasurer, Governor or Senator. These matters are entirely aside from the matter of Speaker of the Assembly, and shall be decided on their merits when the time comes.

"If Mr. Pilgrim is elected I shall give him my loyal support, and I feel perfectly sure that Mr. Pilgrim will accord me the same if I am elected."

MOVING TO POUGHKEEPSIE.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Peterson, of 835 West Third street, will remove today to Poughkeepsie. He was formerly employed by the International Motor Company at the local plant. The Peterson household goods will be carried to Poughkeepsie by H. Clifford Smith's Saurer auto truck. The trip will be commenced tonight and will take about ten hours, one way, the distance being 125 miles.

LECTURE ON PHOTOGRAPHY.

Colonel Haver delivered a lecture before an interested audience in the Plainfield High School Auditorium last night on "Modern Photography." He dealt with his subject from a descriptive point of view, and exhibited a thorough acquaintance with the topic. The speaker outlined the most up-to-date methods of developing and bringing out the good points of photographs, and his talk was very instructive.

Mrs. Gilford Mayer, of Park avenue, who has been quite ill, is said to be slightly improved. On Monday she observed the eighty-fourth anniversary of her birthday.

A NEW CHALLENGE TO AN OLD CHURCH

Rev. Dr. J. C. Day Gives Inspiring Address to Federation of Societies.

SACRIFICE OF CHURCH

Americans Must "Get in Touch" with Foreigners and Working Class if They Are to Be Won for Christ, says Speaker.

"A New Challenge to An Old Church" was the subject of a vigorous and interesting address at an interdenominational meeting of the Plainfield Federation of Women's Missionary Societies yesterday afternoon, in the First Baptist church. The speaker was the Rev. Dr. Jonathan C. Day, of the International church of the Labor Temple, New York City. Dr. Day told of his work among the working men and shop girls of the East Side tenements; of the strenuous efforts to get in personal contact with the working class, and the success which is now being achieved.

The speaker declared, in substance, that the churches had become "sleeping places" as well as meeting places, and thus lethargy had allowed the church to get entirely out of touch with the working classes. The toilers had come to look on the church as belonging to the wealthy and devoid of all sympathy for the man who toils for a living.

Dr. Day related a number of instances of his experiences in building

THESE BELGIAN BABIES IN NEED OF A ROOF

Generous Plainfielders Have Opportunity to Aid a Worthy Cause.

If there were twenty-five orphans in Plainfield who were discovered to be without suitable shelter for the winter, the people of this city would remedy the condition so quickly that only one appeal for help would be needed. The Plainfield Belgian Relief Commission knows of hundreds and thousands of orphans who are sleeping on the floors of cold buildings, and hundreds of others for whom even the buildings are going to be hard to find. Last year this city responded nobly to the appeal for funds for this worthy cause, and the same condition confronts the people today that was prevalent a year ago.

With the winter already making life miserable for these youngsters, ranging in age from six months to six years, the local Belgian Relief Commission has undertaken the task of raising the money to buy a portable house, equip it with 100 cot cribs, mattresses and blankets and to furnish two sets of sleeping garments for each of the children that it will house.

They have some money for this worthy purpose, but not enough by any means. Plans are being made to raise the balance rapidly, and among other means this appeal is made through the Plainfield Daily Press. Through the columns of the Press several hundred dollars was raised last winter, and it is hoped that the friends of the cause will again contribute liberally. Last year Plainfield had an unemployed problem of its own, and it was necessary to get together a large sum of money to care for our people. This year that is reduced to a minimum, and it is hoped that the charitably inclined people who helped the local cause last year will divert their contributions this year to the work of helping the stricken ones across the sea.

There will be a meeting of the local commitee on Monday. A report that a liberal sum of money had been subscribed through the Daily Press would greatly encourage the members of the commission to continue their splendid work. Who will be the first?

NO DECISION YET IN LIGHT LITIGATION

Attorneys for City, Utility Board and Public Service Argue Case.

Trenton, Nov. 19.—Following the completion of the argument this morning, the Court of Errors and Appeals reserved decision in the appeal of the City of Plainfield from the decision of the Supreme Court against it in the suit of the Public Service Electric Company to set aside the order of the State Board of Public Utility Commissioners directing the company to supply free electric lighting in the city offices. The case is an important one because it involves the whole question of free service to municipalities by public utility corporations, and whether such service is a violation of the provision of the public utility act against discrimination.

Arguing the appeal for the City of Plainfield, Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed maintained that the obligation under which the free lighting was furnished was not affected by the subsequent enactment of the Utility Act. He contended that the Legislature, by the enactment of the Public Utility Act, did not intend to nullify or affect in any way the lawful obligation of the company to Plainfield. He went further and insisted that there was nothing to show that the contract between the company and the city constitutes an undue or unreasonable preference.

Frank H. Sommer, counsel for the Utility Board, argued in favor of the Board's order and the reversal of the Supreme Court decision. He supported Mr. Reed by claiming that the provision for free service to the municipality does not involve undue or unreasonable discrimination and was not voided by the Public Utility Act.

The argument for the Public Service Company was made by Frank Bergen, its counsel, of Elizabeth. He disputed the jurisdiction of the Utility Board in the case, and claimed that one of the principal objects of the Utility Act was to abolish discrimination of all kinds by utility corporations.

"Inequalities created by agreement or by practices condemned by sound public policy," he continued, "whether originally lawful or not, ought to be abolished."

Germans Make Air Raids.

Berlin, Nov. 19 (by wireless).—German War Office gave out following:

"Balkan theatre—During our pursuit of the Serbians yesterday 500 more prisoners were taken.

"Western theatre—In and near the Argonne forest and in the Vosges there were artillery duels. A German air fleet attacked the English camp west of Poperinghe."

War Note to Greece.

Copenhagen, Nov. 19.—German papers say that the Allies have sent an ultimatum to Greece. The foregoing despatch was passed by the British censor at London.

Bulgars Advance Steadily.

Budapest, Nov. 19.—Despatches from the Serbian front state that the Bulgarians have taken the heights overlooking Kursunile to the north and east of that town. This is an advance of twenty-five miles in the last two days on the Toplica River from Prokuplie. The Serbs, it is stated, held the valley firmly at Kursunile, which is about 35 miles west of Nish. The Bulgarian right is in touch by patrol with Germans at Brus on Rasino. The Bulgarians have about 60 miles to advance to Novi Bazar by way of the river headwaters of the river, and the passes across Borovniak mountain, which are more than 7,000 feet in height.

Germans Defend Varna.

Heavy German artillery has arrived at Varna for the defense of that Bulgarian port against the Russian Black Sea fleet.

Italy Will Give Aid.

Paris, Nov. 19.—The Rome correspondent of Petit Parisien says that he is authorized to announce that Italy is participating equally with Russia in the negotiations at Athens and is to prevent the Bulgarians reaching the Adriatic, firmly determined not to let Greece become an ally of her enemies. Italy is prepared also to intervene in Albania.

Italian Scouts Busy.

Rome, Nov. 19.—Italian war statement:

"The importance of our offensive operations in the Agua Valley and on the heights to northwest of Gorizia is emphasized by latest reports from the front ascertaining the presence of numerous enemy trenches and entanglements. On the heights our troops commenced a methodical attack engaging some divisions of the enemy on the front, while others ascended the sides of the valley with the intention of surrounding the advanced positions of the enemy. Supported by artillery our infantry attacks lasted from the 13th to the 17th, when our divisions met at the head of the valley. Only a few of the enemy succeeded in escaping."

London, Nov. 19.—A complete agreement between England and France on all military and diplomatic matters was established at the joint meeting of the Anglo-French war boards in Paris. At a full meeting of the British cabinet today Premier Asquith made a report upon the conference and told his colleagues of the progress made toward unification in carrying on the war.

Venice Again Attacked.

Vienna, Nov. 19.—Austria hydroaeroplanes have again made a successful attack on Venice by dropping bombs on the city.

British Monitor Sunk.

P. S. C. TO INCREASE ITS CAPITAL STOCK

Company to Raise $3,000,000 for Extensions of Its Several Plants.

Trenton, Nov. 19.—The Public Service Electric Company today obtained from the State Board of Public Utility Commissioners permission to issue $3,000,000 worth of additional capital stock. The consent is limited, however, the State Board reserving for future consideration the matter of charging to "capital account" requirements for sinking funds, and withholding the approval of this proposition.

The proceeds of the new stock are to be used in extensions of the plants of the company. Specifically, the object of selling the new stock is to provide funds for $2,372,981.23 worth of work approved by the company prior to June 1 last, and to reimburse the company for $730,465.84 worth of expenditures for extensions already made.

The authorized capital stock of the company is $30,000,000, of which $19,000,000 had been issued and was outstanding before this new issue was allowed.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Among the attractions at Proctor's today and tomorrow is the world's funniest comedian, Charlie Chaplin, in "A Night In the Show," and a romantic drama with many thrills and splendid photography entitled "The Perils of Temptation." The headline vaudeville act is "Fun In An Actor's Boarding House." The other big feature is a thrilling circus act consisting of ten acrobatic Arabs who tumble about the stage in hair-raising feats of skill and strength. One of the special features tonight will be the popular "Neal of the Navy" serial. Tomorrow's matinee as usual will be for the children, when toys will be given to all the kiddies who attend. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, "The Birth of a Nation" will replace the vaudeville, and "bazaar night" will be postponed until the following Wednesday, when a double "bazaar" will be offered. Starting December 6, Triangle plays will be shown coming direct from the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York city, and the first week's features will include Raymond Hitchcock in "My Valet," Douglas Fairbanks in "The Lamb," and Dustin Farnum in "The Iron Strain."

S. P. C. A. CLAIM LACK OF SUPPORT

Mrs. S. G. VanHoesen Thinks Evidence Warrants An Investigation.

Those at the head of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals' work in this city believe that they are [illegible] ing the support they deserve from certain municipal departments, and if the data they put forward as evidence of this fact is to be taken at its face value, there is every reason to warrant an investigation and possible adjustment of conditions. During the past year this society has, through its agent, Mrs. Stephen G. VanHoesen, expended considerable money and time in aiding the city to get rid of homeless cats and other animals of an objectionable nature. These cast-offs have been put to death in the most humane way in a gas tank donated for the purpose by Samuel W. Rushmore. The latter also supplies the gas and an executioner, but the hitch has cropped out in the manner of the disposing with the dead bodies.

According to Mrs. VanHoesen, who has been most actively identified with the work, neither the city street department nor the Board of Health is willing to shoulder the responsibility for burying the dead animals, and hence the society is being put to considerable trouble and expense in getting rid of the carcasses. There is at present no definite burying place and no system attached to the method of disposal.

Mrs. VanHoesen claims that she has made unsuccessful efforts to induce the street department and the Board of Health to assist her in the work, and intends to enlist the aid of city officials in inducing some municipal department to accept the burden. It is the opinion of the S. P. C. A. authorities that inasmuch as this association goes to the trouble of properly killing the beasts, that some co-operation from the municipality thus benefited should be forthcoming.

The stray animal problem has been so systematized by the S. P. C. A. that any local resident who wants to get rid of a worthless beast can do so by communicating with Mrs. Van Hoesen. The latter provides for the execution work, but has no funds to go any further.

It Pays to Secure a Tenant Who Pays.

The uncertain sort of tenant is easy to find. He is always answering the call of the window sign of "To Let." He is easy to please. Even a rather high rental does not frighten him away.

But the Stay-and-Pay tenant is not so easy to secure. He is surer of what he wants. He does not take the first house, or apartment, or store that he finds. He watches and answers "To Let" Ads.

And to secure him for your tenant is a good day's work—a good week's work.

Property that is advertised adequately in the Plainfield Daily Press is rarely rented injudiciously.

JOSEPH HILLSTROM SHOT AS MURDERER

I. W. W. Hobo Poet Faced Executioner at Sunrise in Salt Lake City.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Nov. 19.—Joseph Hillstrom, the I. W. W. poet, convicted of the murder of J. G. Morrison and his son, Arling, was shot to death at 7:41 a .m. today, after efforts by President Wilson to obtain a reprieve for the condemned man had failed and after the State Board of Pardons had decided that the eleventh hour evidence which had come to light was insufficient ground for the reprieve.

In a telegram sent to President Wilson yesterday afternoon Governor Spry criticized the Chief Executive for his second intervention in the case, and told him that the sentence of the court would be carried out to meet the ends of justice.

Hillstrom, who was generally known as Joe Hill, the Hobo poet, was an active member of the I. W. W. and the author of the hobo marching song, "Hallelujah, I'm a Bum." Ever since his arrest it has been alleged by his I. W. W. brethren and by many Socialists that Hillstrom was being made a victim of class prejudice because of his revolutionary activities, and they carried on an energetic campaign in his behalf, enlisting the aid of President Wilson, the Swedish minister, Hillstrom being a Swedish subject, and many other prominent persons. This week the American Federation of Labor, in convention in San Francisco, asked for clemency for Hillstrom.

Although protesting his innocence, Hillstrom refused to tell his whereabout at the time of the shooting or to explain how he received the wound which led to his arrest, asserting that to do so would stain the good name of a leading Salt Lake woman.

"TRIP THROUGH THE ORIENT" IS ENJOYED

Y. W. C. A. Arrange Pleasing Entertainment for Its Members and Friends.

"A Trip Through the Orient" was the form of entertainment at the Y. W. C. A. last evening. About ninety-five people made the tour starting from an improvised railway station, where maps, time tables and attractive posters of Oriental countries were displayed.

Tickets for the railway ride were given out in the form of pledge cards for support of foreign Y. W. C. A. work; and each coach full of passengers in turn heard in a few words from the general secretary of the features and needs of the work in Oriental countries.

The first country at which the tourists arrived was Egypt and here in the midst of tapestries, brasses, rare rugs and curios, enhanced by mysterious candle light, each one could partake of Turkish coffee and fig paste before passing on to the wonders of India, China and Japan. Many beautiful pictures and objects of art were on exhibition, and in each room charming hostesses in native costume entertained the travelers and offered the light refreshments appropriate to their country.

Chief among the interesting things in China was a remarkable family of dolls in native dress; four child widows and an infinitesimal daughter of the Parsees added greatly to the realism of the scene in India; while Japanese maidens seated upon the floor before distracting little tea trays were enough to persuade even a somnambulist to take "just a half cup." All the travelers returned safely to Plainfield with the conviction that the Orient is a place well worth visiting and many left in the hands of the association secretaries their pledges to contribute to the foreign work.

Miss Edna Brown was chairman of the committee for the occasion, and those in charge of the various rooms were as follows: Mrs. E. C. R. Laidlaw, Egypt; the Misses Beatrice Gardner and Myrtle Federman, India; Miss Margaret Mead, China; Miss Marion Brown, Japan.

The Daly forces in Bayonne have lost out in their certiorari attack on the Hennessey preferential primary act, under which the Bayonne Commission Government election was held, the Supreme Court giving a decision this week that certiorari is not the proper method of procedure. Former Mayor Daly, who hopes to secure a place on the commission through his court action, is taking the stand that the Hennessy amendment, which forces the voter to vote for five candidates as first choice under penalty of losing his ballot, is unconstitutional and insists that many ballots cast for him only in the first choice column, and which were thrown out, should have been counted.

The certiorari proceedings having been thrown out, application will be made to Attorney-General Westcott to begin quo warranto action to test the right of the present commissioners to hold their offices.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

The headline to my interview in this evening's Press, to wit, "United States Senator Has No Excuse to Offer for His Opposition to Wilson," is misleading and conveys a false impression. I am not opposed to President Wilson; far to the contrary. I feel that Woodrow Wilson has made a most admirable President, and I favor his renomination. I believe he will be unanimously nominated and triumphantly elected.

My difference with the President is on the "Panama Canal tolls" measure, and a couple of minor appointments. I have no apology or excuse to offer for my opposition.

CHARLES L. RYDER, SR., HONORED ON BIRTHDAY

Charles L. Ryder, Sr., of Grant avenue, was tendered a surprise gathering at his home last night, in honor of the anniversary of his birthday. The affair was arranged by members of the family and included relatives and a few intimate friends. Features of an informal program which passed several hours in a pleasant manner were vocal selections by William Ryder and Thomas M. Muir, recitations by George Aldridge, and piano duets by William Ryder and George Aldridge. Refreshments were served at 11 o'clock, at which time "Auld Lang Syne" was sung and many happy returns were wished to the celebrant.

Mr. Ryder is a native of Maine, but has made his home in Plainfield for the past twenty years. He was employed for many years by the Public Service Corporation and its predecessors in railway lines, and was the first employe in this division to be retired on a pension. He has many friends throughout the city and borough who extend congratulations on his birthday.

JACK MARTIN CHIEF OF POND SHOP PATROL

Following the action of other plants throughout the country engaged in the manufacture of munitions for the Allies, the Pond Tool Works has placed guards about its South Second street factory. Three men will keep the entire property under surveillance at night, while one will be on patrol through the day. Jack Martin, Plainfield's well known baseball player, has been selected as the day man, and will keep his eagle eye on all strangers entering or passing near the grounds. He will also have charge of the men who are to do night duty.

The International Motor Company has had guards about the Saurer plant on West Front street for the past year, former Police Captain Frederickson having the position of chief. While no disturbances have occurred at the shop that would indicate any German influence, the company believes that the presence of the guards has had a tendency to offset any trouble-making designs. Many of the large concerns throughout the East which have war contracts have had a great deal of interference by what is believed to be Prussian sympathizers, and as a result practically every shop is under guard to prevent trouble.

RESCUE MISSION NOTE.

L. N. Moyer, who, in his early life, was connected with the Spring Garden Mission, Chicago, where "Billy" Sunday was converted, will speak this evening at the local Rescue Mission. Mr. Moyer will relate some of the happenings of the Chicago mission in his address of this evening. Special music will feature the service. The general public is invited to attend.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A surprise party was tendered Carl Ulmer, of North Front street, at his home last night, when thirty-five friends called at his home to wish him many happy returns of the day. Games, singing and dancing were enjoyed until a late hour. Piano solos were rendered by Carl Ulmer, Mr. Woodworth and Miss Elsie Theis. Guests were present from Dunellen, New York and this city.

Buyers Are Found by Advertising—Because They Are Opportunity-Hunters!

If you have something to sell—real estate, personal property of any sort—there's a buyer for it. You don't know who he is, or where he is. You'd be helpless in trying to locate him—but for the fact that he is trying to locate you!

For buyers are opportunity-seekers. And they have learned that the Plainfield Daily Press classified columns are 'the Happy Hunting Grounds' for opportunities. Thus, when your "ad" starts upon its quest it meets the man for whom it was written—also upon his quest. And that's how "results" follow classified advertising.

CARE OF GOOD CLOTHES.

The Finer the Stuff the More Watchful One Should Be.

It is a very common mistake to believe that good materials, whether of cotton, silk or wool, need less care than cheap ones. How often does one complain of the lack of wearing quality in a garment for which a big price has been paid. Yet, most frequently, what has worn out the fabric has not been actual use, but the neglect it has suffered.

One of the principal differences between good and cheap materials is that the better grades are finer spun. This may mean that the fabric is stronger and, in proportion to the uses to which it is put, may wear longer, but it also means that each tiny thread by itself is weaker and more apt to injury. Anything which may attack the threads one by one, therefore, does more harm with fine goods than with coarse.

No matter how careful one may try to be, clothes that one wears gradually get a trifle of the grease from the perspiration of the body. In spite of constant watching clothes will become dusty. This combination of dust and body moisture forms a regular breeding ground for tiny little vegetable growths. These are so small that it takes the most powerful microscope even to see them.

In themselves these bacteria do but little harm, but many of them set free an acid which eats into the fiber of the material. If the individual fiber is coarse the deposit of the acid upon it is not enough to eat all the way through, but if it is sheer or woven of fine threads one by one the threads are eaten through and the texture weakened.

Good clothing, instead of being kept shut away in boxes and drawers, should be constantly aired and shaken. The finer the material the more often should it be looked after. A coarse piece of goods will wear out by using, a fine piece by being laid away.—New York American.

MILITARY STRATEGY.

Retreating Through a City Is Disastrous to an Army.

If you suffer defeat in front of a great town and have to retreat through it under the blows of the victorious enemy you are in the worst possible position for conducting that retreat. The streets of the town (but few of which will run parallel to your course and can, therefore, serve as avenues of escape for your army) are so many defiles in which your columns will get hopelessly congested. The operation may be compared to the pouring of too much liquid into a funnel which has too small an orifice. Masses of your transport will remain clogged outside the place. You will run the risk of a partial and perhaps of a complete disaster as the enemy presses on.

There is very much more than this. A great town cannot but contain, if you have long occupied it, the material of your organization. You will probably abandon documents which the enemy should not see. You will certainly, in the pressure of such a flight, lose accumulated stores. Again, the transverse streets are so many points of "leakage" into which your congested columns will bulge out and get confused. Again, you will be almost necessarily dealing with the complications of a mass of civilian conditions which should never be allowed to interrupt a military operation.

In general, to fight in front of a great town when the chances are against you is as great an error as to fight in front of a marsh with few causeways. So far as mere topography is concerned, it is a greater error still.—From "The Elements of the Great War," by Hilaire Belloc.

Seville Nights.

In all the principal places and gardens of Seville moving picture screens are erected and small tables and chairs set out, the exhibitors either making their profits from the drinks sold or by rental of chairs at 2 cents each. Thousands of people go nightly to the different plazas and gardens, and the entire life of the city for about four months centers around these moving picture shows.—Commerce Reports.

Leakage In Steam Pipes.

To make a permanent cement for stopping leakage in steam pipes where caulking or plugging is impossible, mix black oxide of manganese and raw linseed oil, using enough oil with the manganese to bring it to a thick paste. Apply to the pipe or joint at leak. If the pipe be kept sufficiently warm to absorb the oil from the manganese, in twenty-four hours the cement will be as hard as the iron pipe.

The Happy Mean.

"Why does Miss Oldgirl wear such exceedingly youthful costumes? She doesn't expect, does she, any one will believe her as young as all that?"

"Oh, no, but she hopes the observer will strike an average between her age and that of her apparel."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Ribbon of the Garter.

The dark blue ribbon now worn by the Knights of the Garter was changed to its present shade from one much lighter in tone in the year 1622. The pictures of Charles I. by Vandyke always show the lighter shade.—London Mail

Quiet Times.

Mrs. Kelly—This neighborhood seems a bit noisy, Mrs. Flynn. Mrs. Flynn—Yis, th' only toime it's quiet here is whin the elevated train goes by and drowns th' noise.—Judge.

—There's a job for you—if you have a good head and willing hands and feet. But you must advertise yourself into the job.

GRATITUDE.

Patron—Ass!

Omnibus—Yes, sir! Thank you sir! So many just calls me a donkey, sir!

A MODERN ARGUMENT

Wife (to husband who has just come home from the office)—Why didn't you telephone to the express company as I asked you to?

Husband—Do you think it is entirely fair to put it in that way?

Wife—What way? What do you mean?

Husband—In the way you put it.

Wife—I don't know what you're talking about.

Husband—I mean is it fair for you to ask a question in the negative which is the same as asserting that I did not telephone to the express company when you don't know whether I did or not.

Wife—Oh well, what do you want me to say?

Husband—Instead of saying "Why didn't you telephone the express company?" you should have said, "Did you telephone the express company?"

Wife—I don't see what difference it makes. Anyway there's nothing to fuss about. If you didn't telephone you didn't telephone. Now why didn't you? That's what I'm trying to find out. You said you would. If you had said you wouldn't I would have done it myself.

Husband—I don't like to argue this way about a small matter.

Wife—I am not arguing.

Husband—Yes you are.

Wife—No I'm not.

Husband—Then what do you call it?

Wife—I don't call it anything. I am just trying to find out whether you telephoned to the express company or not.

Husband—You go about it in a very funny way, I must say. Now, what I don't like is for you to assume I didn't when you don't know whether I did or not.

Wife—Well, he didn't come anyway. That's all I know.

Husband—That's no proof at all and you know it!

Wife—Proof of what?

Husband—Of whether I telephoned or not.

Wife—Well, did you or didn't you?

Husband—No, I did not.

Wife—I thought not. If you had you wouldn't have got so angry. Why didn't you?

Husband—But you just said I did.

Wife—Did what?

Husband—Get angry.

Wife—Of course you got angry, but why didn't you telephone?

Husband—Because I went to the express office instead.

Wife—Why didn't you say so in the first place?

Husband—You didn't ask me.

Wife—Are you a child that you have to be asked everything in words of one syllable? Now will you please tell me why you didn't?

Husband—They said that they didn't deliver the hat.

Wife—That's perfectly absurd.

Husband—But to the wrong address.

Wife—Wasn't it addressed right?

Husband—Yes, it was.

Wife—Then why didn't he deliver it right?

Husband—Because the driver read the address wrong.

Wife—Do you suppose I'll ever get it?

Husband—I do.

Wife—When?

Husband—Tomorrow.

Wife—That's all right. I won't wear it till next week. I must say you are the hardest man to drag anything out of!

Husband—The trouble with you women is that you don't talk to the point.

A QUESTION.

Diner (who has been served with hash)—My bill, waiter.

Waiter—Yessir, now let me see what did you have?

Diner—I have not the slightest idea.

EXPLODING THE "NEW YORK" FALLACY

Once in a while we run across that "Queer Individual" who believes that nothing smart in "Things Men Wear" can be had outside of New York.

Of course, he doesn't know that those things are not made up for New York specially; he doesn't know that New York plays but a small part as compared to the rest of the "immense country;" he doesn't know that it is this "immense country" that every manufacturer depends upon for his largest patronage and consequently gives his best to.

There are larger stocks in New York than what you will see here, but there is no more charming assortment—our word for that.

Live News From All Branches of Winter Sports

Scattered Sport Gleanings

SUPPORT THIS BASKETBALL TEAM.

Manager Bennie Berse, of the Y. M. C. A. basketball team, is to be congratulated for having signed up such an attraction as the North Plainfield High School quintet for the opening game tomorrow night. The association boys will get away to an early start and will need all the support that local fans can give them this year. The management has arranged a nifty schedule and plenty of first class competition will be served up during the winter and spring months for the basketball loving public. In the past the Y. M. C. A. has led the field in promoting the pastime hereabouts and the pace this year promises to set a precedent for speed.

PLENTY OF TALENT AVAILABLE.

Captain Bill Wheelan, of the Plainfield High School basketball squad, was confronted by quantity as well as quality when he sounded the first practise call Wednesday afternoon. A host of prospective first team men turned out to compete for the four open positions on the quintet and an interesting race for positions will no doubt ensue. Wheelan is the only veteran remaining from the champion squad of last year and he is capable of giving the red and blue another laurel winner this season.

'TIS THE SAME OLD STORY.

Indications point to another scholastic championship race centered about Plainfield and North Plainfield High School basketball forces, with the latter a slight favorite. The boroughites have an extra supply of veteran talent and this will stand them in well when the opening whistle sounds. Plainfield is running a close second (in the wiseacres' preliminary picking), but the Leal School squad is once more holding fast to its natural place in the background. Basketball fans in general would like nothing better than to see Westfield High School handed an invitation to join the fold this year as the Mt. Ararat athletes are known to be well qualified to give either the local or borough squads a good run for the pennant.

Football interest in Plainfield will once more be centered about Cricket Field tomorrow afternoon when the Olympics, of Brooklyn, are slated to appear. If that victory over the sailors last Saturday didn't instill the Holy Cross eleven with too much confidence it should repeat tomorrow.

Speaking of football, someone has suggested that it is about time a Union county or Central New Jersey All-Scholastic eleven was picked. About the only local performer we can single out who is entitled to recognition on such an eleven is Bill Wheelan, center for Plainfield High School. Wheelan has proven the most versatile member of the squad this season and has outshone by far all of his opponents at the pivot berth.

The Plainfield High School warriors will engage in their annual all-important conflict with the Rahway High School Union county champions at that place tomorrow afternoon. The reported weakness of the title holders has not manifested itself in the season's records to date and we're of the opinion that the localites are going to have the usual amount of trouble in subduing the Rahwayans.

"Doc" Bland certainly demonstrated to the fullest degree his ability as a manipulator of the billiard cue at the Elks' club Wednesday night when he subdued J. L. Malone, former world's champion. The Plainfield amateur had it on his opponent at every turn and even if Malone had been in the best of condition it is probable that he would have been forced to take the count at the hands of Bland. The latter had little to worry him and as a result took it easy in rolling up his double entry.

In the representative boys' and girls' basketball teams that frequent the High School gymnasium Wednesday nights the local Recreation Committee has two of the finest sets of players to be found in this city. It would be little surprise to see them cop both the feminine and masculine court titles for the municipality this season and if the honors go to the Recreation Committee they will certainly be well placed.

Since the Plainfield High School swimmers received their new suits we have not heard so much as a gurgle from them. It's taking them a long time to get used to the regalia.

News has reached us that an American League baseball pitcher has blown his brains out with a shot gun. Hot Stove leaguers will aver that the "Feds" did it.

Now would be a good time to get rid of some of that surplus baseball talent that has been batting around the big legaues since father was a boy. Practise in dodging inshoots and fadeaways should make them excellent targets for the German gunmen.

Plainfield's firemen have taken to handball as a limb loosener. The prominence of the Charlie Horse ailment after the first few matches indicates that the city's smoke eaters have been underworked and overfed in the past.

Certain members of the Holy Cross football eleven are this year confining their efforts to discrediting "Old Doc" Osler's theory that man is past the age of usefulness after his half century milestone has been overtaken. In other words they're "hep" to the fact that man lives but once.

JUNIOR ELKS WANT ONE MORE QUINTET

V. W. Nash, Jr., and Alex Hunton Seeking Out Promising Candidate for Vacancy.

Renewed efforts are being made by the officers of the Junior Elks League to obtain one more team for their circuit. Their activity became apparent yesterday, when the officers were informed that the Bayonne Lodge had definitely decided not to enter a team. The announcement of the decision was made by Gustave A. Ripp, Jr., chairman of the bowling committee of the lodge. At present seven lodges now hold junior franchises.

Alexander P. Hinton, of Newark, and Vincent W. Nash, Jr., of Plainfield, president and secretary, respectively, are particularly seeking the additional lodge. Efforts will be made to have Hoboken, Summit or Morristown enter. The opening matches will not be rolled until the week of December 6.

Lack of interest in the bowling game was given by Ripp for the failure of the Bayonne Lodge to enter. The antlers of South Hudson have no inclination to travel the junior circuit as long as they can bowl as much as they care to at home. The Bayonne Elks will now have a three-man house tournament.

Frank Rutz, of Rochester, is president of the New York State Bowling League. This year Syracuse, Auburn, Buffalo and Rochester are the only cities represented. The final games are slated for March 7. Towering scores are numerous in this league.

"WEAR RED" WARNING TO HUNTERS RENEWED

Timely Suggestions Are Offered as Means of Avoiding Accidents.

Hunters should never shoot at moving brush, leaves or grass with the expectation of killing game. It is dangerous. The moving object is likely to be a man.

The above warning, at the beginning of the deer-hunting season, was printed by the press throughout the State at the request of the State Fish and Game Commission to guard against accidental shooting. The commission also urged that every hunter in quest of deer should wear a red hat, coat or some other conspicuous article of clothing, and thousands of gunners followed this advice.

During the four Wednesdays of the open season there were, however, several serious gunning accidents, some fatal, but all due, it would appear from facts thus far gleaned by the State authorities, to the failure of those involved to follow the game commission's warning. In no accident during several recent years, it is claimed, has a gunner wearing the red hat or coat been shot in mistake for game, and, while this fact in no way relieves the reckless gunner who shoots a man, no matter how the victim was clothed, from any responsibility for his carelessness, the precaution of wearing a brilliant hunting costume is an insurance against accident that every hunter owes to himself.

The game commission believes the protective value of the red hat or coat should not be confined to the deer season alone. Hunters have been shot in mistake for a bird or a small game animal, and in most of these cases bright clothing would have prevented the accident. The commission recommends, for this reason, to manufacturers of game coats and hats, and to the hunters, a more universal adoption of brilliant hues of red in their outfits.

P. H. S. READY FOR RAHWAY CHAMPIONS

Local Eleven Keyed up for Match at That Place Tomorrow Afternoon.

The hopes of the Red and Blue football cohorts of the Plainfield High School have brightened considerably during the past week and Rahway will have a pretty tussle on its hands tomorrow afternoon, when it tackles the local eleven at that place.

"Bus" Miller will go in at his old stand at left tackle for the first time since the Battin game and his team work with Pennock is sure to count. Herbert Peacock, who has held down the quarterback berth all season, will be out for the rest of the year on account of an injured knee, and it is probable that Alpaugh, who has done some good work at that station, will run the team in the fracas tomorrow for the championship of Union county. Noonan, who was switched from fullback to quarter in the Phillipsburg game, may possibly start, but is more likely to go in at his old position. Mutnick will be his relief man. Daniels and the rest of the squad have recovered from the minor injuries of last Saturday's game and everyone will be ready for duty if necessary, because the pace that the locals will set in their effort to bring home the bacon may tell on some.

Following is the probable lineup.

Plainfield H. S.		Rahway H. S.
Fitch	left end	W. Dunn
Miller	left tackle	Milnes
Pennock (Capt.)	left guard	G. Mantlo
Whelan	centre	Morse
Hooper	right guard	Lubowitz
Berrien	right tackle	Lukens
Davidson	right end	Terrill
Alpaugh	quaterback	Albright
Daniels	left halfback	Durand
Noonan	fullback	Conover

BOOM AT HIGH SCHOOL FOR ICE HOCKEY TEAM

Interest has again been revived among a number of Plainfield High School boys in the formation of a hockey team to represent the school on the ice this coming winter, and it is probable that the Ninth street institution will again support a winning outfit.

In the first Red and Blue effort on the ice two years ago the team was the champion of the county and beat every school combination it played. In looking over those who then composed the team it will be found that "Bill" Whelan, who played cover point, and "Dave" Fitch, who played point, are still in school and would form the nucleus for another winning combination, while there are a number of others who would offer good material.

NEW BRUNSWICK'S LAST GAME.

New Brunswick High School will close one of its most successful seasons in its history tomorrow at Buccleuch Park. Coach Campbell took charge of a practically inexperienced squad of players this season and has been successful in turning out a winning team.

The South Side High contingent, of Newark, will oppose the New Brunswick High School. The Southsiders have a fine reputation and will no doubt give the New Brunswick warriors a hard tussle. The game will start at 2:45 o'clock.

LEAL SCHOOL OUT OF INTERSCHOLASTIC LEAGUE

The Interscholastic League will once more be confined to the old rivals, N. P. H. S. and P. H. S., Leal School dropping out of the league. Manager John Dawe, of the borough school, received word from Manager Parmley, of the private school, cancelling both of the contests which were scheduled.

Coach Wardlaw cannot find ample material to put out a team of sufficient strength to compete with the larger schools of this vicinity, also Lawrence Schneider, who was elected captain last season, is not attending school, and his services were greatly missed.

EAGLES' POSTPONEMENT.

The match in the Eagles' League between the Elizabeth and Rahway bowlers, scheduled for last night at Rahway, was indefinitely postponed.

hension throughout the country among the pacifists as to what the next Congress will do when it convenes for the sixty-fifth session in Washington on the first Monday of December. Up to March 4 last the majority in Congress was Democratic, therefore it was comparatively easy for the President to dictate his own policies and have them passed. Of the measures that will come up again will be the ship purchase bill, and a mass of fresh material as well as legislation that was defeated in the previous session of Congress. The system employed in the passing of a bill before it becomes a law was ingeniously presented by the speaker, who also told of the possibility of recalling a bill even after it had been signed by the Chief Executive, namely, by appealing to the judiciary committee of the Supreme Court, and she cited several instances where this had been done.

The question of "increased preparedness" was taken up in a general way by the speaker, who recalled the address of the President before the Manhattan Club two weeks ago where he took occasion to enunciate his view on the preparedness question, which calls for an extra appropriation of one billion dollars in the next three years. Already strong opposition is felt among many legislators of the country, who think it unwise for the best interests of the nation to throw this sudden weight of taxation upon the country. Chief among these opposers is Claude Kitchen, of North Carolina, who will be majority leader of the House of Representatives and chairman of the ways and means committee, who ridicules such a tremendous undertaking, and who won't stand for this unnecessary extra burden upon the American people. "If such a measure should go through, we will not be a nation given over to navalism and militarism, but we shall have become one," says the North Carolina leader, and although a strong defender of preparedness, he strenuously objects to this sudden and headlong plunge to increase the already immense naval expenditures.

"Another who most strongly considers the project unwise," said Miss Richards, "is Lord Roseberry, of England, who, in a statement, said he thought it inadvisable to build a larger navy in that such a move on our part would shock the world and be a bad example for the ultimate realization of the peace propaganda, as well as the fact that such a state of affairs would put the world again into an armed camp."

Concluding her talk, Miss Richards cited one of the excellent outcomes of the present war, a fact which no one could deny was an absolute truth, and that was that it brought about the union of the people of more than one nation. She named among these countries, England, France and Russia, where class was fighting against class, and where turmoil and revolution were frequently seen outbursting among the various elements. Now all are one, fighting for a common cause, namely the honor of their mother country. Summing up her remarks, Miss Richard states that the only real fact that can bring about peace is the federation of the States of Europe with America and the remainder of the world, or "Internationism;" thus making each not independent, but interdependent upon each other, and as a result, safeguard the peace of Europe as well as the world. This will bring about a union of the nations working for a common cause, for the common good.

The third of the series of lectures will be given on Thursday afternoon, December 2, at which time, by special request, Miss Richards will tell of her trip this summer through Western Canada, down the Pacific Coast, Washington, Oregon and California, to the most southernmost point of San Diego.

NEW CHALLENGE TO CHURCH

up his church from a mission of about seventy members to a church of more than 700, crowded to the doors at each meeting. He told how it provided a meeting place for the working men and took the union meetings away from the siderooms of saloons. These men, who formerly had no use for the church, were now earnest workers in his congregation. "We are winning," he said, "because we have placed ourselves in contact with those who need our help, and those people who did need our help are now helping us and are helping their fellow-workmen." He said that they have services in seven different languages, and a Sunday-school in one language in his church. He declared that in order to Americanize the foreigner it was necessary for the American to get alongside the immigrant learn his emotions and then impart to him the American ideals and ambitions.

The speaker said that the modern church must and will sacrifice some of its dignity, all of its aloofness and rub elbows with the man of toil.

Dr. Day closed his remarks with a strong appeal to his hearers to "get next" to the working men, and once the working man is made to see that the church is their friend, the toilers as a class will support the church.

Mrs. Edward J. Ralston presided and there was a large and attentive audience throughout the services.

TO THE Y. M. C. A.

And old man gazed the other day
Upon a monstrous chart,
And saw that for the Y. M. C. A.
A campaign soon would start.

Eight hundred members was the goal
For which the boys would strive.
The old man growled, "upon my soul
They won't get over five.

Because this town's asleep, I know—
Successful men all shake it.
Big business here will never grow,
There's nothing here can wake it."

Six days have passed and we can see
Of zeal, the boys have proof—
They's reached the top, and goodness me—
They've gone right through the roof.

Oh, where do all these knockers fit?
Their mocking—do we hear it?
Believe me, George, they'll now admit
That Plainfield has Some Spirit.

NOVEL CAMPAIGN ADOPTED BY P. S. C.

Timely Reminders of "Safety First" Are to Be Seen in All Trolley Cars.

As a part of its educational campaign against accidents, Public Service Railway Company has adopted a novel system for warning the public to think of their own safety. A series of twelve lithographs, about ten by twenty-four inches, has been prepared and are to be displayed conspicuously in all the company's cars. Each picture will be shown for one month, so that it will take a year to carry out the idea in its entirety, the cards providing a daily reminder to the public that street dangers can be minimized, if not eliminated, by a little thoughtfulness.

To catch the eye the cards are made up in attractive colors, and each one contains an illustration of some oft-recurring mishap of the streets. With the pictures go admonitions in text, such as "Foolish hurry often results in long delay to yourself and others," "Think for the child; your boy or girl may not be old enough to appreciate the dangers of the street," and the like. Special attention is directed to the necessity of protecting children and the dangers of street play, including roller skating, "hitching on behind" wagons, and the stealing of rides on surface cars are graphically set forth. Nor is the thoughtless person who steps off the car the wrong way overlooked, and the hasty motorist who turns out from behind one car only to run into another going in the opposite direction has the result of such carelessness brought home to him by a pictured collision and the words, "Don't cross in front of moving car to save time; better save yourself."

Public Service was probably the first street railway company in the East to undertake the "Safety First" propaganda along systematic lines. It began by securing the co-operation of the public and private school authorities for an almost State-wide educational campaign among children. Competent speakers visited hundreds of schools and talked entertainingly to the boys and girls about the importance of avoiding street dangers of all kinds. "Safety First" pennants and banners were left in the schools, and several hundred thousand "Safety First" buttons were distributed as reminders of the warnings sounded by the speakers.

From the schools the work was extended to organizations of grown folk, and the talks were illustrated, first with stereopticon views and later with motion picture films. The company has had several reels of "movies" prepared especially for its own use, and it has also co-operated with producers in the taking of "Safety First" films, which have been released for use in motion picture houses throughout the country. All this time the idea of "Safety First" has been instilled in the minds of the trainmen who operate the cars. They have been shown the company's films and heard the lectures on safety, times almost without number. But the employes are only one side of the story, and to reach the public, which constitutes the other side, the company has determined to try the experiment of sustained warnings for an entire year, with changes in form to revive interest from time to time, to see if it is not possible to make "Safety First" what it really means, instead of having the words regarded as merely a slogan.

FIFTEEN MEMBERS ADDED DURING "COME BACK" WEEK

Members of Miantonomo Tribe, Improved Order of Red Men, are pleased over the success of their "come back week." Fifteen members were added to the membership roll at the meeting Wednesday night, while as a result of the efforts put forth, a number are expected to "come back" later. The attendance at meetings is constantly increasing and the order bids fair to become one of the largest and most popular in the State.

At the "come back" meeting visiting delegations were present from Somerville, Westfield, Bound Brook, Cranford, Atlantic City and Flemington. Past Great Sachem Charles T. Grace, of South Amboy, delivered an interesting address on the aim and objects of the order. A banquet and social session followed the initiatory work.

JUNGENBUND COMPLETE ARRANGEMENTS FOR FAIR

Arrangements are about completed for the first annual fair of the Jungenbund, of the German Reformed church, which will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. There will be booths for the sale of fancy goods, Christmas supplies, ice cream, candy and other things.

An interesting program of music and variety entertainment has been prepared. The public is cordially invited.

This Little Movie Favorite Is of the "Golden Aureole" Type

Lillian Gish, Quaint, Dainty and Piquant, Is Prettiest of the Blondes In Picture World

She Plays Part of the Northern Heroine In "The Birth of a Nation"

MUCH of the tenderly poetic appeal of "The Birth of a Nation" is due to the subtle acting of Miss Lillian Gish in the part of Elsie Stoneman, the Northern heroine. Miss Gish is a little creature of the "golden aureole" blond type, which makes for photographic beauty. She is singularly graceful, and her features never lose their piquancy. Her eyes before the camera are singularly expressive, and her acting conveys sincerity as well as true feminine charm.

Perhaps the most poetical scene of the entire drama is the one in which she and Henry Walthall, as her Southern lover, pour out their hearts to each other through the agency of the ancient symbol of Venus, goddess of romance, the dove. Not daring, at this point in their courtship to kiss each other, they lavish their affections alternately on the nesting bird. Another scene in which Miss Gish displays her exquisite charm is the one in which she plays with a kitten with such grace and caressing meaning that the audience invariably experiences a delightful thrill of sympathy.

Miss Gish is sharply contrasted in "The Birth of a Nation" with the beautiful brunette, Miss Miriam Cooper, who plays the Southern heroine. The little Northern heroine is of Northern birth, just as Miss Cooper is a Southerner, her native State being Ohio. For a time in her early girlhood she and her sister Dorothy, also famous in the moving picture world, lived in Missouri with their mother.

Miss Gish, when a mere child, won fame on the stage as a dancer and became a member of the ballet in one of Sarah Bernhardt's productions. She was introduced to D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," by Mary Pickford. Mr. Griffith instantly recognized her talent and rapidly promoted her in picture after picture, until he finally cast her in her present role of the Northern heroine in "The Birth of a Nation."

TELEPHONE CURE-ALL IN THE COUNTRY

Harvests and Markets Crops, Chases Solitude, Promotes Co-operation and Solves Labor Troubles.

"I look forward to the time when farmers generally will call up city and town customers in the morning and by this forehandedness place their produce by ascertaining their customers' wants. Then they will have no surplus left over on their wagons to peddle off at a loss in the heat of the day. Garden and orchard produce could be vended by telephone just as well as not, and at a tremendous salvage in time and energy.

"Suppose that in every town and city there was a place to which farmers could telephone and get current prices for products of the farm. Then the exact condition of the market would be known to the farmer before he started from his farm. He would have a chance to decide whether it would pay him to move his products to market. If there were a chain of these centers the farmer could by telephone get a choice of markets."

These remarks of Mr. Theo. N. Vail appeared in an interview published over a year ago. And to-day they are coming true more completely with the rising of every sun.

With this introduction The Telephone Review (N. Y.) opens an article on "Attainments and Possibilities of the Rural Telephone." The farmer of to day no longer drives his wagonload to town to take what the merchant will give him. * * * The up-to-date, business like farmer steps to his telephone before he leaves his farm, and talks with all the best dealers in the village or in the nearest large city, where he can learn the exact condition of the market. Not only in the marketing of produce does the rural telephone further the development of the farmer. By promoting intercourse among the people widely separated as they are in the farming districts, the telephone is fast overcoming the isolation of country life. Hand in hand with this is the emergency value of rapid communication and the practical method of accomplishing things with expedition and dispatch which the great distances in the country had formerly made impossible of quick settlement.

Trade reports from Ireland state that the British postmaster general is taking measures to increase the use of the rural telephone there. The plan is being forwarded in the hope of "ameliorating rural conditions in Ireland and of augmenting comfort and industrial efficiency". It is stated in this connection that "In the United States there are to-day more telephones in use by farmers than the whole number in use by the commercial and all other classes in the United Kingdom, and these telephones are found to add to the profit and comfort of the farmers to an extent which makes the cost of the telephone seem negligible". It is to be remembered in this article that the Irish [illegible] mercy of a government owned telephone system, can [illegible] complete telephone service which is do so much for the American farmer. The extreme rapidity of the [illegible] to phone toll call is one [illegible] the farmer in the United States can talk anywhere.

The most striking illustration given in the article is that of the Kansas farmers whose demand for 1500 extra farm hands for the harvesting of a record wheat crop was met largely by means of the telephone. The telephone managers each day called up the farmers on their lines, and made up lists of the number of extra hands needed in each locality. These lists were telephoned to the State free employment bureau, where word was also received each morning of the number of men who had just entered the state at different centres, and were applying for work. With these two sources of information, the bureau was able to send the men to the localities where help were needed. The men reported to the telephone managers in each place, and by them were sent out to the different farms, with cards, to the farmers with whom they were to get work.

It has been estimated that as many as 20,000 harvest hands were distributed by the State free employment bureau, direct to the farmers, wholly through the agency of the rural telephone. What this must mean in the harvesting of a record wheat crop it is impossible to estimate. Certainly the success of this, the first year of the plan, promises a bright future. Perhaps it will lead to a wider application of the method, and one of the greatest economic problems of this age of economic questioning will find its solution in the telephone. For there is always work to do, if only the work and those who want it could be brought together. For the Kansas farmer, at least, the telephone has solved the problem.

REINDEER ARE DYING OUT.

Lack of Scientific Management the Cause, Report Declares.

Alaska's reindeer are rapidly degenerating because of lack of careful selection of breeding animals, and there is danger of complete extinction, unless stringent government measures are taken, according to the department of agriculture.

At the present time there are approximately 30,000 domesticated reindeer in Alaska. Upon this foundation the department says, a great industry may be built if scientific management is applied.

TOYS

"Um-m, Muv-ver, this is the Ve-ry Best-est Toy Store of All"

Yes, it is, little girl. It is the very bestest toy store in all the world, we believe. Certainly we have tried to make it the best. There is only one other store like it that we know of, and that is in the Philadelphia Wanamaker's.

It is big and roomy, covering a city block, with a huge breathing space in the center (Rotunda) where a quaint giant Toy World panorama catches at once the eyes of the children and puts them in just the right mood to enjoy everything.

It is like old Amsterdam come to life. It revives in our memories old never-to-be-forgotten nursery rhymes.

An old Dutch windmill is whirling around. A huge jacker-snap pops out of his box. Cats on the roofs are arching their backs and flashing their eyes • • • • "and the cow jumps over the moon."

Let the children see how many things they can find moving in that grown-up Toy World.

In the Toy Store itself animal merry-go-rounds are whirring round the columns near the ceiling. There is stir and bustle and interest everywhere, as there should be in every well governed Toy World.

Dolls have a quiet corner all to themselves—a perfect Doll Paradise—where good little girls may pick out just the one they want to mother.

MAY ADOPT EUGENIC LAW.

Jersey City, Nov. 19.—The question of adopting a State-wide eugenic law comes up today at the conference of health officers of New Jersey. Paterson has put over its law to force brides and grooms to show certificates of health, because of the evasion that is so easy by going to a nearby city. The eugenic law is favored by many city officials throughout the State, and it is possible that a campaign will be begun to enact such a law at the next sitting of the Legislature.

BROOKLYN CHAMPS AT CRICKET FIELD

Holy Cross Will Have a Hard Foe to Meet in Tomorrow's Big Game.

Holy Cross is slated to meet the Brooklyn Olympics on Cricket Field tomorrow afternoon in the usual Saturday afternoon football bill and indications point to a well played and interesting match. The Olympics are recognized as the champions of Brooklyn, having captured the trophy offered by the Brooklyn Daily Eagle for this honor.

The visitors tomorrow have played five games this year and have come out to the good in four of these. The fifth contest was won by the Franklin A. A., of Newark, by a count of 6 to 0. Inasmuch as the Franklins took the measure of Holy Cross by the same figures it looks as though tomorrow's rivals are about as evenly matched as two teams could be.

In their lineup will be Cayard, Greater New York All-Scholastic captain of 1912; Holden, who was picked for the All Brooklyn Scholastic eleven in the same year, and Mulvey, who was a second string man on the Georgetown University team during the past season.

Included in the array of scalps hung up to date by the Brooklyns is that of the Brooklyn Cupids, an outfit that beat Holy Cross on Columbus Day. The Plainfielders will lineup about the same as they did last week. Probably Smith and Parto will be unable to play, but Wilson and Canifield, who have been suffering with wrenched ankles, are expected to be in shape for this game.

N. P. H. S. TO CLASH WITH Y. M. C. A. FIVE

A most interesting conflict is promised to lovers of basketball tomorrow evening, when North Plainfield High School and the Y. M. C. A. forces lineup in the local gymnasium. Although this is early for both teams, neither side having sufficient practice, the conflict will be hotly contested from beginning to end.

The association team will probably be composed of former graduates of the borough High School. Captain William Taylor, Ashley Burner, Love and Newkirk all being members of the 1912 quintet, which won the city and county championship. This combination, together with Harry Moulton, forms a formidable opposition which will give the boroughites a tough problem to overcome.

The High School lads will present the same lineup which took the measure of the Recreation A. C. a short period ago. The N. P. H. S. team has been handicapped the past two weeks, owing to the fact that two of the players are members of the cast of the A. A. play and have been unable to practice. The two teams will probably lineup as follows:

N. P. H. S.		Y. M. C. A.
Townley	forward	Taylor
Conroy	forward	Moulton
Van Mater	centre	Manley, Love
Dilts	guards	Burner
Kirch	guards	Newkirk, Gavett

COLUMBUS BOWLER WILL BE GIVEN A TURKEY

An individual handicap and endurance contest will be held at the Columbus Club Thanksgiving eve. There will also be a bowling contest with a turkey as the prize. Scores made in the headpin tournament last night follow:

PACIFIC TRADE BOOMING.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 19.—A record November in the traffic between this port and the West Coast of South America is assured by the heavy cargoes and number of sailings. Flour, wheat, canned salmon and lumber comprise the bulk of the cargoes going South, and the vessels are loading on the West Coast with Chilean ore for the local smelters.

CASE POSTPONED.

In the city police court this morning Judge William G. DeMeza postponed the trial of Edward Horton, charged by Theodore Martin with the larceny of tools, until November 23. The case was originally slated for last Tuesday, but owing to the absence of certain important witnesses it was necessary to postpone it until today.

ANOTHER POWDER MILL TO BE BUILT

Land is Being Surveyed on Slope of Copperas Mountain, Morris County.

That another large explosive factory is to be added to the number already in operation in Northern New Jersey is indicated by information from Morris county. On the eastern slope of the Copperas mountains between Dover and Newfoundland, in Morris county, is a large defile or valley extending eastward to the Hibernia mountains. A company of workmen are now engaged in surveying and inspecting this land, and it is said that if they report favorably on the conditions of the climate, water and soil, a large powder industry will be established there to nitrate cotton.

The proposed site is in about the wildest and most undeveloped part of New Jersey, yet it is admirably situated for a powder industry. There are no large towns or villages nearby to be menaced, and the population is scant and scattered. The Wharton and Northern Railroad, connecting with the Susquehanna, at Charlottesburg, and with the New Jersey Central and Lackawanna, runs through the property. It almost touches the U. S. Naval Arsenal reservation at Lake Denmark.

If the industry is established nearly 500 men will be employed at the outset.

—It there's a new owner in charge of the little store down the street, the chances are that a "Business Opportunity" advertisement has been "at work."

A PEEP INTO SPACE

Can the Finite Mind of Man Measure the Universe?

THE LIMITS OF THE VISIBLE.

Science Says the Bounds of the Stellar System Are Definable and That the Universe Is as an Island of Stars In an Infinite Ocean of Ether.

To the visible universe there are attainable limits. It may be that the greatest telescopes have not yet reached the bottom, or the boundaries, of the entire system, but they have almost done so.

This is shown by the thinning out of the fainter stars. These stars, as a whole, are the most distant, and if they were unlimited numerically every increase in the penetrating power of telescopes would bring previously unseen ones into view, in proportionately undiminished numbers.

As a fact, however, there is a rapid falling off in the proportionate numbers at great distances. This is shown by Kapteyn's "law of star density." Taking the "parsec" as the unit of measurement (a parsec is equal to nineteen million million miles), the density of the stars at increasing distances comes out as follows: At 0 distance, 1.00; at 50 parsecs, 0.99; at 135 parsecs, 0.86; at 213 parsecs, 0.67; at 540 parsecs, 0.30; at 850 parseis, 0.15.

This does not mean that the absolute number of stars decreases with increase of distance, but that the ratio of their number to the volume of space occupied decreases in the proportion shown so that at a distance of 850 parsecs there are only 15 per cent as many stars as there should be if there had been no falling off in relative density.

Various counts and estimates of the actual numbers included within various limiting distances have been made, and these show that the total number of stars in the visible universe is numerable and probably does not exceed a thousand millions at an outside estimate.

The fact that a fairly definite shape or outline has been found for the visible universe is in itself a proof that it is not unlimited in extent. We are virtually certain that it expands around us in such a manner as to assume roughly the form of a flat, irregular disk, the more distant parts or edges of which lie in the plane of the Milky way. It is thus like a floating island of stars in the ocean of space.

Space itself may be infinite, although what we call the universe is not. As to other universes existing beyond the limits of ours and invisible to us, that is purely a speculation, which appears more or less probable according to the manner in which one's mind approaches it.

But, at any rate, there is no positive evidence of the existence of such outer star systems. From time to time one hears suggestions that this or that nebula is an "outside universe," dimly shining to us from its millions of crowded stars across immeasurable tracts of intervening space. But it is far more probable that no nebula or other object visible in the mightiest telescope is unconnected with the universe to which our sun and our earth belong.

As to the continuance of the Creator's work in forming new suns and new planets, of that there can be no question. This work is, in truth, visibly going on before us in the heavens. There is the utmost variety of ages among the stars, just as there is among the human beings in a crowd. If our lives were lengthened so that a year would be but as a second to us we should see the stars around us disappearing and new ones springing into existence, as we see flowers fading and fresh ones blooming in the garden.

To return for a moment to the question of the infinitude of space, it is well known that the human mind cannot conceive a limit to space, for the instant you attempt to fix or imagine such a limit your imagination flies beyond it. You have got to think of an outside as well as of an inside.

And if you fly to another imagined boundary instantly another outside expanse stretches away before you! It is, then, perfectly legitimate to suppose that, while the visible universe is limited, the invisible universe has no bounds. In comparison with that all that we see, or can ever see, is, truly, infinitely less than as a grain of sand to a desert or a drop of water to an ocean.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York Journal.

Accurate Information.

QUEER PERSIAN VEHICLES.

Riding In Them Is Like Being In a Rolling Ship at Sea.

The two kinds of vehicles in common use in Persia differ only in appearance, the palaki being open, the kejevah covered with a light roof, generally made waterproof and with curtains before the entrance to keep out the sun, rain, wind and snow. The kejevah is the more elaborate conveyance, heavier and more expensive to hire, and therefore is used chiefly by the richer classes.

But the most comfortable means of travel and one which is used only by the wealthiest and most luxurious classes is the takhtiravan. This is a sort of palaquin consisting of a box about seven feet long and five feet high, fitted with doors and windows. Inside are a soft mattress and some comfortable cushions. The whole is built on the sedan chair principle, but with mules instead of men as bearers. The poles rest on the pack saddle on the backs of the mules, which walk tandem. They can, of course, only be used in the long plains and are useless when the route goes over hilly country. The motion reminds one of a rolling ship, and some people even get giddy and seasick at first in them.

Such personages as princes, governors and high officials always travel with many followers and hangers-on. It is a most picturesque sight to meet such a caravan, from which the pipe bearer is never missing. In front of his saddle are fastened large round cases covered with bright red cloth containing the silver water bottles and the silver tops of the kalian (water pipe). Under the horse on one side is a perforated metal fire box hanging on a chain and containing the burning charcoal, while on the other side swings a heavy leather bottle full of water in readiness to prepare the pipe on the road. A clever bearer prepares the apparatus as he rides along, gallops up to his master and hands him his ready prepared smoking pipe to enjoy a few pulls.

The luncheon or tea horse is another necessity for the journey. Anywhere on the high road it can be unloaded, and within a few minutes the felt carpet, carried on the saddle behind the rider, is spread on the ground, the samovar, cups, sugar and lemons arranged on a tray on one corner, and, kneeling behind these, the servant hands out the tea to the travelers. When ready to remount they leave him behind, and he packs up and follows at a smart canter, soon rejoining the caravan.—Lieutenant Colonel A. Heinicke in Travel.

Testing Typewriter Ribbon.

Typewriter ribbons that produce an indelible impression are made from carbon. The cheaper qualities are made from aniline. To tell whether a ribbon is of the best or of the cheapest quality it is only necessary to soak a bit of it in alcohol, scrape its surface and spread the matter thus obtained upon a bit of white blotting paper. If the spot is black all over the ribbon is of aniline, which is soluble in alcohol; if, on the contrary, the black spot does not spread, but is surrounded by a halo of uncolored moisture, then it is of carbon, which is insoluble in alcohol.—New York World.

The Name Raleigh.

Among variant spellings of names perhaps the most remarkable instance occurs in a deed of the year 1587 relating to the property of the Raleigh family. It bears the signatures of Raleigh senior and his two sons, of which one has special interest as being the earliest known signature of Sir Walter. By the father the name is written "Ralegh," by the elder son "Rawlegh," and by Sir Walter it is written "Rauleygh." By Queen Elizabeth it was written "Rawley," as then pronounced. It also appeared in Sir Walter's lifetime as "Rawlye."—London Tatler.

Our Eccentric Phrases.

Why do we always talk of putting on a coat and vest? Who puts on a coat before a vest? We also say putting on shoes and stockings. Who puts on shoes before the stockings? We also put up signs telling people to wipe their feet when we mean their boots or shoes. And a father tells a boy he will warm his jacket when he means to warm his pantaloons. We are a little eccentric in our phrases at times.

Balm of Gilead.

The real balm of Gilead is the dried juice of a low shrub which grows in Syria. It is very valuable and scarce, for the amount of balm yielded by one shrub never exceeded sixty drops a day. According to Josephus, the balm or balsam of Gilead was one of the presents given by the queen of Sheba to King Solomon. The ancient Jewish physicians prescribed it evidently for dyspepsia and melancholia.

Unlucky.

"This is the twelfth time I've called about this bill," began the collector.

"I hope you won't call again," said the debtor. "I'm a bit superstitious about the number thirteen, and I'm afraid something might happen to one or the other of us."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Not Much.

She—Well, I hope you are going to write a letter to the man who insulted you. He (an actor)—What, make him a present of my autograph? Not much.—Pele Mele.

Adversity has the effect of eliciting talents which in prosperous circumstances would have lain dormant.—Horace.

MAY IRWIN TO APPEAR AT NEWARK IN HER NEW PLAY

May Irwin, America's greatest comedienne, will be seen at the Sam S. Shubert Theatre, Newark, Thanksgiving week, in her latest New York success, the new comedy, "33 Washington Square." Miss Irwin recently took her entire company from the Park Theatre in New York and played a special performance for the President and the National Press Club at the National Theatre in Washington. The event was sensationally successful.

Miss Irwin will bring the original New York production and cast. The play is said to be easily the best she has ever had. It is a dramatization of the novel by LeRoy Scott. The stage direction of the piece was in the hands of William Collier.

Miss Irwin will sing some typically Irwinesque songs. Among them will be: "Araby," Irving Berlin's latest; "Picture Me Down In Tennessee," "I've Been Floting Down the Old Green River," and "My Old Kentucky Home."

Among Miss Irwin's cast are Frances Gaunt, Clara Blandick, Julia Ralph, Charlotte Cater, George Clark, Leonard Hollister, Aldrich Bowker, Joseph Woodburn, Max A. Meyer, Henry Hanson and William Sully.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

A FAMILY SQUABBLE.

Assemblyman William N. Runyon of Union county, announces that he will remain in the race as a candidate for Speaker until removed by the vote of the caucus. He further announces that his candidacy stands on its own merits and is in no wise connected with the State treasurership, the Senatorship or the Gubernatorial nomination. Mr. Runyon takes the position that as House leader last year he is entitled to promotion, and that the Assembly should consider and settle the Speakership as a matter affecting itself alone and without regard to any other considerations.

This is entirely a Republican family matter. It is a natural presumption that, in adjusting it, the good of the party throughout the State would be the prime purpose to be furthered. But there seems a strong probability that this may be forgotten in the rivalry that has arisen among candidates for Governor, for Senator and for State treasurer. On the face of affairs it would seem to be a mistake to make the Speakership a pawn in the bigger game, as is now contemplated in the Essex-Camden combination.

In different parts of the State outside Essex and Camden there is a good deal of grumbling among Republicans over the apparent disposition of those two counties to bog the trough. The program as arranged seems to be that Essex is to have the Speaker and Camden the leader. The latter county is likewise to have the State treasurer and the Gubernatorial nomination, while Essex takes the Senatorship. This plan may be modified by giving Passaic the treasurership, if it is necessary, in order to put through the remainder of the program.

This may be good politics. Essex, Camden and Passaic were the counties returning big Republican majorities at the last election, and they have a right to a dominating voice in the party councils. A slight exhibition of modesty, however, would in no way detract from their prominence.

That Mr. Runyon would have taken his present position without the assurance of respectable support from outside Union county is unlikely. That it involves possibilities of party discord is obvious. But after all, as has been said, it is a family matter, and if the family decides that a squabble is good for its health outsiders can certainly have no objections.—Newark Evening News.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Plainfield's fun-lovers are keyed up for the weekly "country store" event at the Plainfield Theatre tonight, Manager Shannon's program being bigger, better and more gingery than ever before. Included in the articles to be distributed among lucky seat check-holders are valuable pieces of jewelry appropriate to the sex winning the same, and it goes without saying that the usual amount of comedy that accompanies the awarding of such gifts will be served up tonight.

As topnotchers for the week-end vaudeville bill the Three Westleys, comedy acrobats, take all honors. Cleverness, agility and mirth are the ingredients of their act, and they have many thrillers to hold the attention of the audience. Glenn and Flody, blackface comedians, have a wealth of crackerjack maerial both in song and prose that brings forth round after round of laughter. They were given numerous encores in yesterday's shows, and had something new to offer at each appearance. "The Big Surprises," including three winsome lassies and the same number of clever youth, presents a happy picture of singing and dancing. Elsie Gresham is featured in the dramatic playlet entitled "Nell," and this is productive of some good acting and fine singing. Alexander Hordes gives an excellent portrayal of Russian dancing and singing.

ONE MOTHER'S LOVE.

A little baby, one week old, was permitted to die by Chicago physicians this week, and they acted with the full knowledge and consent of the child's mother, and now the minds of men and women everywhere are agitated by the morality of omitting an operation which would save the life of a malformed and defective child.

Dr. Haiselden, the physician in charge of the case, bravely defends his action by declaring that the child would have been a hopelessly crippled idiot and a burden to its parents and society. He is not legally guilty of criminal action in that he did not hasten the death of the child, but merely refused to preserve the spark of life. His moral right in such an action is assailable.

It is interesting to note that a majority of physicians who have expressed themselves on the case approved the act. This is not through any tendency to uphold a member of the profession, we believe, but is an honest expression of opinion resulting from a sympathy with the sufferings of those who are afflicted for life.

The child was destined to die in infancy by nature. Medical science might have saved it for a few years, but that aid was refused by the surgeon. His refusal is not hard to defend. He sat in judgment over the case as a physician, untouched by love or sentiment. If pity influenced his decision it was in favor of death. At least his belief in a science that would eliminate the mentally and physically weak and unfit in infancy is far better than the mad European plan of killing off the strong and manly in the prime of life. But we cannot comprehend a mother's love that would bid her sit by the side of her child, cooly and quietly awaiting for the spark of life to die out. Perhaps it is too great, too deep for human understanding.

A REFORM TOWARD ECONOMY.

One of the many reforms that has been suggested in the way of legislation for the lawmakers who convene in January is a reduction of the salaries of State and county officials. The Newark Star declares that some ideas may be found by New Jersey legislators in the recent work of Gov. Whitman of New York along this line. It says:

"Economies effected in this way would not affect the present heads of departments who are chosen for terms, but would be applicable to their successors. Some salaries can be abolished altogether and many others reduced in amount. Probably the abolition of the county tax boards will again be seriously considered.

"In New York State Governor Whitman is making large excisions in the salary roll and may effect economies of several millions without injury to efficiency. The New York city government is also revising its big salary account for large economies. In New Jersey the Legislature may also look to the statutory salaries fixed for county officers, as well as to the State paid salaries.

"Just before the liner Ancona made her death plunge into the sea, an American citizen, Pasqualo Serranio, leaped upon the deck and waved an American flag," was a sentence in a thrilling story of the torpedoing of the Italian ship. A man with a name like that running away from Italy in time of war to seek protection under the American flag!

Even the rain held off until the Y. M. C. A. had secured 1,200 new members. This city has set up what is declared to be a new record by those who are familiar with association work, and too much praise cannot be heaped upon the heads of every person who participated in the work.

This is shellfish day. We do not know who is responsible but he certainly picked a fine day for it, for even a fish would have to wear a protecting shell if he went out in such dampness.

The Russian government is preparing to issue an official statement of the western campaign. We presume it will be a running story.

NOVEMBER DAWN.

Across the east a flame of molten gold
That gleams reflected on the forest trees,
And on the corn-stalk army tented low,
Its tasseled flags a-flutter in the breeze.
Far in the west, in mists of purple-gray
Enveiled, the crescent moon grows slowly dim—
A skyward-winging thrush, from silver throat,
In ecstasy pours forth his morning hymn—
A bob-white, calling in the tangled brush,
At sound of distant gun stands trembling, dumb—
Thin clouds of smoke o'er house-tops now arise—
The night is over, and the day has come.

—Prudence K. Jamieson.

CLAIM PLAINFIELDER HAS ERECTED "SPITE FENCE"

Residents of Westfield are endeavoring to unearth reasons why William H. Abbott, of this city, saw fit to build a fence around his property on Broad street, that place, between the tracts owned by W. A. Sandford and E. F. Herman. The more outspoken Mt. Ararat citizens claim that it accomplishes the end of a "spite-fence" and rumors that a petition will be circulated for presentation to the Council are heard.

It is said in Westfield that Mr. Abbott has been trying to sell his lot to the above mentioned men, but they did not want to purchase it. The fence was erected Wednesday. It is little more than a foot from the rear of Mr. Herman's home and it is so close to the residence of Mr. Sandford that eaves extend over it.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Laura Hope Crews, the noted Belasco star, and Charles Chaplin, king of screen comedians, will share headline honors on the splendid bill of photoplays to be shown this afternoon and tonight at the U. S. Astor Theatre. Miss Crews appearing in "The Fighting Hope" and Chaplin in his latest Essanay comedy, "A Night at the Show," in which he discards his usual make-up and appears in evening clothes. He retains, however, his funny little mustache. "The Fighting Hope" is based on the drama produced in New York some years ago by David Belasco, and in which Blanche Bates portrayed the leading role. It is a gripping story of the love of a criminal for a beautiful woman. The escape scene from a prison, which takes place in this film, is one of the utmost excitement. Chaplin never has been seen to better advantage than in "A Night at the Show,' in which he give his famous Chaplinisms full rein.

Identified

I knew that some large town we neared;
So through my coach's pane I peered
To see if it was what I thought.
I strained my eyesight and saw naught.

But was I then dissatisfied
Because no town my eyes had spied?
Nay, nay! I'd learned where I was at—
No disappointment was in that.

I'd thought my train was drawing near
The smoke-hid town of Pittsburgh, dear.
I'd found my guess was right, because
I saw no town, therefore it was!

Finnigin Filosofy

Th' married man that does as he pleases couldn't do so if his wife didn't let 'im.

The Reason

"Why doesn't either Hankins or his wife speak to you?"

"Once during a lovers' quarrel Hankins told me she was all kinds of a fool. I agreed with him. Since they are married they both hate me."

She Was Conservative

"Do you believe all men are liars?" he asked passionately as she spurned his suit.

"Well," said the girl coolly, "I wouldn't say that. You see, I haven't met all of them yet."

Forgers All

"I see your son George has forged his way to the front. And your son Al—what of him?"

"He has forged his way into state's prison."

Money

Money is what the root of all evil is the love of.

Most people love money, but some lie about it.

Money is also what nobody ever got enough of after he had got what everybody else thought was plenty.

A man can, if sanity strike him in time, be satisfied with a little less than fifty thousand.

If he gets past that point, there's no hope for him.

Andy Carnegie says he doesn't want to die rich, but he is determined to do so.

There is very little connection between money and happiness.

But the lack of it when needed can make a good deal of unhappiness.

The man with a ten-thousand-dollar income looks back and believes he was happier when he was getting twelve per week.

But it would break his heart to have to go back to twice that.

One can get used to more money in five minutes.

But he can't reconcile himself to less money in five years.

William J. Bryan is fond to excess of money, and also fond of money to excess.

He is, however, very fond of peace, and will sacrifice any amount of the people's gate money to advocate it.

That is what he means by peace at any price.

If the gentle reader doesn't agree with this, we are wrong.

But we have our fingers crossed when we say so.

Good-night!

"My welfare doesn't int'rest you?"
Between his teeth he ground.
"Not put that way," the maiden said.
"Just turn the word around."

Yearning

I know of lots of people now
Who would give up their city jobs
To get again some old side meat
Smoked with burnt sassafras and cobs!

Probably True

Gangrene was just slipping away from Earth, when a benevolent spirit met him and said:

"You ought to be ashamed of that total of 5,000 blood-poison victims of last year."

"But I killed only ten of them," said Gangrene, indignantly. "The others were scared to death by the doctors."

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

The Depth Of A Cough

IF THE mere violence of a cough were any criterion the purely nervous cough would be the most alarming of all, and a severe pneumonia cough would scarcely deserve any attention at all.

A great many people come complaining of a "cold on the chest"—whatever that may mean. They feel a "tearing and a pulling at their very vitals" every time they cough. And, locating the lesion by the symptom, as is the way with popular diagnosis, they conclude that there must be something the matter with their lungs or bronchial tubes.

As a matter of fact about nineteen out of twenty cases of "cold on the chest" coming to the doctor for relief are either troubles of the larynx or something higher up, and not in the chest. A simple irritation in the roof of the throat (the pharynx) will cause a cough that seems to come from way down in the very base of the chest, and a mild laryngitis will be accompanied by the most frequent and emphatic, if not elephantic cough you ever heard.

Somebody is always asking us to prescribe for cough, in spite of our rules and regulations, and notwithstanding the fact that a cough is only a symptom which comes from one cause in one case and from a very different cause in another.

However, in order to appease the demand and save the country, we here present what we believe to be the most efficient all-round cough medicine for domestic use.

This is the formula:

Citrate of soda.....1 ounce
Powdered licorice.....½ ounce
Flaxseed meal.....2 ounces
Glycerin.....4 ounces
Chloroform .....⅛ ounce
Water..enough to make 1 quart

First boil the flaxseed in the water, gradually stirring it in. After half an hour let it cool, then add the licorice, the glycerin and the chloroform. Shake the mixture thoroughly several times in the course of the day. The following day, strain through fine muslin and keep tightly corked. The dose is a teaspoonful every hour or two for a child over three years; for an adult a tablespoonful every hour or two.

By the way, this cough medicine never cures. It only helps to soothe and relieve irritation.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Save The Castor Oil

Is castor oil a safe remedy for constipation in a three-months old baby? If not, what would you suggest?

Answer—No, never give a baby castor oil without a doctor's advice. It establishes a constipated habit, being famous for its after-binding influence—and useful in cases of diarrhœa for that reason. The diet should correct the constipation. A letter of advice about feeding babies will be mailed you on receipt of a stamped, addressed envelope.

Please state what kind of underwear is best for a clerk in a store in the winter time.

Answer—Light-weight knitted all-wool, with woolen socks.

If your question is of general interest it will be answered through these columns; if not it will be answered personally if stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed. KICKERS

THERE are three kinds of kickers: mules, shot-guns and some men.

The mule kicks, because he was born that way; the shot-gun because it was built that way, and the human being because it is a right thoughtlessly granted to him by the constitution.

The human kicker is divided into two kinds—acute and chronic. The acute kicker kicks because he has something to kick at. He kicks until he removes the object and then subsides. His ailment is more violent, but he usually recovers. For the chronic kicker, however, there is no hope. He must kick to live. Nature has shamelessly connected his lungs with his hind legs, and the only way to stop his kicking is to shut off his breath. This was often done in the good old days when human life was so cheap that a patriot could go out with an axe, and get enough culls and seconds for a mess any day without objection. But nowadays, we have to let the kicker live. The most we can do to him is to elect him to office or encourage him to buy a racing automobile.

The chronic kicker stands forever in the road with his heels pointed toward progress. He kicks on taxes, on street paving, on improvement societies, on congress, on the price of salt, on the Supreme Court, on the minister of his church, on the plan to take up a collection for the families of squashed firemen, on the speed and slowness and heat and chilliness and bigness and smallness of street cars, on the design of the hotel table cloth, on the size of Sunday newspapers, on the weather, on the sun, on the public, on the universe, on the neglect of Nature in not providing children with muffled exhausts, and on the virulent color of the nice green grass.

The kicker is usually born on Friday, because that is the world's unlucky day. He begins criticising his food on the day of his birth.

Heaven is full of kickers, whom the other place has seen coming

When he grows up, he has to approach his fellow-men from the rear in order to say "Good morning" to them, except at long range, and when he dies the undertaker issues orders to the hearse driver to drive slowly, and avoid all jolts. The Egyptians invented embalming at a time when the nation was infested with kickers, in the hope of making death permanent.

Heaven is full of kickers whom the other place has seen coming. Besides a kicker is usually too busy objecting to do anything bad. But it has been so arranged in Heaven that when a kicker begins to kick, he has to stop flying. This gives the other angels a chance to escape, for thus far no kicker has ever been able to aviate beyond the ground floor.

Views Of The Press

Dumb Brutes In The War

SIGNIFICANT of the vast area under arms in the great European conflict are the number and variety of dumb brutes employed in the war. The list includes horses, mules, oxen, dogs, camels and elephants. All these are active in the prosecution of the campaigns in the various zones of hostilities. And even goats play their part, make their contribution, for the Indian troops of Great Britain look to them as a source of important food supply. In the fourteen months of unparalleled warfare animals have fallen by the thousand—Europe is strewn with their corpses.

If there was any doubt about the utility of the dog, that long ago was dispelled. He draws light guns, carries others, stands guard and does heroic service with the ambulance corps. Many a wounded soldier owes his life to a Red Cross dog. Camels and elephants, during the summer months, made their appearance as beasts of burden in localities where, heretofore, their use in that capacity was undreamed of.

And, from the one cause or another, so appalling have been the casualties in the ranks of all these dumb warriors that if peace were declared to-morrow, say the experts, it would be ten years before the animal population could be restored to what it was a year ago. This country has already disposed of all the horses and mules that ought to be sent out from our shores, economists inform us, and further exportations are to be viewed only with alarm. What is true in our own case is true, also, of the other countries supplying the other animals. "An elephant," says one writer on the subject, "will be hard to buy at any price a few months hence." There is, to be sure, a far-off note to this warning. It does not touch us. Nor does the rapidly increasing death of camels touch us. But these facts, nevertheless, have their significance.

And it is well for breeders of horses and mules in this country to take some cognizance of the situation as these words disclose it. Our own supply of draft animals and horses, that may be used under lighter harness or the saddle, should not be allowed to fall below the line of safety in order to reap the benefit of high prices created by Europe's war. Somehow and by some authority that line should be established, and exports regulated accordingly.—Boise, Idaho, Sunday Capital News.

Traveling With The Cows

Q. If one becomes a passenger on an accommodation train, or a train carrying both freight and passengers, doesn't he have some rights as to personal safety and comfort?

A. Although he assumes the ordinary risks and inconveniences attendant upon such mode of travel, he is entitled to protection and safety at the hands of the carrier to such extent as may be reasonable under the circumstances. The railroad company owes him the duty to observe the highest degree of care which it can consistently and reasonably exercise.

And They Say A Drunken Man Never Gets Hurt!

Q. A man, while intoxicated, was driving an automobile over a country road and ran into an obstruction in the road. He was thrown out of the machine and injured. In your opinion, could he bring a suit and get damages?

A. The fact of his intoxication will be a circumstance in determining whether he was in the exercise of a reasonable and ordinary degree of care for his own safety at the time.

Fraudulent = Void

Q. In case a composition agreement with creditors is fraudulent, isn't it void? A. Yes.

Guarding Against Extravagance

Q. I am about to form a partnership with three other men. It will be necessary for us to keep down our expenses, although the employment of a number of clerks cannot be avoided. I should like to have it understood in some way that an unnecessary number should not be employed, or that we take on help from time to time as the business may require it. Is there any way to fix this before I go into the partnership?

A. You might ask the other three men to agree to sign articles of partnership, containing a clause, among other things, providing that no partner shall employ help for the purpose of conducting the business without the consultation and advice of the other members of the firm.

The Answer Is In The Affirmative

Q. Does a corporation have the power to give a warrant of attorney to confess judgment? A. Yes.

"Love Comes Back To His Vacant Dwelling"

Q. If one sells out a business, and then re-engages in business, is he permitted, legally, to solicit his former customers?

A. If the good-will of a business is sold, there is some conflict in the authorities as to whether the seller may solicit former customers. In some states he is not permitted to do so, while in others, the rule is, that, unless he has expressly agreed not to do so, he may solicit his former trade, provided of course his conduct is not such as to mislead the public.

A Little Home History

Q. Is it necessary for a deed to contain the residence of the parties or to describe their occupations?

A. It is not indispensable. It is customary, however, to insert some matter of description and it is usually better to do so. Hence it would not be amiss to insert the place of residence or to describe the occupation. Further, if one of the parties should be a trustee or a guardian or an executor, it would be well to designate him as such.

Short Warranty Forms

Q. Aren't there some short forms of warranty deeds? Is it necessary for one to use a long and involved form?

A. Statutory forms, which are usually simple and concise, are to be found in many states. Such forms take the place of the older and more complicated forms.

Pepper Talks

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

Confidence

Confidence is Hope—realized. It is honest Trust, put to the test in advance and not found wanting. The man who enters into a task Confident of Success enters with the Hope and the Trust that he is going to "make good."

Start your work full of Confidence, and half the results hoped for are already within your reach.

Natural life is a condition of Confidence. Natural circumstances and laws uphold and strengthen you in what you do, if you are open-minded enough and clear-sighted enough to look squarely into the eyes and soul of Nature and believe in her to render back to you your proportion of deserts. There are always Natural conditions of some sort or other ready to aid the man who has Confidence in their existence.

Inside Confidence begets Outside Confidence. The world in general instinctively puts Confidence in the man who is laden with Confidence.

If you have Confidence in your Friends of Employees or in all men, in just that measure will your personal Confidence in yourself and your abilities be increased and enlarged. Smile and you are most apt to get a smile. Confidence seeks out its own, the same as all virtues do. If you want great numbers to have Confidence in you, you must place Confidence in all.

Confidence in your ability to go ahead and do things is what makes the things possible for you to do.

Have Confidence. Keep it calm and exact. Play it in its turn. Accumulate it for Emergencies. Nurture it when it is weak, hold it back and cool it off when it gets too anxious, but under no circumstances let it wander from you or get lost.

Accurate information makes very little progress. More than half the people believe a circus divides its attractions and shows in two or three towns every day.

A good many persons go about looking for a quarrel. But comparatively few go about looking for a fight.

A girl is pretty sure to keep an engagement with a man unless she has an opportunity to make one that suits her better.

A rooster is like a man in the respect that he crows a great deal.

If your rival in love has no bad habits, that is another point in your favor.

When women discuss men you hear money mentioned a good many times and character and sense but seldom, if at all.

When a stranger shows up in your town wearing a lot of medals it means that he is the inventor of a scheme for living without work.

Current Poetry

"Rhyme Of The Road"

I am only a streak, as you see me afar,
With a bend here and there for diversion,
But I boast of the power to give you a jar
And the power to spoil your excursion.
The little word chuck, and the little word muck,
Are the secrets to all my boasting;
But the little word pluck will add much to your luck
And will spare me many a roasting.

It can act as a hobble or act as a wing—
It depends upon how you will boom me;
I can keep you a pauper or make you a king—
It depends upon how you will groom me.
I can feed you on honey or feed you on swill,
I can bring you a ruby or rag, sir;
I can stifle ambition or cultivate will,
And make life a sweet thing or a drag, sir.

I can serve you most sadly or serve you well,
I can get you there late or on time, sir;
I can take you through heaven or take you through hell,
And it doesn't depend on the clime, sir.
But a little red sand—now please understand!—
Will throttle your fuming and fussing,
When mixed with some clay in the logical way,
And will hypnotize all of your cussing.

Gettysburg, Pa., Nov. 19.—The fifty-second anniversary of the dedication of the National cemetery at Gettysburg is being observed here to-day by the dedication of Virginia's statue to General Robert E. Lee. The monument stands on West Confederate avenue, Seminary Ridge, where the men under Pickett started on their famous charge. A big delegation has come from Virginia for the dedication, and the other Southern States have sent representatives.

Little Babies Playing on His Back.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — How Father Tiber Overflows His Banks.

"THERE is a river so beloved that the people through whose country it flows have made a huge statue of it," said daddy when a little boy and girl begged for a story. "It begins way up in some mountain streams about 250 miles from Rome, and, not very deep nor nearly as wide as most American rivers are, it flows on down south, the largest river in Italy, into the beautiful blue Mediterranean sea."

"A statue is something like a picture," said Jack. "How could a river ever stay still long enough to have its picture taken?"

"The clever Italians made a statue of the river's meaning, not its stream," said daddy. "They imagined it as a river god, with lots of little babies playing on his back, just as real Italian children loved to play on the river bank, and with interesting seaweeds caught in his beard and curly hair. And they called him Father Tiber—a huge, strong, powerful creature—because sometimes the little mountain streams fed their river so fast that it overflowed its banks, soaked parts of Rome and even took the lives of those who lived too near.

"As Father Tiber flows on he gathers lots of yellow clay into his waters, so that the river rarely looks clear, like Uncle Ben's brook. But Father Tiber has a delightful island, just big enough to hold a charming, hot old plaza and a quaint little church almost a thousand years old. Emperor Otto built it in memory of his best friend. The pretty red brick bell tower is so old that the bricks are faded gray, and at the very tip of the island stands a little grove of orange trees—oh, so old!—that toss their fragrance down into the yellow mud of the Tiber. The bridge that crosses to the island is one of the loveliest in all Rome, which has nine bridges across the Tiber and seven hills above it."

"Tell us about the hills, daddy!" cried Evelyn.

"I will tell you that at the foot of one, the Palatine, is a little grotto, near part of the old city wall, where a mother wolf is said to have had her den, and on top of another, the Capitoline, where the Romans once had their senate house, stands a magnificent statue of a mother wolf with two baby boys under her feet. In the wonderful little museum near this statue are very ancient Roman coins that also have a mother wolf on them."

"The Romans seem to be very fond of statues," said Jack.

"Tell us more about bridges and hills, daddy!" cried Evelyn.

"Seven hills all in one story?" asked daddy. "I would rather you remembered well the one story of old Father Tiber, who sometimes cruelly overflows his banks which Roman children love to play beside," daddy finished.

Married Life on $80 a Month

BY MRS. D. A. LEONARD

John Sutner Begins to See More Clearly His Shortcomings.

"Before the rest come in, I want to correct a false impression that I think you have; that I gave you in fact." John Sutner walked over to Julia Osgood's desk. That young lady looked up expectant, while she mechanically turned the paper into place ready to begin work.

"You remember the day Molly came down here to see me? You asked me if she was my wife," continued John.

"Surely, a very stylish looking little woman she was too," remarked Julia.

"Exactly! I was deeply disgusted and took no pains to hide the fact."

"I remember that too." Julia smiled archly.

"Well, I owe it to her to tell you that the dress I took such exceptions to was not an extravagance at all." John paused and Julia looked up expectant.

"It seems the dress was a discard of a friend of hers and Molly got it in exchange for some embroidery. She embroiders beautifully. She had remodelled the thing with such success that I never dreamed it was not new, and naturally I was a deal upset to have her spend money for a silk dress under the circumstances." John turned and looked out of the window.

"I thought you said she could not sew," exclaimed Julia. "That dress was well made."

"Oh, she did not have to alter it much, I presume. Besides she has been taking great pains to learn to sew; has been trying to help in many ways, and she had this dress up her sleeve as a great surprise, and when she sprang it on me, I said cruel things to her; broke her all up in fact." John stopped speaking but remained facing the window.

"Men don't understand women," remarked Julia after a pause. John wheeled and looked at her. "I often think the marvel is, not that there are so many divorces, but that there are not more. We look at life from such different angles. What is of vital importance to one, is all in the day's work to the other and of no consequence at all."

John took a few turns up and down the office and pausing before Julia's desk he blurted out, "I believe you are right. How can I help things."

"Tact is putting one's self in the other's place. I suppose that is hard to do. That is why tact is so much praised. It is no credit to do easy things." She smiled and fell to work rattling off the letters.

John went to his own desk and sat down with his head in his hands. Ever since the night when he had learned the truth about the dress he had been haunted with a sense of his own shortcomings in regard to making Molly happy, and Julia's words had only added to his sense of failure.

As they were leaving the office John said:

"I wish you could come around and call on Molly sometime. If you knew her perhaps you could put me wise sometimes when I am wrong-headed."

"I should like to know her for my own sake but I have very little time to go anywhere. Why don't you bring her around to see me?"

"The boy keeps us at home a great deal evenings, but we must make some arrangements to meet. I will talk it over with Molly. Good bye." And he ran down the steps and walked briskly homeward.

"Things are going better then," thought Julia. "I'm so glad."

POLITICAL NOTES

New Jersey suffragists found little to be pleased with in their interview with Congressmen this week. Out of four Representatives interviewed not one declared positively that he would vote for a Federal amendment. One man, Congressman Dow H. Drukke, of Passaic, told a delegation of women that he was in favor of the amendment, but did not feel free to vote for it, inasmuch as his district went against it at the polls recently. A similar stand was taken by Congressman Browning, of Camden, who gave the women no hope at all. Congressman Capstick, of Montville, said he was open to conviction, and he was probably the most encouraging of the men approached. Congressman Gray came out unqualifiedly against the measure.

Among the latest names mentioned in the gossip connected with the Gubernatorial race is that of former Congressman William E. Tuttle, of Westfield. Congressman Tuttle is a popular man not only in his own county, but through other parts of the State, and his defeat last year for Congress is attributed not to any falling off in his personal following, but to the Republican sweep which was apparent that year. Other likely Democratic candidates talked of are Naval Officer H. Otto Wittpenn and Sheriff Kinkead, of Hudson county, and State Senator Charles O'Connor Hennessy, of Bergen county.

The Assembly investigating committee, which probed the Roosevelt strike trouble, will hold one more meeting before reporting to the Legislature this winter. The meeting will be in Roosevelt on Friday, November 26, and the officers of the fertilizer works will be quizzed. It is expected that this committee will recommend remedial legislation to prevent recurrences similar to the shooting of strikers in the Roosevelt riots. The introduction of a State constabulary bill is quite probable.

Governor Fielder is quoted as saying that he will not be a candidate for any office next year, and although rumor had the State Executive a candidate to oppose United States Senator James E. Martine in the Senatorial race, he has apparently sidetracked this talk by his positive assertion that he is through. He is taking the stand that if he is ever to resume his law practice he must do so now.

Going on record definitely for Charles C. Pilgrim for Speaker and John B. Kates for majority leader, the Essex county Assemblymen made up a slate at a conference in the Essex county Republican headquarters on Wednesday. The naming of Pilgrim and Kates is the result of an Essex-South Jersey alliance, Pilgrim being an Essex man and Kates from Camden. In addition, Upton F. Jefferys, of Camden, will be supported for clerk of the House. The Essex-South Jersey alliance freezes out not only Union county, whose delegation is in favor of William N. Runyon, of Plainfield, for the Speakership, but also Passaic county, whose delegation is for Captain James Parker, of Passaic, for clerk of the House, and a caucus fight is promised.

Another attack was flung at William P. Verdon, of Hoboken, Republican leader in Hudson county, when Philip W. Grece, of Jersey City, made public a set of figures to show that the G. O. P. vote in Hudson has declined 17,000 in six years. Mr. Grece accuses mismanagement by Verdon and his followers of driving 12,000 good Republicans to stay-at-home positions. Grece will probably be a candidate for State Senator next year.

Among the Gubernatorial gossip which is going the rounds is an interesting rumorabout the possible candidacy of former Mayor George B. McClellan, of New York. No serious attempt has as yet been made to put him in the race, but he is believed by some to be strong timber. Mr McClellan's father was Governor of this State, and the former New York Mayor is now a professor at Princeton University, residing in Princeton borough.

State Senator Charles O'Connor Hennessey, of Bergen county, has stepped down in favor of Senator Ackerson for the Democratic minority leadership. In a statement made recently the Bergen county Senator not only declares that he will not be a candidate for the position, but places himself on record in favor of Senator Ackerson. This move by Hennessey practically answers the naming of Ackerson as leader of his party in the Upper House.

The suffragists have gained consent of William McCombs, chairman of the Democratic national committee, to appear before the committee on December 7, the most important gathering before the actual holding of the Democratic convention. Delegations from both the National Suffrage Association and the Congressional Union will be at the meeting to urge the passage of a Federal amendment.

THINK, FOR YOUR OWN SAFETY

Public Service Railway has undertaken a twelve months' campaign of education in the interest of the public, through the medium of text and illustrations designed to warn patrons against accidents

Look for the Cards in the Cars

Parents should bear in mind that children are apt to be thoughtless, while at play, and a warning, given in time, may prevent suffering, injury or death and life-long regret.

Public Service Cars travel more than 50,000,000 miles a year and carry upwards of 1,100,000 passengers, on an average, every day.

Public Service Cars must be operated upon the streets and the Company exercises great care, but it has no control over pedestrians.

Public Service Railway has a record for safety of operation, of which it is justly proud. It is a record that is excelled by no other electric surface railway in the United States. This is no mere boast. It is a statement of fact.

Public Service Railway is jealous of its achievements in the safe handling of its patrons. It seeks to not only maintain its record, but to improve it. Not a single passenger has been killed on the cars, in the last four years.

SAFETY

SAFETY

COMES BEFORE TIME OR SPEED

We train our men to be extremely careful and ever on the alert to avoid accidents. We spare no reasonable expense for protective devices. We cannot do it all ourselves. Part of the burden of safeguarding yourself rests upon you and we ask your co-operation for the benefit of the public.

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphate hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.—Adv.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! how good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffing, blowing; no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.—Adv.

FUNERAL SERVICE FOR FAMOUS ELK

Arthur C. Moreland, Who Was Well Known Here, Died in New York Hospital.

Elks from all parts of the country will be present tonight in the New York Lodge of Elks' home to attend the funeral of Arthur C. Moreland, a national figure in this order who delivered the principal address at the memorial services of the Plainfield Lodge in 1912. Mr. Moreland died Wednesday night in the New York Post-Graduate Hospital following a short illness with gangrene of the right foot. He was editor and publisher of the Elks-Antler, the leading publication of the order, and had visited Plainfield on numerous occasions.

As an editor and orator Mr. Moreland was known to every Elk in the United States. Before he was stricken with blindness, more than twenty years ago, he had for years acted as interlocutor for the San Francisco minstrels. He had served as exalted ruler of the San Francisco lodge and of the New York Lodge, No. 1, and was a leader in the movement to improve the ritual. He was the author of the ritual adopted in 1883 and still in use by the order.

NEWSPAPER LIBEL IS MALING CHARGE

Colorado Anti-Suffragist Seeks $30,000 Damages From Asbury Park Evening Press.

As attorney for John B. Maling, of Colorado, who took an active part in the campaign against the adoption of the suffrage amendment in this State, James R. Nugent, of Newark, has filed in the United States District at Trenton suit for $30,000 against J. Lyle Kinmonth, editor and owner of the Asbury Park Evening Press. Libel is alleged. An article printed in the Press attacking Maling is made part of the complaint.

The article in the Press appeared shortly after Mr. Nugent gave a dinner to Mr. Maling at the Coleman House, Asbury Park, last summer, at which plans for defeating woman suffrage were discussed. The Press said that Mr. Maling was introduced by Mr. Nugent as a "man prominent in financial circles in Colorado," who had been invited to remain in New Jersey by Mr. Nugent to "tell his story to gatherings about the State' on the alleged evil effects of womsuffrage in Colorado.

The newspaper then reprinted an article from the Woman's Journal, of Boston, which purported to tell who Mr. Maling was and what his previous activities had been.

The complaint filed by Mr. Nugent says that Mr. Maling resides at Arvada, Jefferson county, Col.; that he is "fiscal and confidential agent for municipal and private corporations and individuals employing his services;" that he is also a "public speaker on financial and other subjects;" that he is interested in "private divers', enterprises," and is known in financial, political and other circles, not only in Colorado, but also in New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and throughout the United States.

The newspaper article complained of is described as "false and libelous," "wilfully and maliciously published with intent to discredit, defame and injure" the character and standing of Mr. Maling. It is alleged that he has actually been damaged by its publica both in business and social relations, and that he has been caused great humiliation.

Mr. Maling addressed a number of meetings in this State in opposition to woman suffrage, and spent also a large part of his time trying to convince business men that woman suffrage would be a menace.

GET 1,200 NEW MEMBERS

Chairman Gavett, of division B, the Flat and Saurer teams tied for highest team honors, Velie and Abbott teams tied for second team honors and the pennant for the third highest team was won by the Overland corps. Chairman MacArt announced that two pennants would be awarded as the teams were tied.

A total of 1,200 new members for the local Y. M. C. A. means that Plainfield has set a new world's record in this work, according to F. A. W. Lawrenson, business manager of Association Men, which is the official Y. M. C. A. publication. Mr. Lawrenson is an authority on such matters and in extending his congratulations to the workers last night he said that the percentage of full members secured in proportion to the eligible population was the highest known in all the world.

Mr. Lawrenson said that the dominant note he saw in the faces of the men before him was enthusiasm, which he defined as the headlight on the train of progress, saying that nothing great had ever been accomplished without it. He said that his prophesy as to the campaign had been realized, but there now remained its purpose, which was the assimilation and conservation of members that had been secured. To accentuate the victory won in this city and show the efficiency and standing of Plainfield Y. M. C. A. officials he told of a financial campaign conducted recently in a town of practically the same size which resulted in $700 being raised in three days' canvassing. This was due, he said, to the fact that Plainfield has confidence in the men behind its Y. M. C. A., while the other town has not. Mr. Lawrenson expressed a wish that the association would grow with its membership, that it would celebrate its golden jubilee in a new home and that he would be present to take part in the celebration.

Best Town In the World.

The most interesting address of the evening was that of President Murray. He said that the familiar phrase "Tell me what you eat and I'll tell you what you are," might be changed to read, "Tell me what you like and I'll tell you what you are," and that if this were true Plainfield was the best community in all the United States in which to live because it had responded more nobly to the pleadings for a good cause than any other city. He expressed the official thanks of the association to the women who served the suppers, the daily newspapers of the city who gave so much space to the campaign, all workers who did canvassing, to all employers, officers of the association for their faithful service, and especially to Mr. MacArt for planning and supervising the campaign.

"The Plainfield association has always stood for the one great thing—Christian living," said President Murray. "We have always considered our association a servant of the churches of the city. Our aim is to make Plainfield a better place to live in by helping our men and boys to live better lives.

"We feel the responsibility which the largely increased membership has brought to us.

"Membership in the association means two things: opportunity to improve physically, mentally and spiritually; and opportunity for service.

"The campaign has lasted six days but we are to be here three hundred and sixty-five days every year. We are anxious to help those who have joined us in our gymnasium, educational classes and our Bible classes. We want this building to be a resort to which you will come and where you will find the friendship which counts for so much.

"The great increase in membership brings forcefully before the people the great need of better quarters. In 1917 we shall be fifty years of age and we believe that the people of Plainfield will see to it that we celebrate our jubilee in a new and adequate home. The last ten-day campaign for a Y. M. C. A. building was conducted in Anderson, Indiana, a city smaller than Plainfield, where one hundred and forty-eight thousand three hundred and thirty-eight dollars were given during the campaign, in addition to an initial gift of one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars.

"We need your help and we want to help you."

"From the depth of my heart I want to thank you men who have done this," said General Chairman Albin, in prefacing the remarks of President Murray. "You men have put it over and I give you credit for the entire campaign without reservation. You have placed a great responsibility upon the association by your noble work in securing 1,200 new members, and I want to assure you that we realize this and will do the limit."

Due to Local Officers.

Mr. Albin said that a large part of the success of the campaign was due to the confidence that the people of Plainfield had in officers and directors of the Y. M. C. A. He referred to Secretary Estes as a "thorough Christian and an earnest gentleman," and President Murray as a "man than whom there is none better loved in all of Plainfield—a man who puts the spiritual nature first in the development of mankind," and each name brought a cheer from every man in the house. He congratulated the men on the fine spirit which they had shown during the campaign and promised them that the association would do its best for the young men who had joined.

Upon motion of a member of the board of directors a vote of thanks was extended all those mentioned by President Murray and the men stood to express their approval of the resolution, giving three cheers for "the ladies." Judge Runyon escorted Mrs. Murray and Mrs. Titsworth to the center of the auditorium at a point near the speakers' stand, where they blushingly received the thanks of the workers for six bountiful suppers.

Chairman J. A. MacArt, who planned the campaign, declared that the job of the local Y. M. C. A. had just begun, now that its membership roll had been increased. He urged each one of the workers to stand back of Secretary Estes and other officials of the association in seeing that each member was properly cared for, and said that the percentage of renewals secured one year later would be the real test of the association. Mr. MacArt expressed the hope that he left Plainfield after his short stay here, not with 200 friends, but with the friendship of every man, woman and child in the entire city, and if the noisy assurance that followed his address is any indication of local sentiment his wish is fulfilled. Judge Runyon arose and shouted:

"Boys, our opinion of MacArt is universal. We all think the same. Let's give him three farewell cheers." They were given with feeling.

Praise For Saurer Team.

"One of the biggest things in the entire campaign," said Chairman Albin, "has been the work of the Saurer team," and he demanded an address from Manager Ayre, of the local plant of the International Motor Company. Mr. Ayre said that men from his company had entered the contest with hesitation because they understood the competition that would be met, but that they had demonstrated their ability to get results by getting a membership out of every tenth man in the shops. The total of 109 new members that they turned in included but one outsider, he explained, and that membership was turned over to Chairman Gavett's division to pay the debt they owed on Judge Runyon's challenge. He gave credit for the Saurer showing to Capt. Zimmer. Mr. Ayre said in closing that his company, like all other manufacturing plants in Plainfield, would continue to have a hard-headed business interest in the success of the Y. M. C. A. and would help whenever it could.

Judge Runyon, who is chaiman of division A, paid his debts last night, or at least his captains paid theirs. At last Saturday evening's dinner the judge issued a challenge to Chairman Gavett's division on the returns of Monday evening. His proposition was that the losing division give six memberships to the winners, and the totals of all team in division A are one short of the number secured because each team turned over a membership to a team in division B.

The full Dutch Arms band played during the dinner and after all reports were in it gave an hour's concert of popular and classical music.

Among those who were the recipients of cheers from the appreciative workers were Chairmen Albin and MacArt, President Murray, "The Ladies," Assemblyman Runyon, J. W. Gavett, Secretary Estes, members of the Dutch Arms band, Capt. Rice, Capt. Rittenhouse and other leaders.

A feature of the cheering was the yell of the Ford team. It was:

"Rickety-de-bus, rickety-de-bus!
We make a noise like a jitney bus.
Ford! Ford!"

Teachers of the Bryant, Irving, Washington and Lincoln schools each gave a boy's membership to the association during the campaign.

CHURCH REQUIRES MODERN METHODS

Rev. Dr. Thorburn Tells Methodists That Pink Teas Will Not Fill Sanctuary.

timely SUGGESTIONS

Speaker Says That Practical Ideas Must Be Employed to Get "Big" Men Interested In Religion—Stewards Elect Officers for Year.

At the closing session of the annual district stewards' convention, last night, in the Monroe Avenue Methodist church, Rev. Dr. Thomas E. Thorburn, of Montclair, talked on "Effective Efforts to Spread the Gospel." There was a large attendance and the speaker aroused much interest by his forceful discussion of the duties confronting the modern churchman.

In opening his remarks, Dr. Thorburn declared that the modern church was not performing its full duties and would never fulfill the sacred mission of "bringing humanity back to the Father until it had changed very much." He said that most church people seemed to think that when they had erected fine churches and secured the services of an eloquent preacher their work was finished and all that remained for them to do was to fold their hands and watch the people flock into that fine church. But, here they were mistaken for the people wouldn't flock into the church, but rather they would flock past it.

He said that in order to make the church prosper it was necessary to adopt business methods in church work. A business man never folds his hands and waits for business to come but he gets out after it; he sends his salesmen out among the people and either bring them to his business place or takes the business to them. That is precisely what the church must do. Sacrifice the effete idea of church dignity, and go out among the people, mix with them and either bring them to the church or take the church to them. "Ye are the salt of the earth," said the speaker, "but salt is very unpalatable when it is in lumps. It is only when it is used to season food that it becomes valuable. Just so with church people. They can accomplish nothing of real value when they confine their efforts to simply going to church, holding meetings and holding together. They must get out among people who do not come to church; they must be spread out and they must work among the poor and needy." The speaker said that you could never hold the business man in the church by giving him pink teas. He wanted something bigger and better, and if the church did not give him practical work to do he would go elsewhere to get it.

Dr. Thorburn declared that the organized Bible class, with its systematized study and well planned work, was doing a wonderful work in building up the church. He said here was a work of interest to hold and interest big men, but it was necessary to first place the big men in touch with it. He outlined the work necessary to be done, how it should be done and how all should have a share in doing it.

At the morning session the purely business matters were disposed of, the greater portion of which were of a routine nature. These officers were elected:

Chairman, the Rev. Dr. F. J. Hubach; secretary, J. E. Crofts, of West New Brighton, N. Y.; financial secretary, J. R. Laggren, of Elizabeth; treasurer, G. G. Teller, of Cranford.

On the executive commission: F. G. Crawford, of Plainfield; J. S. A. Wittke, of Westfield; E. B. Moore, of Elizabeth; J. J. Volk, of Quakertown, J. B. Marter, of Metuchen.

While the assemblage at the afternoon session was disappointed when it was learned that Bishop Luther B. Wilson, of New York, who was to deliver an address, could not attend, the meeting proved to be an interesting one. A number of local speakers took part and a number of interesting topics were discussed.

This district includes all the Methodist churches in Union, Somerset, Middlesex and Hunterdon counties, north of the Raritan River, and Richmond borough on Staten Island.

UNION THANKSGIVING SERVICE.

There will be a union service of Thanksgiving at the Park Avenue Baptist church, comprising the Congregational, Temple Baptist, Seventh-Day Baptist and Park Avenue Baptist churches. Other pastors and congregation will attend and participate. Rev. Edwin Shaw, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, will preach the sermon. The service will be at 11 o'clock, and the public will be welcome. The offering will go to local charity.

SUBSCRIPTION DANCE IS LARGELY ATTENDED

Muhlenberg Hospital Will Get $200 From Social Function at High School.

The first of the subscription dances to be given in the Plainfield High School Auditorium last night, for the benefit of the Muhlenberg Hospital, was a success, over $200 being realized, which will be used principally to purchase furnishings for the new addition to the Nurses' Home. The auditorium was tastefully decorated with palms and cut flowers for the occasion, all of which were donated for the function. Refreshments served during the evening netted in a considerable amount of the proceeds. Dancers enjoyed the music of Franzen's orchestra, and every number was warmly applauded.

The committee in charge of the affair consisted of the following: Mrs. J. M. Charles and Miss Louise Booth, chairmen; Messrs. W. L. Righter, M. Rushmore, H. L. Hall, Daniel Runkle, H. S. Brown, Owen Fleming, James Fleming, W. G. Cooke, Mellick Tweedy, E. Jeffcott T. Van Boskerck, John Valiant, C. B. Tyler, Ames Brooks, C. B. Lawrence, Roy Cox, Allan Cowperthwaite, Reeve Stockton and J. M. Charles.

"BILL, THE COACHMAN," IS WELL RECEIVED

N. P. H. S. Athletic Ass'n Gives Fine Performance at Park Club

"Bill, the Coachman," was presented last evening by the Boys' Athletic Association, of the North Plainfield High School, in the Park Club, before a large and appreciative audience. The three acts were replete with funny incidents, which the audience acknowledged by frequent rounds of applause.

The cast comprised eight members, including Emily Pleydell and Marjorie Burtis, as Eunice and Samantha Brewer; Bertha Boylan as Mrs. Samuel Brewer, while Gladys Sullivan portrayed the character of Anne, the servant girl; Clarence Roddy as Samuel Brewer, a wealthy oil magnate, Nelson Kenworthy as C. Reginald Depeyster, a much abused lover; Oscar Dilts as "Bill, the Coachman," and Warren Townley, a disguised butler. The success of the production was due to the efforts of Miss Ethel Barnard, whose ability as a coach was plainly evident. Miss Barnard was presented with a handsome desk set during the evening.

Every part was cleverly dramatized, Clarence Roddy especially making a conspicuous success as Mr. Brewer. Emily Pleydell gave evidences of her dramatic ability by the manner in which she characterized the difficult part of Eunice Brewer, a dissatisfied society belle. Marjorie Burtis proved equally as competent, distinguishing herself in a brilliant manner. Bertha Boylan, by her sedate and soothing talking, proved the logical selection for Mrs. Brewer. Between the actions of Nelson Kenworthy and Oscar Dilts the audience was given ample opportunity to exercise their laughing powers, both of these actors, by their peculiar antics, scoring big hits.

REV. DR. R. F. Y. PIERCE GIVES TALK TO CHILDREN

In the Y. M. C. A. Hall yesterday afternoon Rev. Dr. R. F. Y. Pierce, of New York, gave an interesting illustrated address to Sunday-school children, taking for his subject "Increasing the Membership of Sunday-schools." Mr. Pierce at first impressed on his youthful hearers the importance of the work to be done, what was to be done and how to do it. He showed the number of children who were attending Sunday-schools, and compared this with the immense number which did not attend.

In juvenile terms he explained the necessity of "Spreading the Light of Life," or, in other words, he tried to convince the children that the great work for them to do was to get other children to attend Sunday-school, and thus spread the light of the gospel, which was "Spreading the Light of Life."

MME. BIELER TELLS OF M'ALL WORK

Interesting Talk Followed by Tea at Home of Mrs. S. T. Carter, Jr.

One of the most interesting meetings ever held by the Plainfield Auxiliary working for the McCall Mission in France took the form of a tea at the home of Mrs. Samuel T. Carter, Jr., on Woodland avenue, yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Carter, the president, opened the meeting by reading a portion of Scripture, and then introduced the speaker, Mme. Bieler, the daughter of the historian, J. H. Merile D'Aubigne. Nearly seventy women were present, who were fortunate to hear her most interesting and enthusiastic address on "The Soul of France." Mme. Bieler showed how France in the last fifty years had grown from "Materialism to despair, from despair to repentance, from repentance to faith, and from faith to heroism."

A very delightful social hour was enjoyed by Mrs. Carter's guests at the conclusion of the address.

NEWCORN'S SERMON AT TEMPLE SHOLEM

Speaks at Regular Meeting on Reason, Conscience and Religion.

The regular Friday night meeting of Temple Sholem was held last night with a good attendance. President William Newcorn was in charge of the service. A feature of the meeting was the singing of the regular choir, aided by Miss Rae Preger and Miss Ruth Weinberger.

President William Newcorn delivered the evening sermon. His subject was, "Reason, Conscience and Religion," and he said in part:

"Every human being possesses to a certain extent three attributes, namely, reason, conscience and religion.

"Reason exists within every breast. By that I mean not that reason which draws inferences from the experiences of the senses, but that higher faculty which from the treasures of its own conscience originates truth and assents to it by the force of evidence.

"In question of practical duty conscience is God's empire whose light illuminates every heart. There is nothing in the Bible which has not created at first, and does not still create the life of conscience within us.

"It is the glory of their fathers to have established in their laws the equal claims of every child to the public care of its morals and its mind.

"Governments may come and go, dynasties may rise and fall, races may disappear from the earth, the morals of mankind may rise to the highest pinnacle of intelligence, or sink to the lowest depths of degradation, but the light of Reform Judaism will grow and become brighter and brighter, firmer and firmer, stronger and stronger, until the Jewish race, united as once, in the belief of the Unity of God will acclaim in one voice in the words of the prophet of old, 'Praise be the Lord who reigneth forever and ever.'"

CLAN MACKENZIE WILL GIVE SCOTCH CONCERT

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the coming concert and dance to be given by Clan Mackenzie on Friday evening, December 10, have completed the elaborate program for the affair. An array of talented artists have been engaged for the occasion, among which are Mrs. Edith H. Frank, soprano soloist of the Baptist church; Miss Florence Mulholland, contralto, the Scottish nightingale of New York; the Doudson troupte of Highland dancers, the champion dancers of the Eastern States, in costume; Professor Theodore Martin, the noted Scottish tenor of New York; Professor William Holmes, the well-known vocalist of Plainfield, baritone, and the celebrated Scottish comedian of Philadelphia, R. F. Faichney, and Elias Macpherson, of New York; Major Peter MacInnon, of Westfield.

Professor Mitchell's orchestra will furnish the music for the dance. The clan will meet on Monday evening at 109 Park avenue, when all members are expected to be present as a very important matters will be brought to the attention of the officers. The meeting will be called for 8 o'clock sharp.

SUDDEN DEATH OF VINCENT L. FRAZEE

Well Known Citizen Passes Away at Home on Madison Avenue.

WAS ILL THREE DAYS

Was Only Democratic Member of City Council in 1892-93-94-95—There Survives a Wife and Three Sisters—Funeral Tuesday.

After an illness of but three days of pleuro-pneumonia, former Councilman Vincent L. Frazee, aged fifty-nine years, passed away last night at 11 o'clock at his home, 112 Madison avenue. The funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at his late home, and the interment will be in the Hillside cemetery, the services at the grave being private. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First Methodist Episcopal church, will officiate.

Mr. Frazee, who was a son of Vincent L. Frazee, Sr., was born at Scotch Plains, and spent his boyhood days in that village, where his father was stationmaster for the Central Railroad of New Jersey prior to the removal of the tracks to their present location, thereby cutting Scotch Plains off its line. Vincent Jr., attended the public schools of his native village, but later completed his school course in Elizabeth.

For many years he was employed in Joseph Cutter's grocery store on Front street, and at the latter's death engaged in business for himself at the old stand. For a number of years past he has been employed at the Schloss' stores.

Mr. Frazee was a Democratic member of the Common Council in 1892-93-94-95, and was known as "The Lone Star," from the fact that he was the only Democrat in the Council during his term. But the fact that he was the only member of the city's governing body of his political faith did not prevent him from rendering valuable service to his home city. He was a member of the volunteer fire department and the Exempt Firemen's Association.

Mr. Frazee was twice married, his first wife being Miss Annie Warnock, daughter of Alexander Warnock, one of Plainfield's pioneer bakers. Later Mr. Frazee married Miss Kate Weaver, daughter of the late Deputy Sheriff Peter V. Weaver, and they continued their residence in this city.

Beside his widow, he is survived by three sisters, Mrs. A. R. Hetfield, of this city; Mrs. George Windell, of Boston, and Mrs. Norman Littell of New York city.

While he had been afflicted with a severe cold, it was not until Tuesday afternoon that he was compelled to go to bed. He was taken with a severe chill and the family physician pronounced his ailment as pneumonia. He grew rapidly worse until yesterday afternoon, when Drs. W. H. Murray and C. A. Gesswein held a consultation and were convinced that acute pleuro-pneumonia had developed.

Friends are invited to view the remains at the late home after 12:30 tomorrow afternoon.

DR. CRAFTS WILL SPEAK AT CRESCENT AVE. CHURCH

Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, head of the International Reform Bureau, of Washington, will speak in Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church tomorrow morning at 10:30 on the subject, "Back to the Bible." Dr. Crafts feels the necessity of this work to the extent that he has given his salary for twenty years to it. His work is well-known to churches and religious leaders throughout the country. At present the bureau is particularly interested in three objects which will commend themselves to Christian business men.

They are: 1, To carry in the New Jersey Legislature a "red light" injunction law, which is working well in the national Capital and in Pennsylvania and eighteen other States; 2, to carry in Congress a law for Federal censorship of motion picture, already halfway to victory, by favorable report in last House of Representatives, but needing nation-wide promotion in November and December in order to carry it before Congress; 3, for restoring and improving daily Bible reading in homes and public schools.

FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER OF HORSE

Peapack Man Tried on Peculiar Charge in Somerville Court.

Both men are farmers. The jury was out about twenty-five minutes.

WHAT ABOUT THIS FOR RECIPROCITY?

Squirrels' Life Saver Rewarded for His Humane Act by Appreciative Beasts.

Whether or not those kind-hearted Plainfielders who came to the rescue of "Little Gray Squirrel," when other fellow citizens declared that he would have to go, may be rewarded for their love of animals by some peculiar phenomena it's a safe conclusion that the reward won't hold a candle with that bestowed upon one F. F. Merritt, of Denver, Col. He refused to shoot a colony of the fur-bearing rodents that made their home in his apricot trees and to show their appreciation they added many dollars to his bankroll.

The squirrels stripped his trees of every apricot, but took only the pit. The apricot pit is extremely sweet and juicy. The squirrels carefully opened the fruit and extracted the seed. The fruit, devoid of pits, was left on the ground beneath the trees. The pits have been stored away by the animals for winter use. Merritt easily collected the fruit as pitted by the squirrels and sold it to the canning factory at two cents per pound more than ordinary unpitted apricots brought.

In addition, he was saved the expense of employing pickers to harvest his crop.

Plainfield hasn't any apricot trees, but those animal lovers who saved the life of the nut eaters are hoping against hope that the spry little animals will return the favor by clearing the city of all two-legged nuts, of which there are said to be an abundance.

VISITS SICK CHILD AND IS FINED $2

Musician at Local Theatre Violates Quarantine Laws In Borough.

Because he visited his little child who was ill at his home with diphtheria, George W. Scott, a musician at a local theatre, was arraigned in police court in the borough of North Plainfield yesterday morning and fined $2.

Recorder Hand was lenient with Scott. He was charged with a violation of the quarantine law, for which the maximum fine is $100, but because of Scott's plea for mercy he was given a light fine.

The arrest was made by Health Officer Oliff, of the borough. He had the Scott home on Watchung avenue under quarantine and there was a big placard on the door which carried warning of the contagious disease within. Scott had been staying away but one day this week he visited his child against orders of the health officer and yesterday he was arrested.

The Scott child will be released from quarantine this afternoon or tomorrow, but this was not known when the offense was committed.

STREET DEPARTMENT BURIES DEAD BEASTS

Some Misunderstanding Evident on the Part of the S. P. C. A. Officials.

That some misunderstanding is apparent on the part of Mrs. Stephen G. Van Hoesen, local agent for the S. P. C. A., relative to the disposition of the dead bodies of animals executed by her society, was brought out this morning during a conference between Mayor Leighton Calkins and Street Commissioner Andrew Gavett in the former's office. In a statement to the newspapers yesterday Mrs. Van Hoesen asserted that the S. P. C. A. was not receiving the cooperation it deserved from the city in its efforts to rid the city of stray cats and dogs and intimated that either the street department or Board of Health had shown negligence.

Street Commissioner Gavett, however, presented data this morning to offset the expressed opinion that the street department had not cared for the dead carcasses in the past and the fact that a misunderstanding exists between the S. P. C. A. agent and the city is very apparent. The city reports of 1914 indicate that nearly 150 dead carcasses were disposed of by the street department at an expense of $82, and Mr. Gavett declares that his men have been doing this work for the past two years and is at a loss to understand just what prompted Mrs. Van Hoesen's remarks.

When Mayor Calkins sought Mrs. Van Hoesen in the S. P. C. A. office this morning he found the door locked and as a result was unable to apprise her of Mr. Gavett's views. It is the general belief of all concerned in this matter that the city Board of Health and not the street committee should be burdened with the work of removing dead animals. It is pointed out that dead beasts constitute a nuisance which should be taken care of by the health inspectors.

The S. P. C. A. is supervising the slaughter of the stray animals but claims that it cannot take care of the dead bodies. Mayor Calkins stated today that he recognized the fact that the society was doing good work along this line and saw no reason why there should not be co-operation on the part of the city department.

TINY HENRY WENT RIDING ALL BY ITS LITTLE SELF

Here's a sure 'nuff honest-to-goodness yarn involving one of Henry Ford's finest. It's true because Patrolman John Kelley tells it and Joan claims his optics provide for him a vision of average calibre. During the heavy rain and wind storm of yesterday morning one of the little Henrys was standing in front of Griffen's hardware store on East Front street and a Mitchell touring car was stationed in front of Schwed's clothing store. Both vehicles were headed westward and the former was unoccupied.

While the wind was blowing a ninety-mile an hour gale the tiny Ford decided it was lonesome and caught hold of the wings of the gale. It was carried at terrific velocity along the brick pavement and crashed headlong into the Mitchell. No, gentle reader, the Ford wasn't wrecked. It wasn't even scratched. On the other hand the mudguards and rear lights of the bigger machine were wrecked and the man on the front seat was jolted sky high.

IN CHARGE OF RED CROSS.

Washington, Nov. 20.—Former President William H. Taft today takes charge of the Red Cross, and will preside at the meeting here. President Wilson is pleased with the acceptance by the former Executive, because of his experience in Red Cross work when he was Secretary of War and President. Professor Taft immediately takes active charge of the central governing body, which passes on all administrative affairs of the organizations. It is generally accepted that the movement to combine all relief societies founded in America since the outbreak of the European war, under the Red Cross, will be consummated, and that under Mr. Taft's guidance a permanent endowment of $100,000,000 will be obtained.

SOMERVILLE MAY HAVE MURDER CASE

Blood-stained Clothing of Woman Found Buried in Woods.

Somerville, Nov. 20.—What appears to the Somerset county authorities to be a murder was called to official attention this week by Edward C. Hahr, of Coontown.

Mr. Hahr's daughter, Helena, and son, Edward, were strolling through the fields about one mile from their home when they discovered a hat in a clump of dry grass. He secured a stick and dug it out, and continued to dig, and to his surprise unearthed a blue silk skirt and waist, silk stockings and under-garments. The youngsters returned to the house and informed their father. Upon the arrival of County Detective George D. Totten the articles were turned over to him. The waist and under-garments are stained with blood. Upon investigation Totten has been informed by Ralph and Harry Mundy Frank Alletta and a Mrs. Flammer, who reside near Coontown and Springdale that they saw a woman dressed in blue in the vicinity several days before Sunday, November 14.

COMPANY'S APPEAL ON AWARD ARGUED

Insurance Adjustors Made Settlement for $4,403 on Local Property Which Burned.

Argument on an insurance case appealed by the North British and Mercantile Insurance Company from the judgment of the New Jersey District Court in which Martin A. Rose, of Fanwood borough, was the plaintiff, took place in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Newark, yesterday. The property covered by the insurance policy in question is located at Midway and Hunter avenues, Plainfield, and was known as the Dr. Gilbert house. The policy was for $6,600. Incendiarism was suspected, but not proven by Rose. The company's adjustment of loss was $4,403 and the lower court gave judgment in favor of Rose for $4,898.

The company appealed and at yesterday's argument contention was made in its behalf that at the time policy was executed the title of the property was not in Rose's name, but in that of the Mountain View Heights Realty Company.

It was the contention of the insurance company's attorney that the case should never have gone to the jury, as upon the undisputed facts and law, Rose has failed to make out due performance by him of the policy conditions and failing thus to sustain the burden he was not entitled to have any recovery. For Rose it was maintained that he evidently thought he was the owner, otherwise he would not have paid for a policy in his own name.

PLANS FOR BUILDINGS ARE NOW UNDERWAY

$5,000 Addition to Bethel Chapel Among Improvements Contemplated.

With the return of prosperity in many lines of the country's industrial lines, the effects of the turning of the wheels in the mills and factories are beginning to be felt in the building world. Several plans for buildings in this city are now being prepared and another season will see conditions normal in local construction work.

Amog the plans being prepared at the present time are those for an extensive addition to Bethel chapel, at East Fifth and Washington streets. From present indications the improvements will cost $5,000 or more and it is expected that the work will be started early next spring, if not before that time. The membership of this religious institution has been on the increase for some time past and the Sunday-school has grown to such proportions that for several months it has had to meet in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church, of which it is a branch.

Plans for the erection of a school in the far East End is also being rapidly pushed, although, as far as can be learned at this time, no definite site has been decided upon for this structure. This is another of the prospective buildings for the season of 1916.

The Italian Mission, conducted under the auspices of the First Presbyterian church, which has been meeting and holding services since its organization in a vacant store on East Third street, is also to have a building of its own, and a committee from the First church, headed by Grove P. Hinman, as chairman, is at present looking throughout the East End for a site. Steps for the erection of a suitable edifice will be taken immediately upon the selection of a site.

Prospective buildings, however, are not confined to those of the religious and educational type, but others are being planned for the near future. Among business buildings are those mentioned in these columns last week. Harry W. Marshall is expected to erect a two or three-story building on Watchung avenue, while another elaborate building is being planned for the property immediately in the rear of the Plainfield Trust Company, on West Second street.

GOOD BACKS FOR BAD

Plainfield Residents Are Learning How to Exchange the Old Back For a Stronger One.

Does your back ache, feel weak and painful?

Do you suffer headaches, languor and depression?

Is the urine discolored, passages irregular?

The kidneys may be calling for help.

Weak kidneys cannot do their work.

Give them the help they need

To cure a kidney backache you must cure the kidneys.

Use a tested and proven kidney remedy.

Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test.

Convincing proof of merit in Plainfield endorsement:

Mrs. C. B. Coriell, 60 Manning avenue, Plainfield, says: "I suffered from kidney disorders for years and the principal symptom was a severe backache. Since I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills, I have taken them off and on and they have always acted like magic, giving me prompt relief."

Price 50 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Coriell had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Ad.

The Vitaphone Company, because of the great increase in their business, are planning for an addition to their present buildings, the extension to measure 60 by 170 feet. It is expected that work on this structure will be started shortly.

CONTRACTS FOR NEW SCHOOL AWARDED

Many Plainfielders Submit Bids for Erection of Building at New Providence.

Plainfield contractors were successful in submitting bids for portions of the work on the five-room addition to the school at New Providence, the Board of Education of that place awarding the contracts at a meeting this week. The total cost of the proposed improvements will aggregate $15,541.

Four contractors figured on the general construction work, the award for which was made to the Jersey City Construction Company for $11,331, with an addition of $1,065 for six alternates, which, because of the lowness of the main bid the Board was able to consider, making the total cost of the general construction $12,396.

Only one bid for the plumbing heating and electrical work was received. It was known that other persons wanted to bid on the work but the Board decided to open the proposal because all had had an equal opportunity to get their estimates in George W. Stillwell, of Perth Amboy received this contract for $2,270; with an addition of $390 for the installation of an automatic control.

The contract for the electrical work was given to George W. Ord, of Plainfield, who bid $485. Other bidders on the electrical work were Allen B. Laing Company, Plainfield, $597, and Vreeland & Vought, Summit, $650.

The other bidders on the general construction work and their estimates were: E. M. Burns Company, of Elizabeth, $15,620, with an addition of $1,057 if the alternate specifications were adopted; Ernest T. Hand, of Plainfield, $14,917, with $478 additional for the alternate plans; Charles E. Preston, of White Plains, N. Y., $16,900, with an addition of $393 for the alternate specifications.

Mr. Pierson's estimates some time ago consumed the entire $18,000 appropriation. With the total of the three contracts deducted there remains of the appropriation $2,459 with which to pay the architect's fees and purchase equipment. Nearly $1,000 will be left, the architect estimates, after those items have been provided for.

NEWS OF INTEREST IN THE PLAINFIELD BUILDING WORLD

PRICE PAID FOR VANDERBEEK PROPERTY SETS RECORD FOR LOCAL REALTY VALUE

$45,000 Claim to Be High Water Mark for Land in the Business Section—15,000 Per Cent. Profit Accumulated by holders During Fifty-eight Years—One of the Most Advantageous Points for Commercial Enterprise in Plainfield—Was Purchased by Former Owner for $300.

Careful consideration of the deal concluded the present week whereby the State Trust Company secures the Vanderbeek property at North and Park avenues, for the location of its new home, reveals the fact that the purchase price paid as stated, $45,000, is correct the site will stand the banking institution in $1,000 per front foot. No deal that has been recorded for either business or residential property, including even all the recent transfers on Front street, show such an expensive piece of ground.

The Vanderbeek property as it stands is incumbered by a building which has a value of perhaps $20,000 as it stands, but this is to be torn down. The plot measures forty-five feet on Park avenue and sixty-four feet on North avenue, so all the Trust Company will have for its forty-five thousand dollars when the old structure is razed will be the ground itself, thus giving the $1,000 per foot figure as to the new building is to front on Park avenue. The Plainfield Trust Company's home, the Stirling, the Babcock, the Endress, the Woodhull & Martin and the Y. M. C. A. buildings are all built on sites where buildings were torn down but in no case were any of the demolished structures anywhere near as valuable as the Vanderbeek building, which is doomed to go. In all the other cases mentioned the incumbrances were practically nothing but antiquated frame shacks.

The Vanderbeek sale brings a second interesting fact to light and that is that the 45x64 ft. North and Park avenue plot jumped in valuation from $300 to $45,000 in fifty-eight years, an increase of 15,000 per cent. The late Andrew Vanderbeek, who died on November 11, 1903, paid the $300 in 1858 but did not begin the erection of the present building until 1879. Previous to that time the corner was taken up with Mr. Vanderbeek's monument yard, a small building which housed the printing establishment of Force Brothers and a plumbing shop conducted by William Addis. The Force Brothers, the late William L. and Albert L., were publishers of the Constitutionalist, Plainfield's leading weekly paper and the brothers prevailed upon Mr. Vanderbeek to erect the present building. They wanted a suitable home for their rapidly growing business and when the structure was designed the entire interior was made suitable for a newspaper plant. Temporary quarters were occupied by Force Brothers while the building was being put up and the Constitutionalist was printed until a few years ago. In 1887 Force Brothers began the publication of the Daily Press in conjunction with the weekly and the paper is still issued from the same location, although the paper has been badly handicapped for room since the expansion which began when the present management took hold of the business in 1912. Negotiations have been under way for a new home for the past six months and this will be secured within the next few months.

At the time it was put up, the Vanderbeek building was considered one of the best structures in the city, both as to location and commodiousness When it was built the contract price paid its builders was about $18,000. The masonry was done by Isaac Pangborn and the carpentering by John Chandler, both of whom have since passed away, but who in those days were considered Plainfield's leading contractors. The corner store on the ground floor has always been occupied as a pharmacy, first by H. P. Reynolds and later by his successor, T. S. Armstrong, who is still a tenant. Mr. Vanderbeek occupied the store on Park avenue now occupied by Moraller Brothers jewelry establishment, for many years after the building was first put up, conducting a sporting goods store there. Later he transferred his business to the second floor after he had formed a partnership with Joseph Sattels to deal in pianos and organs. The remainder of the second floor was given over to offices. One of the oldest tenants in this building is Judge William N. Runyon, who has had his offices there since his admission to the bar and where his father was located before him. He is still practicing law in the building as is also Vincent W. Nash, Jr., who has had his offices on the second floor since he first hung out his shingle in January, 1903. The property remained in the hands of the Vanderbeek estate from the time of Mr. Vanderbeek's death until last spring, when it was purchased at a partition sale by Vanderbeek Shotwell and his sister, Miss Stella Shotwell, for $41,600. It was the latter two from whom the State Trust Company secured the site.

IN THE SUBURBS

Dunellen.

The parsonage of the Methodist Episcopal church is being repainted by Contractor J. F. G. Kinney.

The idea of building a house for Boy Scout headquarters is being advocated at present in the borough by prominent Boy Scout leaders.

Improvements in the carpentry line are being made at present at the residence of Henry Ritterbusch. The work is being done by Contractor Lewis Schneider.

Contractors Kirchner and Wormser have the contract for painting the new residence of Contractor Frank O. Broshart on Lincoln avenue, and have the job well along at present.

Contractor Charles Wrage is one local man who is certainly hustling to get his share of the prevailing prosperity of the country, and getting it, too. He is driving the work right along on the houses he has contracted for in Equator Park and has other contracts in view, when those are completed. The genial Charles has certainly made quite a place for himself in local industrial life, and in the building trades world particularly.

The lot adjoining the property of George W. Day on Front street has been sold through the C. E. Tinsman agency to a Plainfield party, who will erect a two-family house.

Lincoln.

Eckert Brothers, general contractors, have been awarded a contract of erecting a storage building for the Middlesex Aniline Chemical Company at Lincoln and will commence work Monday. The dimensions of this building are 50x50 feet. The company is taxed to its utmost capacity in filling orders for aniline oil, which is the base of all dyes. Carl Marx, of Dunellen avenue, is superintendent and head chemist of the plant.

The Nonemaker Fire Proof Floor Engineering Company is making rapid progress with the addition, 50x200 feet, which it is building to the factory of the American Cement Tile Manufacturing Company at Lincoln. This addition when completed will make the factory 600 feet long. The company is very busy in filling a contract for the roofing of the syphon chambers of the Ashokan aqueduct, which is to supply New York city with water. The company is at present employing a force of between fifty and sixty men.

New Market.

Contractor Frank Broshart, of Dunellen, is installing a steam heating plant in the residence of John Manning.

The roof is on at the new Harris-Baker-Silvers factory on the former Blackford farm, near Samptown, a crane is installed and also an engine The remainder of the work on the building is progressing moderately and the reporter heard this week that the concern is fabricating more or less of its own material, which is being used in putting up the building.

Hampton.

It is reported that Edward Stires will sell his farm in the spring, and build a bungalow near his present residence, where he and Mrs. Stires will make their home. On account of his health, Mr. Stires has decided to make the sale. This is a valuable farm and a very desirable location for any one to live.

WON'T PURCHASE LAND.

Garwood, Nov. 20.—A letter read at the meeting of the Borough Council, Tuesday evening, from the National Boiler Company, stated that the vacation of the right of way or borough street alongside of the company would be illegal if the company paid the borough for the land, and therefore, the company could not purchase the property. The company recently offered the borough $400 for the strip of land, which is 20 feet wide and 300 feet deep. The ordinance for the vacating of the street was laid over.

REMINISCENCES IN BUSINESS DEAL

Sale of Boice-Runyon Property Recalls History of the Concern.

ESTABLISHED IN 1837

Now Passes From Control of the Boice Family for the First Time—Former Yards South of Tracks Once Destroyed by Fire.

Following closely upon the announcement that the State Trust Company had purchased the Vanderbeek property at North and Park avenues, the local business and realty field received another surprise this week when it was made public that Charles D. Rice and Edward F. Feickert had purchased the old established Boice-Runyon Company's entire holdings, the latter concern being the largest dealers in the city of lumber, coal and building supplies. It was one of the biggest deals in recent years and marked the passing of the business from a family in which it has been seventy-eight years. One of the new owners, Charles D. Rice, who has been acting as manager of the concern for the past four years, and with the association of Mr. Feickert, can be counted upon to give Plainfield contractors better service than ever before.

As a result of the Boice-Runyon sale, many interesting reminiscences of its business and its founders have been told by old residents of the city. The late David J. Boice and David Thickstun established what is now the present big yards on Park avenue in 1837. The location then, however, was on the south side of the Central Railroad tracks, running from the Park avenue bridge to the Praed building and back as far as Arlington avenue. The yards there were destroyed by fire in 1851, and shortly afterward the firm purchased the present yards from A. B. Cook & Brother. The latter concern had had a disastrous fire 6 years previous and resumed business in the big sheds north of the tracks which houses the Boice-Runyon's stock of today.

After the original beginning in 1837, Mr. Boice and Mr. Thickstun continued until 1850, when the former became the sole owner. It was not until many years later that the late John D. Runyon, a son-in-law of Mr. Boice, was admitted to partnership and the firm name was changed. Upon the death of David J. Boice, the founder, in 1885, and his partner about ten years later, the business was continued successfully by the estate. On December 15, 1909, it was incorporated as the Boice-Runyon Company, with Mrs. Sarah R. Runyon and Miss Anna E. Boice, daughters of David J. Boice, practically sole owners. Upon the death of Mrs. Runyon, Miss Boice inherited the property. Miss Boice has proved a most excellent business woman, and the affairs of the corporation have prospered under her jurisdiction. Owing to her advance in years, Miss Boice recently decided to be relieved of all business cares and decided to sell to the new owners. Mr. Rice, who will continue as manager, is a native of New York, was for seventeen years connected with the Gorham Manufacturing Company. He has thoroughly identified himself with the business life of this city, in the future progress of which he has the greatest confidence. This latter statement also applies to Mr. Feickert, recognized by the local public as the possessor of keen judgment in business and financial matters as evidenced in the growth and development of the State Trust Company.

The yards are by far the most extensive in this section, and are improved by a large and modern brick office building facing on Park avenue, extensive lumber sheds, one of them 500 feet in length, a three-decker, with a capacity of 2,500,000 feet, and modern coal chutes with bins holding 2,000 tons. Coal is loaded directly into the patent dumping cart, and is automatically sifted as it comes down the chutes to the carts.

EXTENSIVE ALTERATIONS.

Contractor George Forgerson began work yesterday altering the North avenue front of what has been known as the City Market building recently leased by the Keller Cleaning and Dyeing Company. The job will be an extensive one and will be a fine new store. The rear of the property, running through to East Second street has recently been undergoing extensive alterations to accommodate the working plant of the Keller concern.

PLAN ERECTION OF TEN NEW DWELLINGS

Jacob Sachar Contemplates Extensive Improvements in West End.

Ten dwellings, a portion of which will be of the double-decker type, are now being estimated upon by local contractors. The structures are to be erected on Sachar place by Jacob Sachar.

The coming to this city of a large number of skilled mechanics has created a scarcity of moderate priced dwellings, and Mr. Sachar, realizing this condition as created by abnormal industrial conditions in local manufacturing plants, has decided to push this work, commencing work shortly, providing the estimates of the cost of the work are within reach.

Sachar place is a comparatively new thoroughfare on a tract of land known as the old Harburger estate. Mr. Sachar, the present owner, purchased the land about two or three years ago, and immediately set about to develop the land for a residential section. The new street was cut through and a number of dwellings, both of the single family and double-decker types were erected at that time.

The proposed dwellings will cost in the vicinity of from $3,500 to $4,000 each, meaning the expenditure of at least $37,000. Should the building be started within the course of the next two or three weeks, it will mean the keeping of a large number of building craftsmen busy throughout the remainder of the winter.

GEORGE W. ORD GETS CONTRACT AT ROSELLE

Plainfielder's Bid for New High School is Accepted by Education Board.

George W. Ord, local electrical contractor, has secured the contract for that work on the proposed new high school at Roselle. Contracts for work on the school building were awarded Tuesday night by the Board of Education. The bid of L. J. Rice on the building named the lowest sum, but it was rejected for cause and the contract awarded to Charles Flocken, the next lowest bidder.

The bid of Charles Flocken, with all alternate proposition deduced amounting to $46,584, was accepted and the contract awarded to him.

The contract for the heating and ventilating was awarded to John H. Cooney at $8,887, with the alternate of $760 being deducted, making the bid $8,127.

Fred A. Vanderweg was awarded the plumbing and gas fitting contract at $2,316.

Contract for the electrical work was given to George W. Ord, at $2,500, less alternates of $750, making the net price $1,750.

ALTERING MELLICK BUNGALOW.

Extensive alterations are being made at the present time to the bungalow of George P. Mellick on lower Woodland avenue, just south of the Plainfield Country Club grounds. An elaborate addition is to be erected on to the structures, the extension measuring 54x25 feet. This will include on old English living room with timbered interior and a field stone floor. Sleeping rooms are to be located in another extension on the other side of the building, the dimensions of which are 20x30 feet. William H. Pangborn's Sons Company are the mason contractors, Michael Rimmer the carpenter contractor, and the A. M. Griffen Company has the contract for the plumbing work.

COUNTY CONTRACTS.

Nine construction contracts were filed during the week ending last Saturday at the offices of County Clerk James C. Calvert. The papers call for the expenditure of $115,771. The largest contract is for the erection of a school at Elizabeth which is to cost $84,887. The contracts as filed from this end of the county are as noted below: George H. Burgess with Van Zandt and Doeringer, plumbing work new building, Central avenue, Plainfield, $1,649.

STATE PERMITS.

The valuation of the plans approved by the State Board of Tenement House Supervision last week aggregates $200,400. The plans are divided among the various cities throughout the State as follows: Irvington, $13,000; Newark, $32,300; Jersey City, $63,700; Hilton, $6,000; Kearny, $7,000; Bayonne, $200; Garfield, $6,000; Perth Amboy, $200; Paterson, $3,000; Harrison, $6,000; West New York, $63,000.

CEMENT PRICE TAKES BIG JUMP

Increase Calls for 10 Cent Boost From $1.57 to $1.67 Per Barrel.

ALLOW 5 P. C. REBATE

Leading Manufacturers Expect Price to go to $2.00 by February 1—Other Building Materials Also Show An Advance.

New York, No. 20.—Hardly had the Eastern building material market settled down to a workable adjustment to the recent advances in prices, when Portland cement took another jump upward at the opening of the week. This increase called for a 10-cent boost, bringing the price from $1.57 a barrel to dealers, to $1.67, alongside of dock, New York, but a five-cent rebate is to be allowed for bills paid within ten days of invoice. Practically all of the most important agents have acceded to this advance and rebate.

Accompanying the announcement of the advance came the prophesy from an important manufacturer to the effect that he would not be surprised to find the price of Portland cement $2 a barrel here in this market by February 1, making the price at mill $1.48. It was explained that if the railroads continue to buy as they have been, and as increasing business seems to warrant, the possible mill supply, in view of the shortage of labor, will make much higher prices than at present prevail necessary.

At a meeting held in the Building Trades Employers' Association of the Atlantic Coast Tile Dealers and Contractors' Association, the matter of quoting high enough on sanitary tile and decorative faience work, to insure proper work and an adequate profit were discussed. President Robert Beck, of the Interstate Mantel and Tile Dealers' Association came in from Chicago to discuss this matter, and in the forthcoming convention at Buffalo this question of living up to the new and possibly higher price levels will be taken up as well as the matter of contractors overlapping districts. Tile interests look for a fourteen-cent level before the first of March.

All hardware equipment and some of the leading electrical supply departments are stiffening on list quotations In the electrical department there is a scarcity of copper and porcelain insulating material for high tension service is very hard to get now that some of the chemicals formerly used in vitrification are almost exhausted and an adequate quantity is not being made so far in this country to supply the demand Hardware reflects the higher price of fine steel and iron in tools and butts, hinges, hangars, stay bolts and ornamental iron work.

In the latter department wrought iron is especially stiff, and architects taking bids on this class of work may expect quotations to show the higher cost of raw material.

Lumber prices are holding remarkably firm considering the shortage of mill supplies and delays in getting material into wholesalers hands in this district. Between October and November lists there are only a few changes in quotations, one being in slab lath and another in yellow pine. There is a stiffness that has not actually developed into an advance noted in the railroad tie market. The 77-cent price level still rules there but it is stiff even on a large quantities. The biggest gain in the month is in red gum, although there is a gain of a dollar in oak flooring. Hardwoods are firmly held, but the market is weak.

Linseed oil has advanced another cent, the price now being 64 and 67, the inside quotation being for cargo lots. Structural steel is also higher, current quotations running from 1.679 to 1.819 for beams and channels at tidewater.

Revised reports concerning the national building movement for October indicate that building for the ten months just closed leaves a deficit of 1.9 per cent. behind the total for the same number of months last year, which can easily be eclipsed by November's plan filings alone, the total for this month, as shown by reports covering the first fifteen days indicating a total filing of plans whose total estimated value will be in excess of $68,000,000, the total for October. If the total barely reaches $64,000,000, which was the total for August, through a general slump owing to a war scare or other cause in the latter part of the month, the total for 1914 will have been turned into a gain.

The percentage of construction now going ahead or being figured in all the States east of the Rockies, where gains are being shown in monthly plan filings, is 87.2, as compared with 61 per cent. in the same period in 1914, outside of New York. Including this city in the computation, there is 70.1 going ahead or being figured on as against 48.7 per cent. in the same period a year ago.

Frank Cullen, the West End grocer, has plans out for the erection of a "double-decker" type of house on the lot adjoining his store on South Second street. CHANGING LIGHTING SYSTEM.

Carl Silbert, the West Front street jeweler, is having the gas lighting system in his store removed and the new style indirect electric lights installed. The change will be a very noticeable and beneficial one. Charles L. Ryder, Jr., is doing the work.

NEW CITY HALL IS BEING AGITATED

Campaign of Education Started by Those Who See Need of Adequate Quarters.

Agitation for a City Hall for Plainfield is not waiting for the annual message of Mayor Leighton Calkins to be presented to the Common Council next January, but those who believe that a step should be taken in this direction are starting a little campaign of education all of their own.

It has come to light during the course of the past few weeks, that the present rentals paid by the city would pay the interest on $70,000 of 5 per cent. bonds, and advocates of the City Hall plan point to this fact, together with the suggestion that a proper site and structure for this purpose would not go far beyond the $100,000 mark, as one reason why the Common Council should soon take definite steps in securing a site and prepare plans for such a building.

There is no doubt as to the need of a City Hall. The present city offices are rapidly outgrowing the city's needs, and the vaults used for the keeping of the records of the municipality are already overcrowded. This is especially true of the tax office, and Collector Townsend is at present one of the most urgent of the advocates of a new City Hall.

The fact that desirable sites for such a building are fast being pressed into service for new buildings is the one big argument advanced for immediate action on the part of the City Council. Should steps be taken at once in this direction it is highly probable that the city would have to go south of the Central Railroad for a site.

Another point to be taken into consideration is that land can be secured at a much lower price at the present time than it could be had two or three years from now. Land values are as low now as they will be for many years, and many of Plainfield's foremost citizens, including Mayor Calkins, are in favor of erecting a city building worthy of the name.

This project was included in the recommendations of Mayor Calkins in his message to the Common Council last January. Practically every recommendation of the Mayor was adopted and put into effect by the Council save this. The Public Affairs Committee, headed by Councilman Richard A. Claybrook, thought it advisable to act at that time.

FIRE PREVENTION.

"The individual is not apt to take fire prevention to heart if fire hasn't touched anything of his," says the Safety First Federation of America, "but he should. In 1914 in the United States and Canada alone $235,591,350, (nearly a quarter of a billion dollars) worth of property was destroyed by fire. That means $6 a year loss each, if divided between every man, woman and child in the two countries.

"The biggest part of the gigantic loss could have been prevented if the individual had been cautious."

Rules framed by the Federation for such caution are:

1. Don't permit children to play with matches.
2. Don't throw away lighted matches, cigars or cigarettes.
3. Don't use naphtha or benzine in the home. (A pint makes 200 feet of explosive vapor.)
4. Don't block the fire-escapes; you may need them yourself, quick.
5. Don't put ashes in wooden boxes or barrels.
6. Don't permit accumulations of rubbish.
7. Don't have lace curtains or draperies near open lights.
8. Don't fill kerosene lamps or lanterns after dark.
9. Don't permit matches to be kept except in a closed metal box.
10. Don't forget to call for the fire department first thing; and to have some extinguishing apparatus.

It might well be added that every one should know the location of the nearest fire alarm box and the telephone number of the nearest firehouse.

PASTOR BREAKS GROUND.

Roselle, Nov. 20.—The Rev. James A. Lundy, pastor of St. Joseph's R. C. church, turned the first spadeful of earth Wednesday morning, when ground was broken for the new $30,000 parochial school, to be erected on the lot adjoining the rectory on Third avenue, east. There were no special exercises in connection with the breaking of the ground.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, NOVEMBER 20, 1915.

On Saturdays the editorial columns of the Daily Press are conducted by citizens who are free to express their own views. The contributing editor for today is Charles L. Lewis, supervisor of music in the Plainfield Public Schools.

MUSIC IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Music has such an assured place in our public school system now that its right and privilege there is no longer open to question, and yet its youth has been of such promise that wider fields of endeavor are opening to it with every year. The creation of a musical atmosphere in America and in the American home and the development of a national type of music, is its amplest justification.

Many high schools have a full four years' course in music and it will not be long before this is general throughout the country. The standards are being raised and a more uniform presentation of the work means much for general efficiency. Voice training, harmony and musical appreciation and the study of piano and orchestral instruments is sure to be a part of the curriculum.

The relation of the school to the music teacher and the credit for work done out side of school, are matters claiming the attention of those who look forward. There is a very general demand that our Normal Schools shall give their pupils musical training up to the highest educational standards.

Dr. Winship says: "Vocal music is as much for all children as is arithmetic, and it is as useful for all. It is well to teach boys to fashion iron and carve wood, and the girls to sew and cook, but it is as well to teach the sons and daughters of the rich and poor alike, that neither wealth nor luxury can affect the joy that comes from a beautiful voice making melody."

The last ten years has seen a greater improvement in the methods of teaching and shows greater progress in extending the influence of music than the preceeding seventy-six years since music was introduced into the public schools.

It took years for the school authorities of Boston to decide the matter of "allowing" music to be taught in the public schools and with some misgivings they permitted Dr. Lowell Mason to undertake the work which he did at first without pay, but with such success that he was made superintendent of music. Truly "Boston is its own reward."

The very intimate relations existing between the music in the school and the music in the home and in the church and in the community has never been more kindly realized. The best songs and the best hymns have been a source of delight and general culture to the parents as well as to the children themselves.

Schubert's "Erl King," generally recognized as the greatest song ever written, I gave to the fourth and fifth grades and it was remarkable how interested they were in it and with what passion and intensity they sang it. Many children have to depend almost entirely upon the school for the music they love and can we do better than to put within their reach this means of happiness and culture that shall enrich their lives as almost no other influence could?

It is the aim of the wisest exponents of music in the schools to have the child leave, with a deeper love for music, and a finer appreciation of it as "the fine art of the feelings, audible beauty," a broader feeling of its relation to all that is best within him and a stronger realization of the need of the "dry husks of technicality" as a means to the end of his keenest enjoyment and widest knowledge.

There is a class of children who feel music as Helen Keller feels the applause of an audience "with her feet." This strong and not unmusical sense of rhythm is capable of the best training, for the average scholar finds greater difficulty with time than with tune. We have had school marches played by scholars who, without any training on the piano and knowing little of notes and various keys, yet playing with splendid rhythmic sweet to the general inspiration of the children.

The heritage of joy which is our common possession knows only its fullest expressions through music, and its ministry has made the blind to see and the deaf to hear. Some provision must be made for the eight hours of the day which the adult devotes to diversion, recreation and the "joy of living." The folk songs of the nations are the highest expressions of the life and aspirations of the masses. The gift of song made slavery endurable and the most profound impression I ever received was from the singing of one hundred operatives in a tobacco factory in Virginia, while at their work.

General Portor said of General Grant that he knew two tunes; one was Yankee Doodle and the other wasn't, and it has to be admitted that there are pupils who are, in a measure, tone deaf as it is called and yet I do not recall a hopeless case. The monotone is a figure looming largest in the lowest grade, but I recall one instance where I was greatly relieved when an enthusiastic singer of one tone finished high school. School training must have borne fruit, however, as this tone found its way into the college glee club, to which its possessor applied, and we may hope that eventually it was dissolved into harmonious relations with itself.

It is strange that the late Phillips Brooks who cared so little for music, being indifferent to it in all its forms, should have said: "A school song in the heart of a child will do as much for his character as a fact in his memory or a principle of his intellect."

The meal's not right without it.
The celery and apple trade
Improves—ay, none may doubt it.

The rustics plan a rabbit hunt
'Mid alder brush and birch,
While those who do the pious stunt
Fix up and go to church.

But all unite at eating time
Because perforce they must.
All o'er that bill of fare they climb
And—well, you'd think they'd bust!

Some folks remember why they stuff
And carry on that way.
The others simply know it's tough
To have such heads next day.

Maybe It's No Mere Theory

The workers in the interests of employed girls in Chicago found out that 300 of them wiped on one towel. Whereupon they formed the theory that maybe that was what was wiping out the health of the young ladies.

Wet And Dry

Wet and dry is what people vote on, at intervals, in some states.

One of the states in which this question is never agitated is the state of intoxication.

The question as to whether people with an inherited or acquired alcoholic thirst shall spend their money for something beneficial or detrimental oughtn't to be a hard one to answer.

But people who believe in temperate living just as earnestly as anybody does differ from other people as to the most practical plan for reducing the batting average of the boozing villagers.

We are not an extremist on any question.

We do not believe the last bit of important evidence is ever in, in any case affecting the human race.

When the last human bobs up, we can be reasonably sure that the solution of a lot of problems is at last at hand.

But we'll probably lose interest in the matter about that same day.

When a manufacturer has a rush order and his best workman or his crack foreman yields at that very psychological moment to a desire for the society of J. B., Esq., that manufacturer can hardly wait till election day to vote dry.

It has hit his weasel-skin.

When a mother who had been liberal on the question of personal liberty sees her own boy soused, she quits being liberal and looks for a double-bitted axe.

When a father who had always said it was people's own business whether they drank or not, is called to the 'phone to be told that his little child has been killed by a neighbor who had taken two drinks and gone out speeding with his automobile, there is another change of heart.

The trouble with the wet side of the question is that it is piling up no arguments strong enough to offset this cumulative prejudice.

So anyone can see how it is going to be in the long run.

Politicians who are fond of their seat in the bandwagon are not saying anything publicly against the dry end of the game.

This is significant.

Understand we are not arguing about anything.

We're just stating placidly the result of our easy observations.

Have you seen it the same way, Bud?

Health Talks

How To Judge A Doctor

BECAUSE he drives your style of car or attends your church, or joins your order or trims his whiskers in a manner pleasing to your taste, is a mighty poor reason for employing a physician. Yet it is a potent factor in his selection in many instances.

A good doctor is one who never gets through learning. He reads; he studies; he is active in medical society sessions; books are much in evidence and medical journals find a place in his office.

Not sumptuousness but neatness characterizes the furnishing of his place of business. Not foppery but conservatism marks his dress. He is clean, even if he is poor. For be it known that the best doctors are not always the biggest money-makers. Still, the good physician is worthy of his hire; if he fails to collect his fee in a businesslike way he is bound to get behind the times presently, for want of the wherewithal to buy books, medical journals and post-graduate courses.

But when you visit the doctor all of a sudden for the first time you know nothing of these details. You have to observe him in action. There are certain marks by which you may determine his relative ability.

A good doctor isn't afraid to examine you—insists upon examining you, no matter what you think is the trouble or what some one else has told you. Not only that, but he examines you as though he suspected you were trying to conceal something from him—which you often are, though all unconsciously. And he is not content to pretend—he makes you undress so he can determine what is the matter. No ear-on-waistcoat chicanery for him!

Having completed his examination he prescribes what he thinks will be good for you. If it is medicine, he prescribes it himself, especially to fit your needs. No ready-made cure-all will quite satisfy him. He does not practice according to the directions of the proprietary medicine maker. He knows enough to formulate his own prescriptions for each individual patient. His armamentarium is something wider than an assortment of pink, purple and yellow shot-gun tablets.

He may hold out hopes and assurances, but he never guarantees a cure.

His professional colleagues respect him.

His patients are not so very numerous, but they stick.

Vest Pocket Essays

BY GEORGE FITCH

BRAGGING

BRAGGING is the art of putting your best foot into the other fellow's ear at every opportunity. The world is full of braggers. They are our most ambitious class. A bragger never loafs on his job. While other men are resting at night, he will leave home and tramp two miles to find some other man who will stand quietly while the bragger tells him, with one finger hooked into his coat button, how a great many people had said to him that it was an awful thing to elect Wilson president, while really big men like yours truly, with the prehensile finger, are allowed to languish unpestered by fame.

The bragger can be readily distinguished by his long, crooked forefinger. It is his weapon. He hunts the unwary citizen and hooks onto him as Paul Jones hooked onto the British ships. When this is done, he begins to brag, and the only ways of escape are to cut off the finger or give up the coat.

Braggers brag about everything in the world, just as kickers are never at a loss for a subject. If a bragger is rich he brags about it. If he isn't, he brags about how soon he is going to be, or how he once was, or because he doesn't join in the silly race for the dollar. Some braggers insist on hanging their own laurel wreaths on themselves, while others are more refined about it and merely repeat to you what some friend has said about them. Some men are so expert that they can brag half a day about their modesty, and get away with it in safety.

Braggers have done wonderful deeds ever since Baron Munchausen, the dean of the profession, raised it to an art. Nations have been saved offhand in grocery stores, and bygone wars have been made ten times more horrible by the deeds of gallant braggers who have thoughtfully preserved themselves in time of strife behind a gum tree in order to annihilate the foe later on in a more healthy atmosphere.

The bragger can always find someone to believe him

The bragger is a happy man because he can always find someone to believe him. He lives in an atmosphere of glory and admiration, and as he supplies most of it himself, he never runs short. We need never worry about trying to praise a bragger, because whatever we say is a pale nothing to what he thinks.

Braggers make themselves very useful to quiet, busy men by talking instead of competing with them, and if they can be trained to go away from an office whenever a heavy paper weight is thrown at them, they need never be a nuisance, provided you see them first.

Cartoons Of The Day

"Gimme a paper, boy"

—Tuthill in St. Louis Star

In this cartoon, the artist has graphically illustrated the effects of the censorship in England, about which the following was written in a well-known London magazine:

"There are many cases in which the facts are entirely known to our enemies, and also to the world at large—facts that are printed in all newspapers—barring our own—throughout the world, including those of our Overseas Dominions; and yet these facts are not revealed to the newspaper-reading public of Great Britain."

People's Legal Friend

Wife Is Liable

Q. My wife recently bought some personal property and it was understood at the time that she was to pay for it. She has property and money in her own right. The person selling her the goods understood this and he told me at the time that he would charge the bill to her account and not hold me liable for it. He now wants to make me pay for the goods. Can he do so? A. No.

Marrying The Family

Q. Can a wife, by any words or acts on her part, or by any writing signed by her, impose an obligation upon her husband to support her relatives?

A. No. The husband's duty to provide the necessaries of life does not extend farther than the immediate family—the wife and the children. She cannot, by her own act alone, compel him to provide support for anyone else.

Grandchildren And The Children

Q. The will of a man whose death has just occurred leaves property of various descriptions to the "children." It is the belief of persons who knew this man during his lifetime that he intended to give some of his property to his grandchildren. Could the word "children" be extended so as to include grandchildren?

A. As a general rule, the word "children," when used in a will, is not to be given an enlarged meaning. This rule is subject to this exception: If it can be shown that the intention of the testator—the person making the will—was to include grandchildren within this description, such intention being manifested from an examination of the entire instrument, the will is to be given this effect, for the intention, if it can be ascertained, is always of controlling importance.

Agreement For Sunday Work

Q. Two persons made an agreement by which one was to perform work, of a specified character, on Sunday, and was to be paid by the other. Work of this kind seems to be prohibited by a state law in this state. Would the agreement be valid? A. No.

An Illegal Note

Q. Please tell me what will be the effect where a promissory note is based on an illegal agreement.

A. As between the original parties—the maker and the payee—it will be void. If the note has been indorsed and has been acquired by an innocent purchaser for value, before maturity, the purchaser will be protected.

Duplicate Leases

Q. When a lease is signed, isn't each party entitled to have a copy of it?

A. Leases usually contain covenants or agreements imposing certain duties and obligations upon both parties and the ordinary method of executing such leases is to have them drawn up and signed in duplicate.

The Bargainer's Privilege

Q. Where one person makes an offer to another, as preliminary to a contract between them, does he have the right to specify the place where the agreement is to be performed and the time limit within which it is to be performed? A. Yes.

Mr. Branson will be glad to answer all questions. If your question is of general interest it will be answered through these columns; if not, it will be answered personally if stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed. Address all letters to E. R. Branson, care of this newspaper.

Encouragement

If you would step into some great seat of Power and Plenty, some day, just get into the Habit of Patting people on the back—with a real Pat of Encouragement.

Give away your own Success.

There is nothing in all the world so stimulating as to feel the thrill of Hope coloring the cheek of some fellow to whom you have just given the Grip of Grit.

Give away your own Success.

Even a Race Horse goes better after a pat on the Nose. The Bootblack gives you a better polish if you remember to Smile while he Shines. Half the wrecks of life are strewn along the Gutter of Failure for no other reason than this—starved for want of Encouragement.

Give away your own Success.

There are no "Favored of Destiny" successes. The only Winners are the Favored of Encouragement. The Smile, the hearty Hand Clasp, the sterling Cheer, the cup of Crystal Water—these are the things that make Men, mould Commerce and start to humming Cities and Nations. If you like to whistle, teach the art to somebody else who doesn't know how.

Give away your own Success.

And, by the way, it is the greatest Fun in all the world! The next fellow to you right now, whoever you are and wherever you are, is just as Human as you are. Turn your pockets of Encouragement inside out. Keep them empty by giving their contents away—for they will always be full. And, if these little talks help YOU from day to day, get the knowledge to the fellow who writes them. I will Encourage him.

Give away your own Success.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How One of Twins Founded Ancient Rome.

"TELL us another Italian story, daddy!" cried Jack.

"I will tell you the fate of the twins that Father Tiber carried along down to the foot of the beautiful hill where a mother wolf took care of them," said daddy.

"Goody, goody!" cried both children.

"Often when the king's shepherd went off in the sunny fields to tend sheep the boys went along to help him. They had just as good a time as all children have playing outdoors, and they strayed about, having fun exploring and learning. Then one day they met some herdsmen that were employed by Numitor, who was their grandfather.

"Numitor had a small farm near the king's palace, and there was always jealousy between their shepherds. Well, one twin, Remus, picked a quarrel with Numitor's herdsman, who licked him, took him prisoner and carried him off to Numitor."

"Did his grandfather know him?" asked Evelyn.

"No, for Numitor always thought that the twins had been drowned. But the next day Romulus and his shepherd foster father appeared before Numitor to claim Remus. As the old shepherd told the story of the boys, begging the return of Remus, Numitor gradually recognized the lads as the children of his daughter, Sylvia. He was delighted to find such handsome boys were his grandchildren and begged them to live with him and help him pay back all the wrongs they had suffered by their uncle, Amulius.

"But Romulus had become very strongly attached to his old home on the banks of the Tiber and said he wanted to found a city there. So he left his grandfather and went back with his foster father, the shepherd.

"The idea of a city beside the river he loved so well grew and grew in his mind. One day he yoked a young white heifer and a beautiful heifer to a plowshare and marked out the boundary of a city. This was the very ancient way of laying out city walls. Then he spent days and days building a high wall around his boundary. Meanwhile his twin, Remus, was getting rather jealous of his brother's cleverness, and to show how no account the wall was he scornfully jumped right over it. This made Romulus very angry to have his wall made fun of, and in a dreadful fit of anger he slew his brother.

"So this left Romulus alone to repent his quick temper a lifetime. And his city grew and grew till it became Rome. The beautiful hill at the foot of which was the wolf's den is the Palatine, one of the seven wonderful old hills that Rome is built on," finished daddy.

Married Life on $80 a Month

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

In Which the Matter of Selecting a Life Partner Is Discussed.

"Marriage is the sportiest of all human propositions," announced John Sutner with conviction.

"How is this?" asked Julia Osgood, looking up with a smile.

"Because there are a hundred chances of failure to one of success," replied John.

"I believe you, and it is a pity young people can not be made to see light and cease thinking they are to live together in a garden of roses."

"My, one would almost think you had had experience," chaffed the young man in his turn.

"Experience is a valuable teacher, but not the only one. I have had my eyes open for a number of years, and that being the case I have soaked in quite a little knowledge." Julia gave her head a decided toss.

"So that is the reason you are working at a desk instead of——"

"Over a washboard," interrupted Julia. "No, it is not. If the right man ever comes along I'll leave this old desk soon enough. Every woman would, but it must be the right man."

"I suppose he must have an accumulation of all the virtues, and have wealth and beauty in addition," mocked Sutner.

"Come now, I'm no fool. What I mean is, I propose to use as much common sense and judgment in picking out a husband as I would a hair ribbon." John laughed.

"It is no laughing matter; it's the unvarnished truth," continued the girl. "Girls who are level headed over everything else act perfectly witless over that subject."

"Oh, love will go where it is sent," answered the young man for want of a better answer.

"Bah! It's just such rot as that that is responsible for half the shipwrecks in life. Girls are taught by such rubbish that they must not use their heads in such a matter; that marriage is a thing for the heart to decide. They take it to mean that the less brains brought to bear on the subject the better." Julia's lips were curled in scorn.

"Weren't you the girl who was making a plea for love in marriage the other day?" asked John, looking up from the page he was ruling.

"And why not, pray? Do you mean to infer that love and brains are an ill-assorted couple? The sooner people can get that notion out of their heads the better. When they realize that the greatest amount of sound sense and cool judgment are needed to decide the greatest of all questions that affect happiness there will be less heartbreak and divorce."

"Do you mean that a girl should be calculating?" queried the young man.

"Most assuredly not; neither do I think that any great thing in life should be left entirely to the emotions to decide. It is like 'getting religion' in a white heat of revival instead of calmly thinking the matter over in serious thought."

"Wouldn't your prescription do away with the majority of marriages?" asked John thoughtfully.

"About the proportion that get divorces now. The proportion that refuse to look at facts before marriage, often put on glasses to find flaws afterward."

"I believe that, all right," he replied.

"It is easy enough to understand, too. This 'happy ever after' business does not prepare one to be tolerant of imperfections, and the perfect people have all died out." Julia folded the last of her letters and started for the office.

Thanksgiving Unto Christmas Calls--

"Shake Hands Across this Keen, Cold Weather"

To College Girls in New York for the Holidays

Shopping is great fun, but it takes time, and the Thanksgiving holidays are none too long. So little Gray Salons for Young Women wish to say that they have gathered a large and varied collection of the kinds of clothes that school and college girls need.

Inexpensive dancing frocks, one-piece serge dresses to wear to classes; silk afternoon dresses which one wears to Sunday dinner; and the light-colored silk dresses, neither for afternoon or evening, but which are every school girl's wardrobe.

Rough and ready suits, finer suits for church and perhaps a call on the President's wife; right coats for the day, and fine wraps for evening.

All these we have assembled for your choosing, helped in our selection by girls not so long out of school themselves. Many of these attractive clothes are reduced now, and there are some we'd have you note particularly.

Evening wraps, some with fur collars, satin lined, $25. Other wraps, $30 to $58.50.

Dancing frocks, filmy graceful things, newly marked, $25. Other frocks, $13.50 to $60.

6,000 Pieces Cut Table Glass—$1.50 and $3, for $3 to $6 Grades

Clean lead-blown glass, cut with a simple daisy pattern to relieve its plainness. Best-looking cut glass we can recall offering at such prices.

Goblets, standard $6 grade for $3 dozen.
Tumblers, standard $5 grade, for $3 dozen.
Tall ice cream glasses, standard $5 grade, for $3 dozen.
Footed sherbet glasses, standard $5 grade, for $3 dozen.
Water jugs, standard $5 grade, for $1.50.

How can we make these little prices? Last summer a manufacturer offered, if we would take a certain large quantity of each of these items, to make them up at our own price. Orders were few and he was anxious to keep his organization intact.

Result has been that while the maker actually lost money on the glass, yet he was satisfied because he kept his people at work.

Live News From All Branches of Winter Sports

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Silent Jack Caulfield came out of his shell long enough last night to make a prediction on today's game. He surprised all his friends by opening up during a conversation at the "Greasy Vest," and promised one of the best exhibitions of the season. Holy Cross is to go into the contest with a badly crippled team, two of its stars being out and two more laid up with game legs. Wilson and Caulfield may be able to get in for a short time but Smith and Manning are barred by hospital rules and regulations. The Olympics are a fast and heavy bunch and they come to Plainfield chesty over a record that must mean something. If they are defeated local boys will have cause for elation.

Bat Nelson is having his face treated by a beauty specialist in the hope of getting back his youthful good looks. It will cost him about as much to get his battle-scarred mug back into human form as he got for letting others beat it up.

Ad Wolgast came back the other night and fought a good fight, according to a news report. But the fact that Wolgast came back isn't as interesting as that he fought a good fight.

If LaGore is reinstated by Yale officials before the end of the season he will be elected captain of the team for 1916, which is enough to show eligibility commissions what students think of them and their work.

Jess Willard says that $29,500 will not tempt him to enter the ring—that he must be guaranteed $30,000 or he will not fight. He thinks an awful lot of that championship title, or mightily little of his own ability.

President Gilmore of the Feds denies that he wants peace, but so does the Kaiser.

Colleges refuse to permit their football players to mix with rough-neck professional ball players in the summer time, but at that they haven't got anything on baseball managers. Where is there a leader in the big league who will permit his men to play football in the winter time?

STARRY ONCE MORE MAKES A "HIT" HERE

Roselle Coach Adds to His Popularity in Girls' Game at North Plainfield.

Fostering the same tactics that caused him to be chased from the floor when the Roselle Park High School boys' basketball team played Plainfield High School at the latter place last fall, Coach Starry made things decidedly unpleasant for the Roselle and North Plainfield feminine quintets in the Saengerbund Hall match yesterday afternoon, putting a climax on his work by leading the visiting players from the floor under the pretense of a protest. With the score standing 10 to 1 in the Roselle girls favor, Coach Starry summoned his performers to the dressing room thereby handing a 2 to 0 forfeit to the borughites.

During the first period Starry swayed the issue as he saw fit from the position of referee but when another referee was invested with the leading official's duty in the second half he was for the time being relegated to a position in the background. This lasted but a short time, however when he attempted to combine refereeing with umpiring and go far beyond the authority given him by the code of rules. Disputes soon began to cloud the air and despite the fact that Starry claims to be a teacher in the Roselle High School he showed little diplomacy in settling these arguments. Instead, his inclination to be pig-headed caused dissatisfaction to prevail and after he had gotten himself into so much hot water that an exit could not be found he floundered ungracefully into a forfeit.

Roselle could not set forth any well defined grievance and the visitors' streak of poor sportsmanship was not entirely unexpected inasmuch as the North Plainfielders were subjected to similar treatment when they visited the Roselle court last year. Even the most unbiased spectators in the crowd were profound in their denunciation of the Roselle coach's tactics and it is probable that yesterday's affair will result in a discontinuance of athletic relations between the two schools.

The score at the end of the first half was as follows:

North Plainness High School.

RAHWAY FIELD IS FLOODED--NO GAME

Dam Breaks and Football Schedule is Broken Into.

Plainfield High School will have to wait until Thanksgiving or possibly the Saturday afterward, for its chance to wrest the county football championship away from the Rahway High School. Yesterday's rain caused a dam in Rahway to break, according to a telephone message from the red and black manager, and as a result their field is undunated, making this afternoon's game impossible. It will mean a three weeks' layoff for the Rahway aggregation and may do them more harm than good, while the two weeks' rest for the locals will give Pennock, Miller and several others, who came out of the Phillipsburg game pretty well bunged up, a chance to get in better shape.

If the Rahway game is played on Thanksgiving it will mean that the annual game with the alumni will have to be cancelled and an attempt to do that may cause some few remarks from the "old timers."

NEW Y. M. C. A. GAMES.

Manager Benjamin Berse announces that he has secured two more games for the local players the dates of which are Trenton Y. M. C. A. at Plainfield, January 22, and Plainfield Y. M. C. A. at Trenton February 19. These two aggregations have engaged in contests before and each time they get together a spicy basketball exhibition is to be seen.

Classy bowling was done by the Newark pin knights in an Elks' League match on their own alleys last night, in which they took three games in a row from the Rutherford quintet. The triple victory allowed the Newarks to advance to fifth place in the standing. The Green street performers had three totals well over the 900 mark, the tallies being 925, 969 and 965. The visitors started poorly, with 792, but they came back strong with marks of 902 and 908 and made the Newarks hustle to account for the last two games.

The feature performance was that of Jack Speary, who had a mark of 256 in the last game. He started with eight straight strikes and, of course, the usual rooting for a perfect game was in order. On his ninth ball, however, though the hit appeared to be a perfect one, Speary had a wide-open split and this spoiled the chances of a 300 mark. Speary rolled 211 in the first game and had an average of 217-1. Wagner was there for 222, Billy Weingarth had 203, Dick Erler 202 and Van Ness an even 200. A. Walter rolled 215 and 212 for the Rutherfords and both Widmayer and Oakes had 212.

SPORTING NOTES

New York boxing fans have a triple treat tonight. Matt Wells will meet Young Brown, Joe Azevedo is pitted against Benny Leonard, and in the wind-up, Leach Cross will oppose Johnny Harvey.

Early betting favored Harvard in today's game against Yale. The odds were as high as three to one, with few takers.

Some of the best drivers in the country are entered in the 150-mile track race which will be run off today at Phoenix, Arizona.

Entries must be in by December 1 for the "Turkey Trot," which will be one of the star features of the Lexington racing season. The membership has been extended to ten, giving the sweepstakes affair more general interest.

The American Bowling Congress will be held at Toledo, beginning March 4, and many cities which have kept out of the big meet will enter teams.

New York's annual motor boat show will open on January 29, and as Chicago will have no show this season, the attention of power-boat enthusiasts will center at Madison Square Garden.

The bantam weight championship of England will be decided on Monday night, with Jim Berry and Young Fox as the contestants. Curley Walker, holder of the belt, has given it up, as he cannot make the weight.

P. H. S. PLAYERS TO BATTLE HOLY CROSS

Under a Different Name the Red and Blue Eleven Will Play Next Week.

After considerable dickering Manager "Doc" Doyle, of the Holy Cross Football Club, has finally succeeded in arranging a gridiron match between the much-tooted Plainfield High School warriors and the Holy Cross eleven. The fact that the High School eleven will not play under the institution's name matters little to the principals, inasmuch as Doyle has been assured that nine out of the eleven P. H. S. regulars will perform, and that two crack Westfield men will fill in the vacancies. If anything, the team that opposes Holy Cross at the Plainfield High School Reserves will be stronger than the regular combine, and a good fight will no doubt ensue.

Next Saturday afternoon has been decided upon as the date, and the game will be staged on Cricket Field. The club squad will be the strongest possible, and it goes without saying that the match will draw a record throng of football lovers.

The agitation all season for a game of this kind has been productive of much keen interest, and the hundreds of followers of both elevens will probably give vent to their enthusiasm next Saturday afternoon.

PATERSON AND JERSEY CITY BOWLERS WINNERS

Two Knights of Columbus League bowling matches were decided last night, the Jersey City five, on its own alleys, getting three games in a row from the representatives of Olive Branch Council, while the Patersons also at home, got two games out of three from the Bayley Council five of Elizabeth. The competition, in the latter match, was decidedly close and interesting. The Patersonians, with 957, won the first game by only seven pins, and the visitors, with 908, had an advantage of twelve pins in the second game. In the final and deciding struggle the Silk City five, with 862, won by two pins. There was, therefore, a difference of only twelve pins on the total for the series, the Bayleys, though they lost the odd game, being that many pins to the good. Kelleher rolled 230 for Bayley, and Hassin had 211 and 200. Corking led the Paterson team with 226.

In Jersey City the home five had an easy thing of it all the way. The only good bowling was done in the last game, when the home five had a total of 948, McAleer helping a lot with 246. The scores:

BIKE RIDERS BREAKING ALL WORLD'S RECORDS

Chicago, Nov. 20.—More world's records were tumbled in the early hours of the six-day bike race which started in the Coliseum here last night, at 8 a. m. today, after ten hours of riding, thirteen teams were tied with a score of 230 miles and one lap. The Miller-Ohrt and Madonna-Van Der Stuyft teams were one lap before the leaders. While the race was in progress investigators from the coroner's office inspected the track to determine the facts in connection with the death of Louis Keuhl, who plunged over the rim of the track to his death in an amateur race preceding the six-day grind last night.

JAMES M'NAMEE GIVEN PEN BY HIS FRIENDS

Reporters and Editors Compliment Departing Press Man.

The dreary grind of newspaper routine was interrupted for a few moments in the editorial rooms of The Press at noon today, while editors and reporters indulged in a little of that for which they eternally seek, but seldom find in their own lives—sentimentality.

Cause for the event was the going away of James J. McNamee, for four years a member of the staff of the Press, who leaves today for work in another city. His friends in and out of the Press office caught him just as he was finishing his last work for the paper, and presented him with a handsome gold mounted and engraved fountain pen, as a gift of friendship. The presentation speech was made by Tom Muir, who has been his friend and companion during Mr. McNamee's journalistic career. It was characteristic in that the embarrassed recipient of the token of esteem was not aware of the intent of the gathering until the pen was given him. He was unable to reply, except with a barely audible "Thank you," and one of the reporters remarked that it was the first blush "Mac" had been guilty of since he joined the Press staff.

Mr. McNamee is going to the Greenwich Press, Greenwich, Conn. He will be connected there with Ralph Morrow, for ten years editor of the Press, who is well known in Plainfield. Mr. McNamee will be city editor of the Greenwich paper and Plainfield people wish for him the success that his ability and personality warrant.

Those who participated in the gift and gathering were: Misses Anna Warnock, Helen A. Brynairski and Idabel Conover, and the Messrs. Thomas Muir, Carl Hood, Vincent W. Nash, Jr., Leslie R. Fort, Walter Dobbins, Frank Porter, Benjamin Berse, Jack Gaffney, Walter Firstbrook, Corra Ryno and Chauncey Coltham.

BASKETBALL AT Y. M. C. A.

Basketball followers will be given an opportunity to witness their first big morsel of the indoor game on the Y. M. C. A. court tonight, when the Association quintent lines up against the North Plainfield High School outfit as an opener for a lively winter and spring schedule.

Good players will be seen on both sides, and the game should be productive of good basketball and keen competition. The combines have always been rivals, and it goes without saying that they will fight to a finish.

BANKER GETS FIVE YEARS.

Morris, Ill., Nov. 20.—Charles D. Munday, former vice-president of the LaSalle Street Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, of which ex-United States Senator William Lorimer was president, has been found guilty of conspiring to wreck the institution. The jury fixed his punishment at five years' imprisonment.

PRINCETON PLAYERS PICK HARVARD TO WIN

Princeton, Nov. 20.—Headed by Frank Glick, the captain, the Princeton football players who met Yale and Harvard left town yesterday afternoon for Boston, where they will sit on the side lines today as the guests of the Harvard team and watch the game. Harvard should experience little difficulty in defeating the Elis if the opinions of the Princeton players are to be taken as a criterion. Nineteen players look for a victory for the Crimson, and the final scores predicted range from 20 to 0 to 10 to 0.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

C. Aubrey Smith, who has appeared in many Broadway dramatic successes, will be seen this afternoon and evening at the U. S. Astor Theatre in "John Glade's Honor," a splendid photo-drama of love and adventure. There are no vulgarities nor humor of the slapstick variety. In fact C. Aubrey Smith staunchly refuses to appear in any subject other than the type in which he always has been seen on Broadway, and which are known as "society dramas." Another dramatic star will be seen in Plainfield Monday, when William Faversham will appear for three days in $1,000,000," produced by the Metro Company. Faversham has a host of admirers in Plainfield, and it is safe to say all will turn out to view his work in this exceptional film.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Proctor's vaudeville and photoplays have drawn large crowds this week. The entertainment offered is one of the best all-around bills ever presented here. The photoplay features include Charlie Chaplin in his latest laugh-producing vehicle, "A Night in the Show." A strong dramatic photoplay entitled, "Perils of Temptation," is also presented. The vaudeville headline act, "Fun in an Actors' Boarding House," certainly lives up to its name, and vies with Chaplin in producing uproarious mirth among the patrons. The Acrobatic Arabs perform feats of skill and daring that amaze the majority of the spectators. On Monday the greatest film spectacle ever produced, "The Birth of a Nation," will begin a run of three days, and judging by the advance sale of seats, the theatre will not be large enough to accommodate the crowds who wish to witness this stupendous production. On account of the presentation of this feature, "Bazaar Night" will be postponed until a week from Wednesday when a big double "Bazaar" will be presented. Triangle plays start Monday, December 6, coming direct from the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York.

DEATH COMES TO H. C. COMPTON

Well Known Plainfielder Passes Away Suddenly at Jacksonville, Fla.

WAS ILL LONG TIME

Left Here Last Wednesday For Winter Home In the South—Was Born In This City and Always Lived Here.

Halstead C. Compton, aged 82 years, one of Plainfield's best known citizens, died suddenly on Saturday at Jacksonville, Fla., while en route to his winter home at Cromanton, that State. He was taken seriously ill on the boat and lived but a short time after reaching Jacksonville. He was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Mary Compton, and Miss Carrie Drake and Miss Rae Conger, also of this city. Arrangements were made at once to bring the body back to Plainfield by train and it is expected to reach here tonight.

Mr. Compton had been in failing health for some time and recently postponed the southern trip to last Wednesday owing to his indisposition. The party sailed on one of the Clyde Line steamers. Several days before leaving here Mr. Compton, in talking with friends, remarked that he did not know whether he would be able to stand the trip or not.

Mr. Compton was born in this city in 1833, being the son of James I. and Margaret K. Compton, who were descendants of a Colonial family. In 1800 his father purchased a large tract of farming land in the West End, extending from Grant to Clinton avenues. This has since been developed and many handsome dwellings are now located there. Mr. Compton succeeded his father in farming with considerable success, his products being considered among the finest raised in this part of the State. He was especially proud of his strawberries, which were of a choice variety and unsually large.

As a sportsman Mr. Compton was widely known throughout this and other States, and he was a familiar figure along the Jersey Coast, where in season he spent much time. He also devoted a great deal of time hunting. It was his custom to spend his winters in the South and his summers in Maine or some other New England State. He has also visited Honolulu and in recent years traveled extensively.

Mr. Compton married Miss Emma Durbrow, of New York city, who passed away a number of years ago. He was the oldest male member of the First Baptist church, having joined that church in 1844. He and his father brought their letters from the Baptist church at Samptown. He was always a regular attendant at the services when he was home and took a great deal of interest in the growth of the church. He never held public office and was never identified with any civic affairs.

There survives four children, Miss Mary Compton, who lives at home, Alfred Compton, of Princeton; Mrs. Sophia Reed, of New York, and Mrs James W. Johnson, of Spuyten Duyvil, N. Y.; also two sisters, Mrs. Catherine Manning and Mrs. Sarah Manning, of this city. Mrs. Johnson's husband is one of five brothers who are engaged in the iron business. Following the arrival of the body here arrangements will be made for the funeral.

CENSORS VIEW AND APPROVE BIRTH OF A NATION FILM

"The Birth of a Nation," which will be exhibited at Proctor's Theatre today, tomorrow and Wednesday, was privately viewed this morning by a committee appointed by Mayor Calkins, because of objections made by a few residents of the city. The picture was shown in its entirety, with all the usual effects, and held the attention of the committee for three hours. Mayor Calkins was unable to be present personally. Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett acted as chairman, the others present being Herman Schwed, Charles H. Frost, Miss Mabelle C. Phillips, Rev. J. W. P. Collier, James E. Kimball, A. C. Estes, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., Rev. John Sheridan Zelie and Leslie R. Fort.

Only one member of the committee thought that there was anything about the picture to which exception could be taken. As a result it will be shown in its entirety. The house is practically sold out for the entire engagement.

FINED FOR FAST DRIVING.

P. H. S. MINSTREL SHOW A SUCCESS

Popular Program is Enjoyed by a Large and Appreciative Audience.

The annual minstrel show of the Boys' Athletic Association of the Plainfield High School given at the High School Auditorium, Saturday night, was a success. The performance was up to the standard set in former years. Several features were introduced and were well received by the audience.

Following the opening chorus Edward Crone sang "That Alabama Jubilee," and John Hammann gave a monologue. An end song, "Aunt Skinner's Chicken Dinner," by Carlton Dunham, was followed with the singing of a ballad, "Sweet Kentucky Lady," by Monroe O'Donnell, accompanied on the guitar by John Causebrook.

Minor Trowbridge and August Franke sang a catchy duet, "Hugh McCue," and Gerald Linke scored a hit with his end song, "By Heck." "The Song of Songs," by Irving Manley, in a soprano voice, accompanied by Mrs. Charles L. Levis, was well received. The singing of "On the 7:28" by Donald Hylan brought forth hearty applause.

One of the novel features of the program was a five-minute chalk talk by Maurice Roddy, who, by his characterization of several persons in the audience, won much applause. The sketches were clever. Charles Todd gave two violin selections. The Steidle brothers gave an interesting number. One of them appeared on the stage and said that he would allow himself to be tied and locked in a cabinet and release himself in one minute. He carried out his part so far as being locked in a cabinet and immediately afterward the audience as it thought saw him walking up the aisle. When it was discovered that it was the brother there was much laughter.

Gerald Linke and Monroe O'Donnell presented a dialogue which was followed with a Spanish song and dance in which August Franke sang an amusing song, while Roddy Parvin and Robert Trowbridge interpreted the dance. What was considered the hit of the show was a song and dance skit by Leonard Lewis and Donald Hylan, the latter giving many of the latest popular songs.

LEO BERSE END MAN.

Leo Berse, of this city, was one of the end men in the ninth annual old time song festival and plantation minstrel show of the Sirius A. C., of Brooklyn, given in Ulmer Park Casino, at Bensonhurst-by-the-Sea, Saturday night. The Plainfielder's end song, "Midnight Cakewalk Ball," was one of the hits of the evening. He was assisted in his number by Miss Margaret Gerardot.

NURSES CARED FOR 1,435 PATIENTS

Association Averaged 118 Per Month During Year Just Ending.

$700 MORE IS NEEDED

Of $4,800 Necessary to Carry on the Work $4,100 has Been Subscribed—Report of Milk Station and Baby Clinic Shows Remarkable Work.

During the year which ended September 1, 1915, the Visiting Nurses Association of Plainfield and North Plainfield cared for 1,435 patients, or an average of 118 each month, according to a report just made public.

These patients required a total of 7,234 visits, of which 420 were calls made upon infants.

The most interesting part of the nurses' report is that of babies cared for at the milk station. During the year 111 came for pure milk, and only 25 of the mothers confined their interest to one trip. The prize winner made thirteen visits. The total cost of pure milk per baby was $2.61 for the year and many young lives were saved by the association.

The Nurses' Association made 98,090 school inspections during the year and made 1,882 visits to homes on school cases.

While the work of the Visiting Nurses' Association is wide and covers many fields that of caring for poor and unfortunate babies appeals most directly to an outsider.

The milk station and baby clinic is held at the King's Daughters Day Nursery and almost all the expense is

He left for Washington this morning, but expects to be able to get back in time to hear his colleague on the Board, Henry A. WOULD HAVE U. S. SUPPORT ALLIES

Prof. Courtney Langdon Condemns the Neutrality of America.

"PETTIEST OF NATIONS"

Brown University Educator Says We Will Have Nothing to Hand Down to Our Descendants But a Reputation As Vulgar Money Makers.

That the United States should give up all idea of neutrality, and as a nation become pronounced pro-Ally, was the belief expressed last night by Professor Courtney Langdon, of Brown University. He was speaking to an audience of about one hundred prominent Plainfielders at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Mellick on East Seventh street, in the interest of the local Belgian Relief Fund, and his remarks made a profound impression on his hearers. Prof. Langdon is a brother of Mrs. Frank D. Warren, of Hillside avenue.

After a thorough discussion of the reasons why in his opinion the Allies are going to eventually win the war, Professor Langdon declared that, much as he regretted to have to say it, the United States has been placed in anything but an enviable position in the eyes of the rest of the world. He declared that we have quietly sat back, taking the money of the allies, and refusing to help them in a way that our ancestors would not have stood for, and that we are rapidly losing our good name abroad, making enemies in some places and breeding scorn and contempt in oth-

He was lifted aboard the car in his drunken condition and taken to a physician's office in Bound Brook.

STOLE WATCH AND WIFE, HE CHARGES

Dunellen Man Has Boarder Arrested on Many Complaints.

IS COMMITTED TO JAIL

Runaway Couple Caught in Jersey City—Wife Says Husband Was Cruel, So She Left Him and Two Small Children With Another.

After escaping conviction on a charge of abducting another man's wife and one of larceny, Lewis Vroom was this morning found guilty of disorderly conduct in the Dunellen court and sentenced to ninety days in the New Brunswick jail.

Vroom was arrested at Jersey City, Saturday night, on complaint of George Le Matty. Mrs. Le Matty was with Vroom when he was apprehended by officers and the husband of the woman charged that they were going away to live together, leaving him and his two children, a boy of eight and a girl of seven. When a gold watch belonging to Le Matty was found on Vroom an additional charge of larceny was placed against him.

Vroom has been boarding at the Le Matty home in Dunellen for the past four months.

Early Saturday evening Vroom and the Le Matty woman, with extra clothing packed in a dress suit case which Vroom had purchased in Plainfield, Saturday afternoon, left the Le Matty home. Mr. Le Matty lost no time in enlisting the assistance of the Dunellen police. In a warrant sworn out before Judge David Campbell at 9 o'clock, he charged Vroom with having stolen his wife and gold watch.

Police headquarters was immediately abuzz with activity. Chief Mohan called up the police of Plainfield, Westfield and other places, and Marshals Tarpey, Smalley, Kepler, Sagars and Snyder were detailed to circulate among those who knew Vroom to find out if any of them had an inkling as to the couple's destination.

In the neighborhood of 9:30, Marshal Tarpey rushed into headquarters with the information that the couple had been taken in one of H. E. Nelson's taxis from the Lehigh Valley station at New Market, where they were unable to get a train, to the station of the Jersey Central at Bound Brook.

Chief Mohan immediately called up the ticket agent at Bound Brook. He was informed by the agent that a couple answering the description of the missing couple had purchased tickets for New York and had taken the 9:20 train. It was too late to intercept this train at Dunellen, so Chief Mohan called up Chief Gray at Jersey City, and they were arrested there.

In Chief Gray's office the couple gave their names as Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Willett, of Bound Brook. Confronted with their right names and the charge against Vroom, they appeared amazed and indignant.

Chief Gray then called up Chief Mohan, describing the couple. Chief Mohan told the Central Railroad chief that he had the right parties, and the local officers left for them. On his trip to Jersey City, Chief Mohan was accompanied by Marshal Kepler. The return trip was made on the train which arrived here at 2:15 in the morning.

Arraigned before Judge Von Minden yesterday morning, Vroom denied that he had stolen the watch. He said that it had been presented to him by Mrs. Le Matty on the train. As to his and Mrs. Le Matty's destination, he said that they were bound for Brooklyn. There was a story in circulation about town before noon yesterday, however, that Vroom had told a friend that he was going to Virginia. The police, however, doubt this story because the couple had only $19.43 in their possession. Of this amount Mrs. Le Matty had $11.43.

On the stand Mrs. Le Matty said that she had left her husband because he was a brute and not fit to live with. She was under a marked nervous strain during the trial and fainted twice.

The court dismissed the charge of abduction against Vroom. The charge of larceny was dismissed by Judge Von Minden this morning on the ground that the evidence was too weak to warrant an indictment by the grand jury. Instead of being set free, however, Vroom was arraigned on a charge of disorderly conduct preferred against him by Le Matty. Le Matty on the witness stand alleged that Vroom, during the time in which he had boarded at his place, had cursed him and in other ways abused him. Vroom was sent to New Brunswick for ninety days. Mrs. Le Matty was induced to return to her husband by her mother, who lives in Plainfield.

PRINCETON SHOWS IMMENSE GROWTH

Survey of Ten Years Also Indicates Increased Cost of Educating.

Princeton, Nov. 22. According to a special survey recently made for the trustees of Princeton University, that institution during the past ten years has not only doubled its investment in buildings and equipment, but at the present time is spending on its teaching staff over twice the amount spent for similar purposes a decade ago.

Ten years ago the estimated cost of Princeton's buildings was $3,238,840. Since then nineteen new structures costing $4,157,480 in all have been erected.

All of the sums expended in the erection of these structures were special contributions on the part of friends of Princeton, none of the university's invested funds nor any of the amount received from tuition fees and the usual sources of income being [illegible] building purposes.

Ten years ago Princeton had a faculty of one hundred teachers whose combined salaries amounted to $195,115 yearly. At the present time the faculty numbers one hundred and ninety-five and the budget for this teaching staff now amounts to $401,310.

This survey makes it evident that the cost of educating young men at present has mounted much more rapidly than has the number of students, the salary roll having doubled in ten years while the enrollment increased from 1,374 to 1,643, or slightly less than 20% for the decade. This increase in salaries for the teaching staff has not meant any marked increase in average salaries, a fact which the university authorities point to with regret. In the past ten years a professor's average has increased from $2,967 to $3,343, or less than 13%, while assistant professors now receive an average salary of $1,950, or only 3% more than was paid ten years ago.

The Telephone Behind the Battle

A FIELD TELEPHONE IN OPERATION IN MEXICO, COMMUNICATING WITH HEADQUARTERS A MILE AWAY.

THE great "drive" of the Allies in the West, which began on September 25, offers a most brilliant illustration of the power of the telephone as an instrument of war, is the opinion of The Telephone Review, New York, whose monthly article on the telephone in war treats of the telephone's part in the drive referred to. For four weeks before the taking of the first trenches, the artillery pounded incessantly at the enemy, and during the last sixty hours the shell fire increased in intensity till the deafening horror of the noise was beyond description.

Artillery fire is a double-edged weapon. With high explosives it demolishes the concrete trenches of the enemy, and with its inconceivable volume of sound shatters the enemy's nerves. So even the noise in this most scientific and deadly of wars is not a waste product, but an effective weapon.

Behind this artillery fire, governing its action, its intensity, its aim, we see the telephone. The first report of the great drive, with its headline, "Battle Conducted by Telephone," gave only a suggestion of the potency of the system of wires and the part they played in the concentration, the persistence and tenacity of the attacks.

For more than twenty-two hours, while the battle was in progress, General Joffre stood at his telephone, not even pausing in his work for food or drink. It was in the kitchen of an innkeeper near the front that he had taken up temporary headquarters. Before him was a large scale map which he consulted constantly as reports came to him at intervals over the telephone wire. Back over the wire went the general's orders, which were diffused by other telephone circuits till transformed into action. And the completed actions were in turn recited over the wires to General Joffre, keeping his finger thus, steadily, on the pulse of battle. From nine o'clock one morning till half past seven the next, General Joffre was at his telephone. At last, the report goes, he made certain notations on his map and then put down his pencil. "It is over," he said; "let us go take a bite."

The telephone man, could he have seen in detail the whole battle line as it was in action, would have thrilled at the realization of what his beloved instruments and wires were doing. Forward observing officers hold tiny corners on shell-swept hills, speaking constantly with their batteries in the hills behind; correcting the aim; advancing the line of fire, increasing the rapidity of the discharges. Then infantry begins to advance; the columns sweep on, the observing officer strains his eyes to catch every detail. A tremor seems to shake the advancing line at one point, the resistance here is too strong; the line breaks and falls back; the enemy try to push their advantage, but the lonely officer on the hill has already hurled his orders into the telephone and even as the broken line falls back, into its place lashes the most terrific discharge of shrapnel the war has seen. Then the big guns themselves come into action and the trenches of the enemy are blown to fragments. At last the artillery fire ceases at this spot, the line again advances, and this time it moves steadily on, into the mêlée that marks the struggle for the second line of the enemy's trenches. But on the hill above, commanding this whole section of the valley with his telescope, the officer is still watching, and when the time comes he will speak again, and again his words will be repeated by the giant guns—words translated into the guns' own tongue, which listen for no reply.

Commenting on the very recent removal of Sir Ian Hamilton from command of the English army in Gallipoli, the N. Y. Sun says editorially:

"He delights in warfare for its excitement and its opportunities for glory * * * He is a brilliant tactician and executes orders with uncommon vigor and audacity. Therefore he makes an admirable corps commander. * * * Calculation, deliberation, waiting, irk him. He is not a map and telephone general." [Italics are ours.]

The commander nowadays must be "a map and telephone" officer, for that is the way battles are fought to-day. Nothing, perhaps, has so forcefully emphasized the fact that methods of war are have been revolutionized by the telephone than this removal of a great soldier from an important command for the reason that he is not adapted to the essential method of commanding by telephone.

On the Eastern front a minor victory of the Austrians over the Russians was recently explained as being due to crossed telephone lines. At Austrian staff headquarters an officer was amazed as he picked up his telephone receiver to hear a conversation being carried on in the Russian language. He was unable to understand the language, but in an instant he had a brother officer at the telephone who could make out and take down the facts thus almost miraculously given them to learn.

An order was being given to a Russian brigadier to attack a certain Austrian position with two battalions and three companies for a flank attack. The wires being crossed evidently made the transmission very poor, for the Russians had to repeat the orders again and again. The Austrians missed nothing.

The subordinate Russian officer protested that the execution of such an order would surely result in defeat and heavy losses. His forebodings of course proved correct, since the Austrians, with this advance information were amply prepared to meet and overcome the attacking force.

About 2,000 prisoners were taken but the young officer who had protested the order was not among them. He was left on the field.

Buying for the home cannot be done wisely and economically unless the "buyer" is a student of the advertisements—no more than a store may be made prosperous without advertising.

Sometimes a store will decide to perform a real "stunt" in value-giving on some special line. You may be sure that in all such instances the ad-readers will have earliest knowledge of the details.

Did you decide, not long ago, that you could not buy some particular thing because the price was a little too high? See if the store advertisements bring to you today any interesting "news" on this question.

"I've been sorry ever since I bought it" is not the plaint of the student of the "ads"—but you've heard women say it, probably a great many times.

A store prospers in "well doing"—through the service that it renders to YOU. There is no other rule that governs.

CURIOUS FISHING CUSTOMS.

The Feast That Follows the Capture of a Turtle in Madagascar.

Some of the turtles of Madagascar are oval in form and very fat and plump; others are much thinner and flat. In order to catch them the natives go out to sea in the early morning when the ocean is very smooth and the turtles come to the surface to enjoy their morning nap. They use a kind of harpoon about twelve feet long, shod with a piece of barbed iron and attached to a strong rope a couple of hundred yards in length. The fishers approach the sleeping animal with great care, says James Sibree in "A Naturalist In Madagascar," for when it is struck it dives down immediately, and the fisherman, if he refuses to let go the rope, dives with it, so he tries to make the first blow a mortal one.

As soon as the turtle is caught the captors make for the shore, and all the people gather to share in the feast. No one is allowed to bring anything from a house to the spot. The animal must be wrenched open and cut in pieces with the knives that belong to the canoe. It must be cooked in sea water in its own shell and served in scoops or other vessels from the canoe or in pieces of turtle shell. None of the flesh can be taken into a house to be cooked or eaten there. All these and several other precautions are ancestral customs, and if they were not religiously observed the turtles would disappear, according to universal belief.

The natives of the northwest coast give a curious account of a fish that they call the hamby, which is about as long as a man's arm and as big around as a man's thigh. Its dorsal fin, they say, is like a brush, and it is smeared with a sticky liquid not unlike glue. When it catches another fish it holds it with this sticky brush, and the captive cannot get away. The people make use of this peculiarity in their own fishing. When they have caught a hamby they confine it in a light cage, which they fasten in the sea. They feed the hamby daily with cooked rice or small fish, and when they want to use it they tie a long cord around its tail and follow in a canoe. When it fastens on a fish they pull it in and seize the spoil for themselves.

GUM UNDER THE GROUND.

Quaint Old Time Account of Peru's Petroleum Fields.

Probably the first printed reference to the petroleum industry on the Pacific coast was made in 1569, when "De Las Drojas De Las Indias" appeared. It was translated in 1596 by John Frampton, in London, who gave the book the title, "Joyfullnewes Out of the New-Found World." His translation of that portion of the work relating to petroleum follows:

"Of a gumme that is taken out from under the grounde.

"In the Collao being a country of Peru, there is a Province which doth not beare any tree or Plante, because the Grounde is full of Gummes, and from this grounde the Indians take out a Licour, that serueth them to heale many diseases, and to take it out they use it in this manner.

"They make of the Earth certeyne Sesternes very greate, and set them upon timber, or Canes, and underneath they put a thing, that may receive the Licour, which commeth out of them, and they place them in the Sunne, and with the heate and strength thereof, the Gumme is melted or the licour which the Earth hath, and the Sesternes remayne without any Licour, whiche profiteth too make fire of, for in that place there are no Trees, nor anye other thing to make fire of: and it is an euill light, for its casteth out black Smoke, and an horrible smell, and for all this, seeing that they have no nother thing to make fire of, they take a paynes with it.

"The Licour whiche commeth foorth of it, profiteth for many diseases, and especially when they depende of colde, or colde causes. It taketh away anye griefe of the sayde cause, and all swellinges which come thereof: they heale with it woundes, and all euilles which the Sarana, and the Tacambaca doo heale. That whiche they sent me, is of a red colour, somewhat darke, and it hath a good smell."—Argonaut.

Reptiles' Eggs.

Reptiles' eggs are not very attractive objects. In the case of crocodiles and many kinds of tortoises they are pale colored or white and resemble those of birds in shape. But the egg of the gopher tortoise is remarkable for its complete roundness. It might well be mistaken for a golf ball. Many snakes' eggs are soft skinned, brown as to color and look for all the world like a number of new potatoes.—Scientific American.

Strictly Business.

"You say that couple lead a cat and dog life?"

"Yes."

"Too bad. Incompatibility of temper, I suppose."

"Nothing of the sort. They conduct a cat and dog hospital."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Sure Thing.

"I think I will go away somewhere," remarked the old fogy. "I need a change of climate."

"Why don't you just stick around here long enough and the change will come to you?" asked the grouch.—Spokane Review.

Easily Explained.

"Why did that young man look so cross when Mrs. Smith told him she heard he had such killing ways?"

"She told him that? Great Scott! He's a doctor!"—Baltimore American.

STRENUOUS PASTIME.

The Whip Game as Played by Natives of British Guiana.

Of all the games it has been my lot to witness the most strenuous was the whip game I saw in British Guiana. Before the game the women handed around bowls of the native drink, "paiwarie."

Then the players, men and boys, lined up in two rows facing each other. Each carried a whip ornamented with fiber tassels, those of the two end players having whistles attached.

A gentle stamping began, which gradually grew louder till the earth seemed to throb.

Shouts of "Yau au!" rang along the line, and the players waved their whips and swayed gently backward and forward as they stamped.

Presently the two end men passed down between the rows, while those lined up moved slowly in the opposite direction. In rotation the other pairs of men did likewise, and then the whistle men ran swiftly to their original places. The stamping increased in fury, and the whistlers whistled at each other in wild excitement.

They raised their whips and feigned to lash out at each other without much hurt.

The women ran up and down the rows offering their calabashes of "paiwarie," and then the real whipping began.

Two men challenged each other to a contest, and the rows retired, still stamping. The whippers, splendidly built fellows, stripped save for loin cloths, were a thrilling sight as they cautiously judged their distances, letting their whips just touch each other's legs.

Then one of them stood firmly and half turned away from the other. Immediately his whip sang through the air and came down on his opponent's calf with a crack. The victim did not flinch, but joined his whipper in a wild sort of dance.

Again and again he submitted to the lash, and then it was the other's turn. I cannot say who won—both were stoics of tremendous endurance. I would have called the bout a draw.

Then the two whippers retired to an adjoining hut, where they indulged freely in "paiwarie," and others of the challenging rows took their places in the game, which lasted until the rows were exhausted.—Temple Manning, in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

REAL ACTORS ON THE STAGE.

How They Would Seem Now if Movies Had Come First.

We can well imagine that a generation brought up exclusively on moving pictures would hail the sudden introduction of the actual performers as a great invention. So simple and logical a step would seem to them truly marvelous. At first the bodily presence of the actor might seem to them almost too oppressive, as we now feel it to be when we sit close up on a Shakespearean platform stage, but they would soon wonder why they had been so long content to blink at animated photographs.

The effect upon the actor would be most salutory. He would soon find that he was making himself laughably obvious. The astonishing calisthenics with which he has been accustomed to wring our withers would no longer serve his purpose. He would have to abandon the "irascible" look, the "revenge is sweet" look, the "jealousy" look, the "lovey dovey" look and all the other looks with which he now so impudently holds the camera in order to convey to us that he is feeling something, ah, so profoundly. He would have to unlearn all his looking glass grimaces and try to regain the natural mobility of human expression.

The historian of the drama would also give us a most instructive chapter on the emergence of the actor from the machine. He would hail it as a revolutionary step in the development of the drama, without which, in his opinion, the Hamlet that he worships would never have been possible. Knowing nothing of our pre-machine drama, he would not be tempted to draw the conclusion that with the rise and decay of moving pictures the drama has gone backward in order to go forward again.—New Republic.

Rather Hard on Father.

Among the Waiwai tribe of the Amazon basin, as among several others, the curious custom of the couvade prevails—that is, when a child is born the father takes to his hammock and remains there for a month. During this time he refrains from all strong food, and the women wait upon him as an invalid. Meantime the mother of the child goes about her work.—"Native Life in the Amazon Wilderness" in Travel.

INSTALL BOARD FOR ALL POLICE ORDERS

Official Communications Are to Be Posted for Members of Department.

In order that official orders may be easily conveyed to members of the police force, Mayor Leighton Calkins and Police Chief Kiely have installed a bulletin board at headquarters. On this board will be posted all orders of the police board and the chief. Assignments to posts, changes in orders and all official communications are to find a place on the board, and a digest of some of the more important regulations of the department will be permanently posted. All department assignments are made by the police board, but Chief Kiely has authority to deviate from these at his discretion and officials decided that there should be an official board on which all orders should be posted.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Superb mounting, flawless mechanical effects and a subtle and finished consideration for details characterizes the Metro production of "$1,000,000," with William Faversham in the leading role. William Faversham, perhaps, has more admirers in Plainfield than any other dramatic actor with the possible exception of the suave John Drew and it is safe to say that all will turn out to view his work in this splendid subject by a company which is fast forging to the front in the film world. William Faversham made his first appearance on the screen a few months ago in a Metro production but in the present feature he is said to do by far the best work he has ever accomplished.

DENIES "SPITE FENCE" STORY.

William Abbott, of this city, who, it is said erected a "spite fence" about his Broad street property in Westfield, stated today that he had placed an ordinary fence about the property to define the lines of the tract and to prevent people from throwing rubbish on it. He says that he had no intention of building a "spite fence" as reported.

"KNOW YOUR CITY" TOPIC AT ROUND TABLE CLUB MEETING

The advantages of knowing more about the city of Plainfield, and being posted so as to talk about it when away from home, were set forth in an address by Leslie R. Fort, editor of the Plainfield Daily Press, at the meeting of the Round Table Club held in the Hotel Kensington this noon. Mr. Fort read extracts from a booklet which has recently been published and widely circulated by the Plainfield newspapers to be used in soliciting advertising in the foreign field, in which the advantages of the city as a place of homes are concisely set forth.

BELGIAN RELIEF HOLD ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING

One of the most enthusiastic meetings of the Belgian Relief Committee was held this morning at the home of Mrs. Frederick Wallace during which announcement was made that the total cash on hand was $1,149.37 and that more had been pledged for the work. Two plans and three estimates were sumbitted for the portable house which the Plainfield committee is preparing to ship to Queen Elizabeth, in answer to her plea, to house one hundred orphans. Mrs. Wallace and Miss Hartridge were appointed a committee of two to choose several other members of the branch to secure the house and the furnishings.

Mrs. Wallace read an interesting letter from Mrs. Nina Duryea, who spoke in this city several weeks ago, in which she conveyed her thanks to the local committee and wished them further success in their relief work. Another letter from Linden W. Bates from Belgium, informed the committee that three million people were in need of immediate help and the want was just as great this year as last. The next meeting of the committee will probably be held on Monday morning, December 13.

NUISANCE ABATED BY THREE ARRESTS

Italians Are Fined on Complaint Made to Police by L. V. F. Randolph.

A nuisance that has been holding the minds of residents of Midway avenue, Mayor Leighton Calkins and police officials was abated this morning, it is believed, when three Italians were each fined $10 by Judge De Meza in police court on a charge of disorderly conduct.

The three men were arrested by Patrolman John Neylon Saturday night. Their arrest came after six months of vigilant watch on the part of policemen.

For months complaints have been coming into police headquarters of passersby along Midway avenue who made themselves a nuisance to residents there. The principal complainant has been L. V. F. Randolph, and the case has been taken up with the East End Civic Association. Although the Mayor and police department has been severely criticized the complaint has not been lost sight of during all this time and Saturday night the efforts of the officers were rewarded by three arrests.

SCHOOL BOARD LAUDS TEACHER'S MEMORY

Testimonials to Miss Minnie Mitchell Read at Large Funeral Service Here.

The body of Miss Minnie Mitchell, a former resident of Plainfield and daughter of Rev. J. W. Mitchell, colored, was brought to this city from Asbury Park, where her death occurred on Thursday, following a long illness. The funeral service was held in Mt. Olive Baptist church, of which her father is a former pastor, and where a capacity gathering of relatives and friends was in attendance. Rev. S. D. Conrad, pastor of the Mt. Zion M. E. church, of Asbury Park, and Rev. J. W. P. Collier, pastor of Mt. Olive church, were the officiating clergymen, assisted by Rev. E. B. Maynard, pastor of Mt. Zion M. E. church, of this city, and Rev. Mr. Johnson, assistant pastor of Mt. Olive.

During the service two testimonials as to the value and devotion of Miss Mitchell as a teacher in the Bangs Avenue School, Asbury Park, where she taught for eighteen years, were read to the gathering. One was from the Asbury Park Board of Education and the other from the Mothers' Club of the same city. Previous to the service held here, a preliminary service was held in Asbury Park, Saturday afternoon. Rev. Mr. S. D. Conrad was in charge and was assisted by Rev. A. E. Jensens, rector of St. Augustine's church. Scores of children from the Bangs Avenue School were present and sang and when the body was placed on board the train at the Asbury Park station the school children acted as an escort. The burial was made in the family plot in Hillside cemetery, the pall bearers being four brothers, John Michell, of New York; Hary Mitchell, of Detroit, Mich.; Joseph and George Mitchell, of Asbury Park; a brother-in-law, Thomas Murray, of Asbury Park, and William Grobes, of Plainfield.

The Mitchell family was one of the best known of Plainfild's colored residents, mainly through the father's long connection with the Mt. Olive church. The oldest daughter, who was Miss Maude Mitchell, was the first colored graduate of the Plainfield High School, being a member of the class of 1889. She is now the wife of Thomas Murray, principal of the Bangs Avenue School, with which he has been connected for twenty-five years. The floral tributes yesterday included a dozen set pieces, among them being contributions from the Asbury Park Board of Education and the Mothers' Club and children of the Asbury school.

BLOOD TRANSFUSION PROVES OF NO AVAIL

The condition of Louise Campbell, the eight-year-old child who has been subjected to desperate methods at Muhlenberg Hospital in order to save her life, took a sudden change for the worse last night and at two o'clock this afternoon it was stated that her death was but a matter of a few days. The little girl has undergone several blood transfusion operations under the direction of Dr. Edward Lindeman, of New York, and for a time it was believed she would recover.

The malady with which Miss Campbell has been affected is known to the medical profession as leukemia, and in nine cases out of ten proves fatal. The child's parents reside in Newark, where Mr. Campbell is general agent for the New Jersey Central.

SMITH FAILURE NOT TO HURT TRUST CO.

McCarver Committee Reports Bank in a Sound Condition.

Newark, Nov. 22.—There were practically no withdrawals today from the Federal Trust Co. of this city, of which James Smith, Jr., was president. Banking circles in that city consider that creditors of the ex-Senator are in a fair way of receiving full payment in due time. It is also learned that friends of Mr. Smith during the past week have taken up notes aggregating $400,000 that had been held by the Federal Trust Co. The Trust Company, it is said, has not lost anything by the ex-Senator's bankruptcy.

The following statement was given out this morning by the McCarter Committee after an examination that lasted two days and two nights, of the affairs of the Federal Trust Co.:

"At the request of the State and Federal officials having supervision over the banking institutions of this city, concurred in by the directors of the Federal Trust Co., we have, with the aid of competent assistants, either selected by ourselves or belonging to the State Banking Department, made an examination of the condition of the Federal Trust Co. as of the close of business Saturday, November 20 1915. We unanimously report after such examination that in our opinion the said Federal Trust Co. is in sound and safe condition, with abundant resources to meet every obligation of depositors and other creditors and to leave still remaining for the stockholders after the satisfaction of every claim the capital of $1,000,000, the surplus of $500,000 and a large amount of undivided profits."

FALLS FROM HAYMOW AND FRACTURES LEG

Lee Young, an employe of H. M Gnatz's bakery on Somerset street, is in Muhlenberg Hospital with a broken leg, the result of a fall from a hay mow in Mr. Gnatz's barn. Young had climbed to the mow to get some hay for the horses and in throwing down a fork full of hay he slipped and fell to the floor below, landing on his left leg, breaking the bone about mid-way between the knee and hip. He was hurried to the hospital, where it was found that beyond the broken bone he was not seriously injured.

BURGLARS ROB FLAT ON WEST FRONT STREET

Mrs. George Meade, of 1215 West Front street, reported to the police this morning that her flat had been entered sometime Sunday by burglars and some articles of value stolen. Captain Flynn made an investigation. He found that some jewelry and $20.50 in money had been taken from the home. There is no clue to the robbers. The total loss was about $50.

WOULD SUPPORT ALLIES

ers. We are placing ourselves in the position of having nothing to hand down to our ancestors but material prosperity and a reputation of being common vulgar money makers, said the speaker.

America is today in much more trouble than France, for example, according to the Professor. He declared that the French nation is becoming greater every week, building up for itself a name that will last forever, and rapidly forging ahead as the greatest nation in the world. It is true that they are losing men and money, but they are fighting for a principle which is worth more than all these. On the other sand, he said, the United States has become the smallest and pettiest of all the nations.

"Now what should we do?" asked the speaker. "We do not need to send an army or a navy. All that is needed is for this nation to speak a word of cheer through its government. Belgium is waiting for the healing word. 'America is with you boys, we're back of you, and are going to help you.' We should insist as a people that our government speak 'through the beak of the eagle.'

"The word is all that is needed. Not a ship or a dollar need be sent. If this government had taken such action there would have been no atrocities to report from Belgium, and no Lusitania incident. The Balkan States would not be hesitating as to what step they should take, but would have aided the Allies from the start. All that was needed was a statement by this government that the things for which Germany contends cannot eventually win unless they 'pass over our body.'" The speaker closed with a brief word in favor of preparedness.

At the beginning of his remarks Prof. Langdon said that he was often asked a very stupid question, as to when the war would end. He said that the only answer was, "when the forces engaged have settled the problem." We are on the earth to fight, as that is human nature, and victory is what all seek, whether it be a fight with arms or in some other way. He drew a lesson of the war from Homer's Iliad, and said that even today people are justified in believing that the side will win which "is favored by the Gods," as is described in that famous tale. Germany stakes all on the material things, believing that might is right. The interests represented by the other nations have trained themselves to think more of the comfort of the race, but the crisis has shown the Allies to be able to cope with the situation. England has shown herself to be in favor of freedom and fair play; France has displayed her wonderful chivalry; Italy is coming into her own, and everyone knows how little Belgium has played her part, and set the whole world in a position of indebtedness. "The allies have providentially awakened to find themselves in the trenches as guardians of the highest things."

The speaker declared that no one can be really neutral, as there is no such thing except in the form of cowardice or idiocy. Everyone favors a victory by one side or the other, and will not stand for an indecisive peace. At the same time he declared that no one wants to see all that is good in Germany defeated.

The speaker declared that this country is entirely different from those of Europe, a sort of "an elbow room for all nations." He said that no one here wanted to see any one of the contending nations blotted out as they could never be replaced by others. All that is desired is that the present "relation of Germany to the rest of the world be crushed." He declared that of recent years there has been a dilution of patriotism in this country, and that the history since 1867 has been nothing of which we can be proud. "The United States is already at war with Germany, but does not know it. We are in trouble now and five years from now you will tell me that I am right in the assertion. We are being progressively insulted in a way that our ancestors would not have stood for." He then took up the criticisms of this country previously described.

The funeral of William F. Horan, who died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Friday night, following a short illness, was held this morning from his late home, on Belvidere avenue, and later from St. Mary's church, where a mass of requiem was said by Rev. Father B. M. Bogan, pastor of the church. The body was later taken to Long Island for interment this afternoon in Calvary cemetery, that place.

PROBASCO BIBLE CLASS ELECT NEW OFFICERS

The Probasco Bible class held its first monthly meeting of the fall term Friday evening in the boys' rooms of the Y. M. C. A. with an attendance of thirty-three.

Old business was discussed and reports read. Short talks were made by Dr. Norman H. Probasco and his associate teacher, Henry Crane. The work of the past year was considered very successful and all are looking forward to an even more successful season in whatever the class endeavors to undertake.

The election of officers of the class, which always takes place at this particular meeting, resulted in the following being chosen: President, Earle B. Pierson; vice president, Benjamin M. Harris; secretary, Cedric H. Ostrom; treasurer, Harlet Lucky. Refreshments were served after adjournment and the evening was one of rare importance.

78c Yard for 15,000 Yards of Silks in Remnants

That We Have Sold at $1.25 to $5 Yard

The wholesale prices of silks have advanced 10 to 35 per cent. within the past month. And here is practically every kind of plain or fancy silk that the Wanamaker Silk Store sells at a price that it would be difficult to duplicate now at wholesale.

But these are remnants (2 to 5 yards in length) of our regular stocks—

Crepe de chine, taffeta, charmeuse, satin ritz, brocades, peau de soire, gros de londres and a variety of fancy silks; all kinds of black silks have a large representation.

Included at this new price are also 5,000 yards of other silks (remnants) which we have sold specially for 85c yard—the regular prices of which are much higher.

The entire Subway Aisle of the New Building will be given over to special tables in addition to the greatly enlarged Lower-Price Silk Store.

Tuesday, Subway Aisle, New Building.

THE DAUGHTERS OF THE MULTI-MILLIONAIRE

There was once a multi-millionaire who had two daughters. Of these, the elder was a vain, frivolous creature who thought of nothing but building orphan asylums, visiting the sick, giving alms to indigent cripples, and the like. The younger daughter was of a more serious turn of mind and devoted all her spare time to mastering the intricacies of Bridge Whist.

An impecunious nobleman from beyond the sea, hearing of the exceeding great wealth of this multi-millionaire, determined to contract a matrimonial alliance with the family. The father of the girls made no objection to the match, and it remained for the nobleman to choose between the two. As might naturally be expected, he was attracted by the lighter accomplishments of the elder daughter, rather than by the more substantial attainments of her sister. Accordingly he proposed for the hand of the former, and the engagement was announced amid great rejoicing.

About this time the country was plunged into a financial panic, in which the multi-millionaire lost all his property except what was in his wife's name. Now, the nobleman had no desire to take a penniless bride, so he promptly broke the engagement. He might have broken his fiancee's heart into the bargain had she not been so grieved over losing the means of indulging in her favorite amusements that she had no time for minor sorrows.

Meanwhile the younger daughter had left the parental roof and set up a bachelor-girl establishment of her own, where she supported herself in luxury by her earnings at the whist table. Learning of this the nobleman sought her out and laid his title and his debts at her feet. He was accepted before he had time to finish his declaration, and the wedding was celebrated with great eclat. And they lived happily ever after, or, at least, as happily as was consistent with the customs of the higher circles in which they moved.

THE REAL THING.

Stranger—Have you a good hair tonic you can recommend?

Barber (Prohibition town)—I have something that is spoken of very highly by people who have drank it.

A TEMPORARY BACKSLIDER.

Frayed Fagin—Hold on, Pard! Gim me half o' dat licker!

Weary Willy—G' chase yerself! I'm no Socialist!

Frayed Fagin—But yer wuz last week!

Weary Willy—Yes! An' I will be ag'in as soon as I finish dis licker! Go shake a da-da!

THE WAY OF IT.

Britton—You Americans have no picturesque old armor hanging in your ancestral halls?

American—Oh, no! Our pioneer forefathers, you remember, fought and conquered the British and the Indians without armor.

VERY LOW.

Dolan—I see the doctor at Casey's Anybody sick?

Kelly—Casey is. His wife's had twins again.

Reading Character

is always interesting, but a study of a tradesman's business character as indicated by his advertising is even more interesting and always profitable.

Just glance over the advertisements in the Plainfield Daily Press of the merchants whose places you know.

Does not the merchant write his store character into his advertising? Is it not possible to form a pretty good idea of the store from the manner in which it makes its announcements in the newspapers?

Merchants are coming to realize more and more that when they write an advertisement they are painting a business portrait of themselves—indicating their business character.

They are more careful in their statements, more modest in their language and pay more attention to typography and illustration.

Advertising is prepared now-a-days more carefully than ever before and there is more of it every day.

And by the same token it is going to be more interesting and profitable to the readers.

WE TAKE PLEASURE IN PLACING BEFORE YOU THIS ARRAY OF GOOD THINGS WHICH GO TO MAKE THE THANKSGIVING DINNER PERFECT, AND FEEL CERTAIN THAT YOU WILL BE PLEASED WITH ANY SELECTION YOU MAY MAKE, KNOWING THAT WE HAVE PROCURED ONLY THE FINEST OF THESE GOODS, THEREBY ASSURING YOU OF PERFECT SATISFACTION.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

RETURN OF THE PILGRIMS.

Governor Fielder and State Chairman Grosscup have had their interview with the President and returned to New Jersey and business goes on here the same as usual. Just what they told the President and just what he told them in return is locked within the confines of their respective breasts, but thus far the much-advertised labor has not brought forth even the smallest specimen of a mouse.

No doubt they informed the President that the Democratic party in this State was lamentably lacking in available Gubernatorial and Senatorial candidates, but this was stale news to Mr. Wilson. No man in the country is more fully aware of his party's deficiencies in this respect. He knows the New Jersey Democratic leaders, and is well aware how few of them are of statesman size. And if they hoped that he would suggest the names of candidates who measure up to the requirements they were probably disappointed.

We imagine that while President Wilson is deeply solicitous for the success of his party in his own State he prefers to keep his hands off the preliminary struggle for nomination unless the unwise ambition of some heretofore discredited candidates shall compel him to a display of consistency. New Jersey Democrats should remember that the President is no longer a State party leader to be run to for counsel and command in every exigency. If there is not enough fairness, wisdom and unselfishness among those to whom the rank and file of the party look for leadership, to present a ticket that commends itself to public confidence, the President cannot be expected to supply these deficiencies, and it certainly is not his fault that there is such a sad lack of available candidates.

The state party leaders will earn more respect by solving their problems as best they can than by trying to shift the burden to the already heavily weighted shoulders of the President.—Newark Evening News.

LITERARY

THE PIED PIPER OF POLITICS

"The party system of British politics is the one corrupt thing in the Constitution of that nation. The House of Commons has become the happy hunting-ground of a dozen great families, whose members pass into it from time to time by the same right that men pass into the business firm of their fathers. They are all partners in a great swindle, and their clerks and henchmen, hired from the law, the universities, the factories and the streets vary only as their masters see fit. Those masters nearly equally divided on both sides of the House, agree from time to time to the reins of office, paying themselves large salaries, large pensions, giving places only to those men who have been most obsequious and most eagerly dishonest. They juggle with the votes of the country, with their tongues in their cheeks. They are past-masters in card-sharping and the three-card trick. There is not one man among them with the faintest gleam of imagination, patriotism or understanding of the characteristics and spirit of the race whom they bluff by inheritance. Yes, there is one—the Mark Antony of the House of Commons, the little Celtic man whose name is Lloyd George, who possesses the three gifts that go to the making of a great charlatan—a pair of wonderful eyes, a sense of impish humor and that touch of exaltation which stirs men to hysteria. He is the Pied Piper of politics, the man whose little flute can draw from their dark places the laboring parties of the Union Kingdom. He is the great democrat who has organized a bureaucracy more autocratic than anything in Russia. He is the king of charlatans."—Cosmo Hamilton, in the December Century.

LOCAL MAN LEAVES FOR FORMER HOME

George H. Aldridge May Join His Old Regiment at Montreal, Canada.

George H. Aldridge, of Grant avenue, who has been a local resident for the past five years, and who in that time has made a host of friends throughout the city, left Saturday afternoon for his former home in Montreal, Canada. It is possible that on reaching the Canadian city Mr. Aldridge will join his old regiment, the First Grenadier Guards, one of the crack military organizations of the dominion. It was originally known as the Prince of Wales Fusileers, and Mr. Aldridge was connected with it for seven years. In the event of his rejoining, it is quite likely that he will go to the front in Europe, as this regiment has been doing great work in the field since the present war began. Mr. Aldridge's father is doing duty as a member of the Canadian Home Guard and a brother is on the firing line in France.

In order to extend a formal farewell, the members of the Plainfield Association Football Club gave Mr. Aldridge a rousing send off at the club's headquarters on South Second street, Friday night. He was active in the club until about seven months ago. There were numerous songs of "Auld Lang Syne" at the finish and many speeches containing expressions of good-will. To all of them, Mr. Aldridge responded with Aldridge a rousing sendoff at the a happy vein. He will leave Plain- of all his acquaintances and the hope that he may return.

A CHALLENGE TO LIQUOR.

By far the most interesting, if not daring, step yet taken by the Anti-Saloon League in New Jersey is its challenge to the New Jersey Federation of Liquor Interests for a debate on Local Option, the challenge including a suggestion that there be a series to include the various cities of the State, Newark, Trenton, Camden, Atlantic City and Paterson. The text of the question suggested for debate is:

"Resolved, That local option as advocated by the Anti-Saloon League of New Jersey is American in principle, and a just, effective and democratic method for handling the traffic in intoxicating beverages."

The challenge gives elasticity to the extent of suggesting that "if the phrasing of the question seems to you to be inadequate or unfair, we shall be pleased to receive suggestions as to a better statement, from your standpoint, of the matter at issue."

The Hudson Dispatch says that if the series of debates should take place, they would rival in interest, even though confined to New Jersey, the famous Lincoln-Douglas political debates which our grandfathers heard back in the fifties, for certainly the liquor issue is now more burning than ever before.

What will the liquor men's answer be to the challenge?

A MODERN REFORMER.

The vagaries of the prohbition mind are shown in results from the Tennessee Senatorial preferential primary of Saturday. Malcolm R. Patterson is leading over Congressman McKellar and Senator Luke Lea. This Patteron is the same man who was twice elected Governor of Tennessee by a whisky vote, who was implicated in the murder of U. S. Senator Edward Ward Carmack, when that illustrious son of the South was shot down on the streets of Nashville, and then, to assert his independence, Governor Patterson pardoned both the Coopers after they had been sentenced to 20 years for killing Carmack. Immediately after leaving the capitol "Ham" Patterson was arrested in a police raid in Nashville and found guilty of drunkenness. He then reformed, "got religion," as old Bob Taylor would say, and turned lecturer for the Anti-Saloon League, and the voters have rewarded his reformation by elevating him to the highest office within their gift, unless a Republican beats him in the run off. Reformers work in wondrous ways.

You are able to take care of your baby, but how about that poor little creature in the next block? The Visiting Nurses' Association will give it life for a year and strength for all time for $2.61. Is it worth your thought?

Cries of "Shoot the President" followed an address by John Brisben Walker in New York Thursday night. And yet the men who talked loudest and fiercest would be the last to enlist should we go to war.

They are threatening to arrest any man who kisses his wife in Jersey City, under ancient blue laws that have been revived. We have always been against so-called blue laws as fool legislation, but——.

Now that Jim McNamee has left the New Jersey Central stockholders may expect a reduction in their annual dividend.

If the Yale bulldog's tail hadn't been cropped for appearance sake, we know where it could be found this morning.

Looking at war pictures is a timely amusement for American people for the few days before Thanksgiving.
